Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Just how a deal was made by the Government's big pawn-broker—the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—when it swapped off control of Harley L. Clarke's huge utility holding company is a matter of speculation in financial circles.
Clarke was in high spirits as he discussed the matter with the Post-Dispatch correspondent, saying it was a great relief to be out from under the thumb of the Government's "Jesse James." For weeks before the settlement he had been making desperate efforts to reduce his utility system, of which Laclede Gas Light Co. of St. Louis is a unit, from the grasp of the Federal Government's money lender.

Analysis of the facts shows why the taxpayer might not view the deal with quite the same satisfaction that both Clarke and Jesse James, RFC chairman, seem to find in it. Readers of the Post-Dispatch are familiar with how Uncle Sam, potentially at least, became the gas man in St. Louis through efforts of the RFC to collect some of the public funds it had turned to the old Dawes bank in Chicago.

History of Loan.
The loan by RFC to the Dawes bank was $90,000,000. That bank had made a loan of $2,000,000 to Harley Clarke's Webster Corporation, for which it held the notes of that company. The collateral for this Webster Corporation loan was common stock of Utilities Securities Corporation (Pusco), a strategic unit in the system. Clarke made several visits to Washington to try to redeem his holdings, but was told by Jones that he would have to "put the money on the hard head," for the notes and interest, aggregating $2,260,000.

Forty-Eight Cents on the Dollar.
It develops, however, that instead of getting cash in full for this debt, the RFC accepted at par value a like amount of debentures of Utilities Power & Light Corporation, having a present market value of about 48 cents on the dollar. The cash value of the Government got, then, is present less than half the amount owed to it, but is subject to increase or decrease as markets fluctuate.

The RFC has surrendered its control over the companies, which would have enabled it to operate and manage them as a means toward full recovery of the money due this public institution, and has accepted instead the unsecured promissory notes of the principal utility holding company. These notes, properly described as debentures, are sometimes improperly called bonds. They are not secured by mortgage of any physical assets and so have only the status of promissory notes.

The Utilities Power & Light Corporation has $50,000,000 of these debentures outstanding, $38,000,000 bearing 5 per cent interest and $12,000,000 bearing 5 1/2 per cent.
The amount now owned by the RFC is only a little more than one-twenty-fifth of the notes outstanding.

Sale to Atlas Corporation.
Jones announced in Washington about two weeks ago that the RFC had sold the Clarke Webster Corporation notes to the Atlas Corporation of New York, receiving in payment an equal amount at face value of the Utilities Power & Light 5 per cent debentures. Al-

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 27.— Barney Wilkes, 21 years old, almost aware that his father had succumbed in a boating accident, was rescued eight miles off Santa Catalina Island today as he clung to the body of the parent, Dr. Alfred L. Wilkes, dentist.

The younger Wilkes was in a serious condition, suffering from exhaustion after holding to his father through the night after the 16-foot boat in which they left San Pedro last night overturned.
Capt. H. Soka of the Purse Seiner Excellence found the young man, atop the overturned boat.

Wilkes said he had put a life preserver around his body and that of his unconscious father and tried desperately to keep the elder man's head above water.

"I thought help would never come," he said. "My fingers almost gave out several times, but I just couldn't let Dad go, because he was hurt badly by those propeller blades."

STOCKHOLM, July 27.—Red-haired people are the most susceptible to skin cancer, and sunburn is the most common external cause, deduces Dr. Volfgang Magnusson of the Swedish Radium Home.

Dr. Magnusson has checked the 1611 cases of skin cancer treated at the Radium Home during the past 20 years.

Ordinary burns, freezing and chemical injuries, as well as defects in the skin, are among the other common causes of the disease, but malignant tumors are more frequent on those parts of the face usually exposed to sunburns, Dr. Magnusson found.

for Others.Auditors employed by the County Court are investigating loans of $301,675 from St. Louis County capital school funds, most of which was lent by former courts to politicians and their relatives, and $120,000 of which is delinquent.

A grand jury investigation of conditions in the offices of County Clerk Walter E. Miller and Collector Willis W. Benson is to be made as the result of a partial report returned Friday by the auditors, referring to apparent discrepancies of about $19,000 in accounts of the two offices.

As of last Jan. 15, 30 of the 76 school loans were delinquent, interest for periods of from one to seven years, amounting to $18,869, being unpaid.

Origin of School Fund.
Capital school funds were derived from the sale of school lands many years ago and increased by certain fines. They are supervised by the County Court which is authorized to make loans on real estate within the county, distributing the income to the various school districts. These loans are secured by a mortgage on the property, the value of which must be double the amount of the loan, and in addition, by security bonds from the owners of real estate in the county worth at least the amount of the loan.

In the past, capital school funds have provided a convenient source of capital for politicians, their relatives and friends. Whereas banks charged 8 per cent interest and required a reduction of principal, County Courts have been content to lend the money at 6 per cent and, as a rule, have not bothered greatly about delinquencies and not at all about principal payments if the interest was paid.

Borrowers as Sureties.
Although Section 9244 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri provides that no loan from the capital school fund shall be made to any officer of the county or his deputy and that such persons shall not be accepted as securities, the loan record bears the names of many recipients. Presumably such loans were made when they were not county officers.

In several instances persons who had obtained loans signed as security for one or more other persons obtaining loans. Some persons who had signed as securities had died and no substitute had been demanded.

Largest Sum Due Is $16,500.
Largest of the delinquent loans was a balance of $16,500 on a $16,770 loan made four years ago to Paul Kammerer when he bought 39 acres of land from a corporation organized by former County Highway Engineer Ray Jablonsky, and Albert and Charles Autenrieth, members of an old St. Louis County family, long identified with Republican politics. The corporation, formed to deal in real estate while Jablonsky was County Engineer, organized with the property representing its capital and sold it after collecting $1377 for a right-of-way for State Highway 77.

Kammerer, part owner of a tavern on Clayton road which was the frequent meeting place of Jablonsky and members of former County Courts, paid $270 on the principal but three years' interest amounting to $2974 is delinquent. Taxes for the last year had not been paid.

Loans to Officials.
Former State Representative
George T. Hege obtained a $3000 loan Jan. 26, 1932, and had paid no interest. Taxes for two years were delinquent.

A $5500 loan was made to County
Jailer Elmer J. Heinrich Oct. 10, 1932, and he likewise had paid no interest and owed taxes for three years. His securities were former County Judge James S. Gardner and former Sheriff Albert A. Wilson.

Theodore Bopp, Kirkwood city building commissioner and uncle of Election Commissioner Peter C.
Bopp, owed two years' interest on a $3000 loan.

League's Hands Tied by Mussolini,

FOR WEDNESDAYMussolini Wants Only Bor-

Awaiting Reply From Emperor Haile Selassie.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, July 27.—Despite indications that Rome would be represented, fears were expressed tonight that Italy might bolt the extraordinary session of the League of Nations Council, called for Wednesday, if the Council orders a general investigation of the Italian-Ethiopian conflict, which Ethiopia has requested.

Secretary-General J. A. C. Avenol of the League, after telephone calls to Rome and careful study of two Italian notes, said he was unable to determine definitely whether or not Italian representatives would attend the session.

Nevertheless he advised Maxim Litvinoff, president of the Council, to call the meeting, and Litvinoff did so.

Italians said the Italian notes contained reservations designed to restrict the Council's agenda. It appeared to them, they said, that Italy wanted only arbitration or border disorders discussed, and that even this was to be contingent on a satisfactory reply to a note Italy has sent to Ethiopia.

Italian Reservation.
A telegram to Avenol said Italy would not "have any difficulty in participating in the session" if its work were confined solely to "studying the most opportune means of placing the commission of conciliation and arbitration in position to resume its labors."

(The Italian-Ethiopian commission, advised at Scheveningen, the Netherlands, when members could not agree on proper topics for discussion, Ethiopia wanted frontier issues handled. Italy refused. This week Rome proposed to Addis Ababa its revival. Though Ethiopia has not replied officially, she is known to be insisting on discussion of territorial questions.)

The note limited the council's discussion, in effect, to the frontier clash at Ualul last December, in which 30 Italians and 110 Ethiopians were killed. That was the same limitation Rome insisted on set on the work of the Conciliation Commission.

Questions in Rome's Reply.
Mussolini himself was reported to have written the Italian reply to the league's overtures. It asked two questions:

Will the council discuss the Ualul hour clash, they said, as a mixed conciliation commission's arbitration efforts?

Will the agenda be based on other matters and, if so, what?

In case the discussion involves problems other than the operations of the mixed commission, Italy reserved the right "to make known her viewpoints."

Avenol's reply assured the Italian Premier he would put his communication on the agenda of the session.
He said that he would forward promptly to come any communication the League of Nations received from Ethiopia.

League officials explained they were unable to give Mussolini any assurance the council would limit its activities to an attempt to revive the arbitration commission.
Only the council itself, they said, can pass on what shall be discussed and what aspects of the situation shall be passed over at this time.

Five Treaties Involved.
League quarters pointed out that Italian aggression in Ethiopia would be a violation of five international agreements. These are the covenant of the league itself, the Kellogg pact, the Italian-Ethiopian treaty of 1928, the Anglo-French-Italian treaty of 1906 and the Rio de Janeiro anti-war pact. To all of these Italy adhered.Man Leaps Out Train Window,

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 27.—The official press service announced today Germany considered its commercial treaty with America terminated.

The press service communique said the treaty was broken by the action of Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York in refusing to license a German resident there as a masseur because of alleged anti-Jewish acts by the Nazis.

"This constitutes a clear breach of the German-American friendship, commercial and consular treaty of Dec. 8, 1923," the communique said. "It is up to the American Federal Government to give instructions to officials concerned to observe the treaty."

Officials here said no diplomatic steps had been taken in the matter, but hoped the communique would "be read by responsible authorities in America."

The German press also today called for diplomatic action and an apology from the United States because the Nazi flag was torn from the hoist of the liner Bremen in New York last night.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung carried an editorial in which it asserted the Bremen had been attacked according to a well prepared plan of Communists known to police who were impotent to protect the steamer.

A picture of an arrested woman, supposed to be Jewish, appeared in the Nazi paper Der Angriff. It was captioned: "Rebecca arrested in Washington." Below was "Notice her face!" It is unmistakably of the race of La Guardia, New York's burgomaster.

The Boersen Zeitung hinted that Moscow was behind the incident.

Seven Arraigned in New York for Attack on the Bremen.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Seven men were arraigned in West Side Court today on charges of participating in a riotous Communist demonstration at the sailing of the North German Lloyd liner Bremen last night. Two others, one suffering from bullet wounds, are under arrest in hospitals.

Among the prisoners arraigned today was Robert Rhodes, 19, who said he was the son of Elmer Rice, playwright. Others included Joseph Wilson, 23, a student; Tony Alvis, 38; George Blackwell, 24; William E. Howe, 27; William Bailey, 25, and William McGovern, 28. Some were paroled and others were held under bond for hearings later.

The Nazi swastika was torn from the Bremen's bow mast and flung into the North River by demonstrators. It was retrieved from the river before the Bremen sailed.

Many persons included several prominent, injured in the melee along the waterfront at the Bremen's West Forty-sixth street pier and aboard the vessel itself.

Edward Droleite, 34, described by police as the ringleader, was shot twice in the body on the deck of the Bremen.

Police officials informed the North German Lloyd 10 hours before the Bremen's sailing time that a Communist demonstration was planned, police said, and advised against the sale of tickets entitling visitors to board the vessel. Visitors' tickets were sold as usual, however.

Wilbur J. Carr, Acting Secretary of State, in a statement to newspaper men at Washington, expressed regret at the incident.

LONDON, July 27.—The London Passenger Transport Board, con-told 2597 striking bus drivers and conductors in suburban London to return to work by Monday or face dismissal.

Union officers, who said the strike was called without their au-by extremists. They warned union members against "insidious methods of unauthorized and irresponsible persons."

Five hundred sixty busses were halted by the strike. The men termed the transport board a "soulless machine," were busy tryto quit. The strikers were demand-working schedules.

VARESE, Italy, July 27.—At least 33 persons were killed and 17 injured today when the Bickford-Smith munitions factory at Taino blew up. A terrific explosion, followed by lesser ones, shook villages and broke windows for miles around.

The check on casualties was incomplete late tonight. Officials said more bodies probably would be found in the ruins. The search of the debris was halted because of the danger of other explosions.
First estimates were that 50 or more persons had been killed.

Factory officers and municipal officials refused to answer questions concerning the explosion. Villagers, however, expressed the opinion the first explosion occurred in the packing warehouse. They said many girls were working in that building.

A thick concrete wall apparently prevented destruction of the entire factory. The wall separated the shipping section, which was blown to pieces, from the remainder of the plant.

The families of the approximately 500 employees of the plant stood waiting on the outskirts of the factory grounds until late at night.
Squadrons of Fascist militia were rushed to the scene.

A heavy pall of smoke and dust obscured the immediate vicinity.
Firemen from surrounding towns and cities patrolled the grounds.

A provisional infirmary was set up by Red Cross doctors and nurses to care for the wounded and dying brought in by searchers.

Since its recent inclusion in the corporate state, the factory has been known as the plant of the General Italian Explosive Society and has been engaged in stimulated production of explosive materials for possible use in East Africa.

POLITICAL TRADING IN VIRGIN ISLANDS FIASCO ASSAILED

Senator Vandenberg Attacks Parole Board Ouster to Make Room for Ex-Judge Wilson.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF FARLEY'S TACTICS

It Was This Sort of Deal Which Amos Pinchot Condemned in Letter to Prof. Frankfurter.

By RAYMOND F. BRANDT, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The opposing forces within the Roosevelt administration were curiously exemplified this week when, by one of those unexplainable quirks of timing, the name of Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School, one of the President's intimate advisers, cropped up several times in the important news.

Among the so-called liberal supporters of the New Deal, the open letter of Amos Pinchot of New York to the Harvard professor was of significance. It reflected the attitude of many of the high-minded—and perhaps impractical—supporters of the President's program "for the more abundant life" who in and out of Washington are working for better economic, social and political conditions. And by a curious coincidence, Pinchot's attack on Postmaster-General-Democratic Chairman Farley's tactics was pointedly illustrated by the ousting of Dr. Amy N. Stannard, psychiatric expert and non-political appointee, from the Federal Parole Board to make room for T. Webster Wilson, former Congressman from Mississippi, and Federal Judge for the Virgin Islands.

Protege of Pat Harrison. Wilson is a protege of Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee, who faces a hard fight for re-nomination next year. He was given the Parole Board position to get the administration out of the hole in the Virgin Islands fiasco which saw Gov. Paul Pearson, supported by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, fighting Attorney-General Cummings, Senator Tydings and Wilson. Pearson was given a newly created job in the Public Works Administration. Dr. Stannard was sacrificed to make way for Harrison's political friend.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Rep., Massachusetts), declared that Miss Stannard's resignation had "debauched the Civil Service." Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Michigan), criticized the dismissal as "a dangerous infringement." But when he had to find a job for a Mississippi politician, Cummings put a man with a political background on the Federal Parole Board.

President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday washed his hands of the whole deal. Asked whether he had been consulted on the ousting of Dr. Stannard, the President shook his head and told the inquirer to ask Attorney-General Cummings about it. When the reporter replied that the Cummings explanation had been "very weak," the President threw back his head and chuckled.

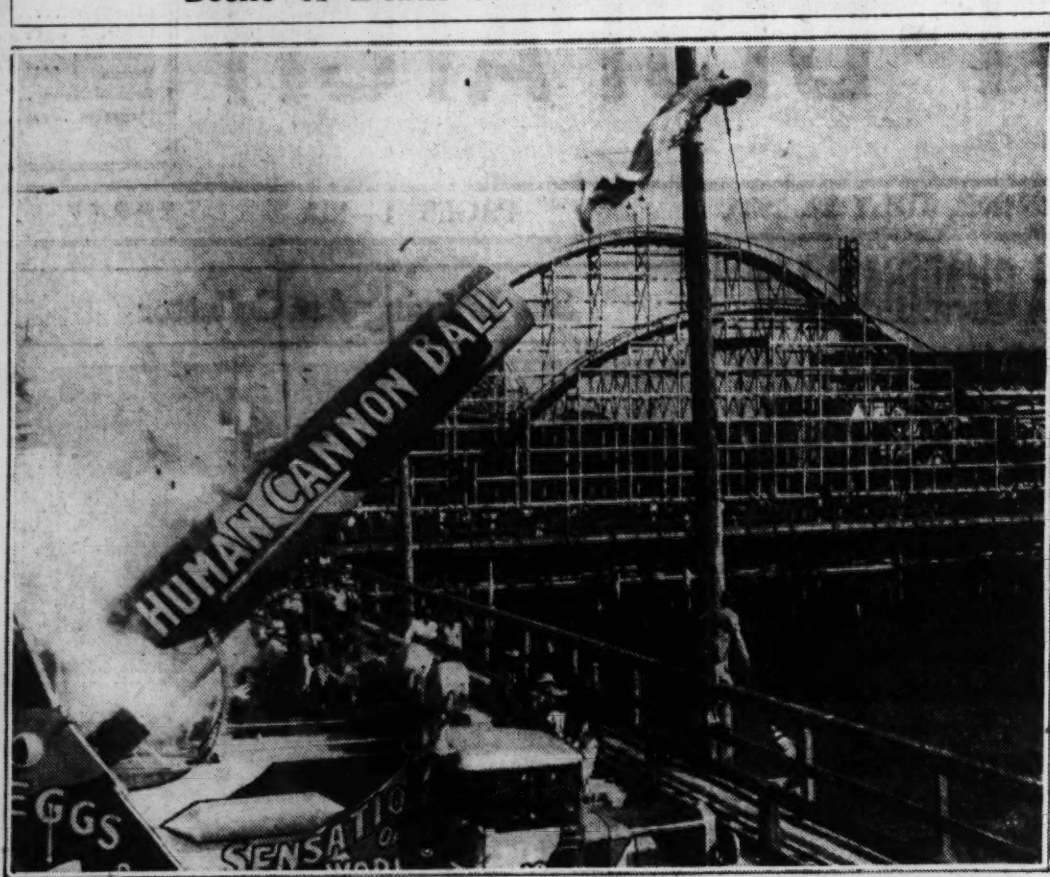

In their anti-crime campaign, Cummings and J. Edgar Hoover have severely criticized the appointment of politicians to State parole boards. But when he had to find a job for a Mississippi politician, Cummings put a man with a political background on the Federal Parole Board.

Comment by Vandenberg. Senator Vandenberg said that he did not know Judge Wilson or his qualifications for the parole board. "If he was not good enough for the Virgin Islands," Vandenberg said, "I don't know by what reason he is qualified for the Federal Parole Board. Apparently there is a result of a straight political trade. No matter how good he may be, the ousting of a non-political expert to make a place for one of the beneficiaries of a political trade is dangerous infringement of the principle on which the board was organized and to which it must adhere if we are to have a satisfactory parole system."

It was this sort of political trading which Pinchot referred when he said in his letter to Frankfurter, "He (President Roosevelt) tries to set up a managed economy which is impossible without a fire, highly trained and non-political civil service, but lets Farley smash the civil service whenever it is necessary to strengthen his political machine."

Tax Setback for Frankfurter. The second point at which Frankfurter came into the week's news was the rejection by the House Ways and Means Committee Democrats of President Roosevelt's recommendation to "tax bigness" by levying higher taxes on the largest corporations. Frankfurter was a guest at the White House for several days prior to the President's tax message. In that message, which was a reflection of the Brandeis-Frankfurter tax and social philosophy, the President, among other things, recommended graduated taxes on net incomes of corporations starting at 10% per cent for small corporations and increasing to 16% per cent for large companies in place of the present flat rate of 13% per cent on net incomes of all corporations.

When the Senate Finance Committee tried to rush through the President's recommendations as a "rider" to the nuisance tax joint resolution, this recommendation was included with minor changes. The Democrats of the House Ways and Means Committee, however, virtually rejected it by calling for a spread of only 1 per cent—between 13% and 14% per cent, and on their own motion called for an excess profits tax to be applied to all corporations.

By approving an excess profits tax, the House Democrats went against the Brandeis-Frankfurter reasoning that smaller companies are more efficient than larger companies. If this reasoning holds in general, the smaller, more efficient corporations would be penalized through higher taxation.

Schedules Only Tentative. The schedules made public this week by the Ways and Means Committee Democrats are only tentative and may be changed by the whole committee. The Senate Finance Committee will write its own schedules and the real bill will be written in the conference between the Senate and the House. For the time being, however, one of the cardinal points of the Frankfurter tax philosophy has been rejected by the House Democrats.

This, however, was not the only rebuff to Prof. Frankfurter. It became definitely known this week that the Harvard professor had protested in vain to the President on the transfer of John Dickinson from Assistant Secretary of Commerce to Assistant Attorney-General in charge of anti-trust prosecution. This protest was in line with the Frankfurter disbelief in "bigness." Frankfurter, the principle of his school objected to the Dickinson promotion, arguing that as Assistant Secretary of Commerce Dickinson had looked favorably on large business combinations. The President sent the nomination to the Senate despite the Frankfurter protests, and it was confirmed last week without opposition.

Frankfurter in News Again. Frankfurter was brought into the news a fourth time by one of his disciples, Ben Cohen, nominally an attorney in the Interior Department, but actually one of the President's liaison men at the Capitol and a collaborator on the Administration's public utilities holding company bill. Whether Cohen should be allowed to attend the Senate and House conference on the holding company bill was the issue. The Senate conferees, headed by Chairman Wheeler of the Interstate Commerce Committee, and two members of the House Committee, insisted that Cohen be permitted to sit in the conference as an expert adviser. Three members of the House Committee, including Representative Huddleston (Dem., Alabama), vehemently declared that they would not attend the conferences if Cohen remained in the room. This created a deadlock.

The objections of Huddleston and the two conferees on the principle of the "death sentence" provision of the holding company bill are not entirely displeasing to Chairman Wheeler and Rayburn. They are looking to the Black Lobby Investigation Committee for support. The disclosures about the votes already have won the support of the House administration leaders, and if Senator Black can unearth a few more witnesses like those brought down from Pennsylvania or pile up a total of several million dollars spent by the utilities against the administration proposals, the stalling over Cohen's presence in the conference room will have proved a clever strategy. The three House conferees may find out that they are defeating their own purposes by taking the position that an executive official should not interfere with the legislative process.

SUBSTITUTE 'HUMAN CANNONBALL' KILLED

Youth Loses Life in First Attempt to Perform Feat at Ocean Park, Cal.

By the Associated Press.

OCEAN PARK, Cal., July 27.—An inquest was set today for next Tuesday for William C. Miller, 22 years old, of Newtonville, Mass., who was hurled more than 125 feet to death in the ocean in his first attempt to be a "human cannonball."

His body was recovered today from beneath a pier near which he was propelled from an amusement park "cannon" by compressed air yesterday.

Police ordered the "cannonball" performances suspended. Police said they had learned Miller, who was in California on a vacation, had been attending Tufts College and had planned to enroll this fall at Duke University. He had been living with his uncle, Edwin T. Hammell, in Newtonville, Mass. His mother, Mrs. Methe Miller, resides in Long Island City, N. Y.

Capt. Cliff Gregg, manager of the act, said Miller had asked him for an opportunity to be shot out of the cannon. Gregg said the youth told him he was an experienced diver and had engaged in similar work in New York. Friends of Miller, however, declared he was merely seeking a thrill.

COMPTROLLER-GENERAL M'CARL WITH PRESIDENT ON CRUISE

Official Mentioned for G. O. P. Nomination in 1936, Among Guests on Yacht.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 27.—President Roosevelt has as guests on a week-end cruise down Chesapeake Bay Comptroller-General McCarl and Henry Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

The President made no announcement of his week-end plans when the Government yacht Sequoia steamed away except to say he hoped to do some fishing, and be back in the White House Sunday night.

Only recently McCarl and the Navy were engaged in a bitter controversy over travel allowances for dependents of naval officers ordered home to retire.

McCarl, a Republican, who was secretary to Senator Norris (Rep., Nebraska), when named Comptroller-General in the first year of the Harding administration, recently clashed with both Norris and the administration over TVA expenditures.

Before Nebraskaans started "McCarl for President" clubs last spring, McCarl also had rejected housing programs for Harry L. Hopkins; refused to pay for a shower bath installed by Secretary Morgenthau; refused to pay Gen. Pershing's Pullman fare without receipts; refused to install a water cooler for the Supreme Court, and made Rexford Guy Tugwell, rural resettlement director, pay the difference between airplane and railroad fare on a Florida trip.

Other guests of the President included Mrs. McCarl, Miss Margaret Lehand and Miss Grace Tully, personal secretary.

FEAR AT GENEVA ITALY WILL BOLT LEAGUE SESSION

They asserted, had thrown cold water on any remaining hope that the controversy could be settled peacefully.

Italy has received no answer to a request that Ethiopia say whether or not it is willing to revive the conciliation commission.

Lavoro Fascista, authoritative newspaper, was among the first to point out the quandary in which Italy's note places the League.

"The July 31 council will only have to take note of the fact that the Ethiopian delegates have prevented the arbitration commission from fulfilling its task," the newspaper said, and that the fifth (neutral) arbitrator has still to be nominated in order to continue arbitration on the basis of the compromise reached at Geneva in May.

"In other words, the Council itself will have nothing to do but to adjourn until Aug. 25 (the final date set by the Council for the full commission office to complete its work, or announce its failure)."

Informed quarters said that Ethiopia's reply to the Italian query would not affect Italy's representation at the start of the Council session. If the answer is "yes," Italy can tell the Council its labors are unnecessary since the conciliation commission will meet again. If the answer is "no," Italy can still object to the Council's appointment of the fifth, neutral arbitrator before termination of the period set by the Council.

War or Peace Now Up to League, Emperor Haile Selassie Says.

By the Associated Press.

ADDIS ABABA, July 27.—Emperor Haile Selassie authorized a written statement today to the effect that the problem of war or peace in Africa is now squarely up to the League of Nations. Ethiopia, he said, is seeking a peaceful settlement. Italy, he insisted, is the aggressor, and the League must decide whether one of its members can violate another's integrity.

"The essential basis of the dispute," his statement said, "is in the interpretation of the Italo-Ethiopian treaty of 1908 referring to Somali frontiers. The Covenant of the League of Nations considers arbitration necessary in a dispute over the interpretation of a treaty."

The Emperor denied Italy's action in sending two Italians to serve on the joint commission which failed to function at Scheveningen. The Ethiopians were represented by neutral personalities, he said. The Italian procedure, the statement said, made a peaceful and impartial settlement impossible and League action necessary.

ST. LOUISANS GET BACK MONEY LENT IRELAND

About $50,000 Raised Here in 1919 and 1920 Being Repaid With 25 Pct. Interest.

St. Louisans of Irish descent who lent money to Republican leaders in Ireland in 1919 and 1920 when the Sinn Fein movement was at its height began receiving checks yesterday marking the second and final payment on the loans. The loans are being repaid in full plus 25 per cent interest.

One of the first to receive a check was Dr. R. Emmett Kane, who was chairman of the committee in St. Louis which raised the funds. Dr. Kane got a check for $335, representing the balance of a $500 loan and $125 interest.

With the check came a letter from Eamon de Valera, president of the executive council of the Irish Free State, expressing thanks "for the loan and for the interest shown in the Irish cause. Others who subscribed money at the time were Archbishop Glennon, Judge O'Neill Ryan, and Patrick Flood, retired merchant. Dr. Kane said about $50,000 was subscribed in St. Louis.

De Valera came over to the United States to start the campaign to raise the money. About $6,000,000 was collected in all, but about $2,500,000 was tied up in litigation and later returned to the subscribers.

The money was really a gift and Irish officials have estimated that about one-fourth of the subscribers have thrown away their "bonds," thinking they would not be repaid. When full repayment was announced this spring, Michael Mac White, Irish minister to the United States, said with pride at St. Patrick's Day dinner that although there was no legal obligation, the money was being repaid. "Ireland only pledged the honor of her people," he said, "and I am proud to say that that pledge is being redeemed."

HOPKINS' UNIT PLANS PRIVATE JOBS DRIVE

Will Seek to Get Work, Even If Temporary, for Those On Relief.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The Works Progress Administration of Harry L. Hopkins today contemplated a nation-wide campaign to stimulate the supply of private jobs for those on relief. Coupled with this was a determination to drop from the rolls those refusing private employment.

In making known the new move, officials said the transfer of every man possible from relief to a private job, even if temporary, was essential of the $4,000,000,000 work fund was to end direct relief by November—the goal set for employing 3,500,000.

The campaign, in which State Works Progress directors and their subordinates will seek to promote use of relief rolls by private employers temporarily needing more workers, will emphasize those on relief. The goal is to reduce the amount of Federal relief appropriations needed after the present fund is gone.

In addition to 3,500,000 jobs, the private work campaign was in addition to 3,500,000 jobs relief officials said would be supplied indirectly by an estimated expenditure of $1,500,000,000 on materials and equipment.

Questioned on complaints that some on relief in Middle-Western states have refused harvesting jobs, officials insisted the situation had been remedied by Hopkins' order to stop relief in such cases. They said the new policy that a person once certified as eligible for a work relief job will not be removed from the list for taking temporary employment, was handed down to minimize such refusals. Further, they estimated only $60,000 harvesting jobs will be available this summer while with the end of the season relief will have to be provided again.

For this reason, officials said, the work program was drawn up on a basis of providing more jobs in the winter than the summer. Officials insisted the $3,000,000 goal which Hopkins hopes to attain in November will be only an average.

IN JAIL TWO YEARS BECAUSE SHE WON'T ANSWER QUESTIONS

Chicago Woman Can Get Out by Telling Court What She Did With Trust Fund.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—This was the second anniversary of Daisy Tegmeyer's entry into the Cook County jail for failure to account for a trust fund, and she, now 49 years old, saw no prospect of release.

She was committed July 27, 1933, on a writ of ex neat issued by Judge Hugo Friend when her answers in a suit for accounting brought by relatives were found unsatisfactory by the court. Later the writ was superseded by a contempt of court citation.

"I haven't the money they ask, so I just suppose that I'll stay here until I die," she said today. "I need sud and exercise, for I'm not well. I wish they would commit me to the Dwight Reformatory so I could get out and around."

Mrs. Tegmeyer's troubles followed the death 11 years ago of her husband, Edward, who was administrator of the estate of his father, Henry. In their suit Edward's brothers alleged Mrs. Tegmeyer commingled money held in trust for a missing brother with funds of her own and her husband.

They said $30,000 (as unaccounted for) Mrs. Tegmeyer at first said, "I guess I lost the money on the ponies." Today she blamed stock market depreciation and bank failures. She said she owed the estate only $4,000.

Mrs. Tegmeyer can gain her release only by answering Judge Friend's questions about the missing money.

Jobs supplemented the long-established policy, reaffirmed by Hopkins last week, that any person on relief who refused to accept a job would be cut off. Previously, acceptance of a private job, for no matter how short a time, struck a name from relief rolls and made it necessary for re-establishment to get back on again.

Officials said, however, that if wages for offered full-time employment were less than relief, refusal would not stop relief payments. Several Baltimore relief recipients recently were cleared by Hopkins of charges that they had declined jobs when they showed wages would be less than the funds they were receiving.

BULK LIQUOR SALE OPPOSED AT HEARING

E. P. Mulrooney, New York Drink Administrator, Says It Would Aid Bootlegging.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Sale of liquor in bulk as proposed in the alcohol control bill passed by the House was opposed today by Edward P. Mulrooney, chairman of the New York State Liquor Authority, on the ground it would open the way to bootlegging.

Appearing at the Senate Finance Committee's hearing on the bill, Mulrooney testified the bulk sale provision was "pernicious" and unsafe. It is strongly advocated by keg manufacturers.

"The bottle store," contended Mulrooney, "has placed the liquor business on a higher plane than ever before in the history of the United States."

"No agency I know of," he said, "has adequate personnel to supervise and trace bulk liquor. I know of no way we can prevent dealers from cutting it."

Mulrooney said the assertions of previous witnesses that bulk sales would permit cheaper liquor and thus stop bootlegging were absurd. Administration officials have opposed the bulk sale provision. Keg makers contend present regulations requiring handling of liquor in bottles have put the business in the hands of big distillers allied with bootleggers.

Lester P. Barlow, a consulting engineer for Yale & Towne, lock-makers of Stamford, Conn., showed the committee the design of a bottle which he said could not be refilled because of a special lock-top necessarily destroyed in opening the bottle.

"But the glass industry doesn't want it," he said.

Joseph H. Choate Jr., chairman of the old FACA, killed by the Supreme Court's NRA decision, listing while A. Sidney Johnson of St. Louis, representing Associated Cooperage Industries of America, charged yesterday that Treasury regulations "constitute an absolute monopoly to the glass bottle industry." Then F. P. Hankerson, also of St. Louis, secretary of the National Legislative Committee of the Tight Cooperage Industry, discussed the regulations in similar vein.

GERMANY'S JEWS FEARFUL OF NEW DRIVE BY NAZIS

Berlin Chief of Police Causes Apprehension by Announcing State Will Take Up Fight on Semitism.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 27.—There was increasing uneasiness among Jews and steel helmet war veterans in the Reich today after Count von Helldorf, Berlin Police Chief, outlawed individual Jew-baiting and announced the Nazi Government itself would prosecute the anti-Semitic fight "in another way."

Catholics thought, however, that a truce for them was possible when the official organ of the Hildebrandt, a Catholic paper, said: "We consider true peace between the State and the Catholic Church quite possible."

The pronouncement coincided with reports that Mgr. Cesare Orsenigo, Papal Nuncio, had delivered to the Foreign Office another communication from Pope Pius XII protesting against the treatment of Catholics.

Police began another drive on Stahlhelm, raiding members' homes in Farchim, Ludwigslust and Waren where the organization was recently barred. Firearms and ammunition were found, it was officially announced, and several leaders were arrested.

Another "Blood Purge" Feared. Many were of the opinion the extreme moves against Stahlhelm, possibly presaged another "blood purge." There were rumors that widespread changes in State and party leadership might take place.

Von Helldorf's decree said: "The State party moves again and again emphasized that individual actions are prohibited," it read. "These single actions include painting and damaging name plates and shop windows. . . . The fight against Jewry will be conducted by the State party moves again and again. Anyone participating in individual prohibited actions puts himself outside the State party and is liable to punishment."

Von Helldorf's anti-Semitic back-ground—he raised the first outcry against Jewry in Berlin's Kurier, a standstill years ago—and his recent appointment for the stated purpose of cleansing Berlin of "undesirable elements" combined to make Jews apprehensive.

The new blow struck at the Stahlhelm promises to be severe. Under Nazi law, possession of unauthorized weapons, as was charged against the Mecklenburg and Luebeck veterans, carries severe penalties.

Comments on Church Dispute. A full frank submission of points on both sides of the church controversy was given by Dr. Erich Reibartsch in the "Katholische Kirchenblatt," of tomorrow's date, the organ of the Hildebrandt Dispatch.

After reviewing causes of strife, Reibartsch made his statement about the possibility of peace between the State and the Catholic church.

Hans Hinkel, newly-appointed chief of the Reich culture chamber, told the German press the few Jewish artists who still "influence Aryan culture" would be eliminated through supervision of the membership lists of all German culture chambers. There are still some Jewish artists who cover their own non-Aryanship by employing straw men.

"I want a clear-cut line between Jewish culture for Jews and Aryan art for Germans."

Prices Rising. There have been frequent official warnings in the provincial press against raising prices. The district leader in Gundinnen declared today: "The populace for some time has been greatly aroused by price increases or fears that prices will go up and is sharply reducing its living standards. . . . I hereby issue warning that price increases will be treated severely."

Despite efforts to keep them down, prices in the capital were rising.

Four more Catholic nuns were sentenced to prison today on charges of smuggling money out of Germany against foreign exchange regulations. Their cases, however, were not considered as being connected with the drive against "political Catholicism," since the trials began some time ago.

Luitgardis Kneppel, general vicar of the "Congregation of the Holy Karl Borromeus," was sentenced to three years in jail and fined 115,000 marks; Rosalie Bell, the burser, to three years and 100,000 marks; Felicitas Fortz, the vicar's successor, to 21 months and fined 55,000 marks, and Rosa Voelkel, the burser's successor, to three months.

Three III From Food Poisoning. Mrs. Elizabeth De Michel, 6107A Horton place, and her two children, Gertrude 9, and Eugene, 5, became ill yesterday after they had eaten fish for lunch. A neighbor called police who took them to City Hospital where they were pronounced suffering from food poisoning.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Scott Field's New $200,000 Airship

HOW RFC CAME OUT IN HARLEY CLARKE
UTILITIES DEAL

though Jones did not comment on the transaction, it was pointed out in his behalf that he had traded collateral virtually without market value for securities which are paying 5 per cent interest on the full amount of the loan and have an immediate market value of about half the debt.

It was said that since the RFC did not wish to get into the utility operating business but merely to collect debts owing to it as any bank would, it was better to take half a loaf. It is said by some commentators, on the other hand, that if the RFC held on and controlled the management and operation of the utilities it might eventually have recovered the full amount of the taxpayers' money represented by the Clarke notes.

W. C. Fordyce Won't Comment. In commenting on the Clarke deal before the settlement, Jones said the RFC was interested only in getting its money; that the notes and collateral would be sold whenever a buyer with cash was found. This is the policy being carried out with other assets, many of dubious value, taken over as collateral for the $90,000,000 loans to the Dawes bank, Central Republic Bank & Trust Co.

Incidentally, Jones a few weeks ago appointed William C. Fordyce of St. Louis as one of the agents of the RFC to assist in liquidating the collateral held for the Central Republic loan. William C. Fordyce is a brother of Samuel W. Fordyce, principal St. Louis lawyer for Harley Clarke. William Fordyce is stationed at the RFC offices in Chicago. When seen here today by the Post-Dispatch correspondent, he said he could not comment on the Clarke deal because the rules of the RFC required that all information to the press be given out by headquarters at Washington.

F. B. Odium's Deals. Floyd B. Odium, head of the Atlas Corporation, is said to have been successful in recent years in a number of financial transactions. At the time of the Clarke deal he said he did not intend to get into the utility operating business, but was protecting other investments of his company. He is said to have owned some Pusco preferred stock, and it is generally reported that he has gathered up in recent months far more of the Utilities Power & Light debentures than the amount used to purchase the Clarke notes.

The average cost of these debentures to him is said to have been about 35 cents on the dollar. Thus the $2,260,000 Clarke notes cost him about $790,000. It is generally believed in Chicago's LaSalle street that Odium and his associates hold not less than $10,000,000 face value of the Utilities Power & Light debentures, all acquired below today's market prices. There have been heavy purchases of these securities for several months and the price has gradually moved up.

Odium and his associates are credited with being in a position to make handsome profits from trading in these securities and from other financing which their stock control of the Utilities Power & Light system is likely to bring them.

The management policy of the utilities system has not been made clear since the Atlas purchase. The annual stockholders' meeting set for last Thursday at Richmond, Va., was postponed to Aug. 21. But Clarke informed the Post-Dispatch he expected to remain as president.

CONGRESSMEN ARRIVE TO VIEW SCOTT FIELD

Visit of 10 in Connection With Request for $3,369,000
Appropriation.

Ten Congressmen, nine of them members of the House Military Affairs Committee, and Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, arrived by plane at Scott Field at 7:15 o'clock last night for inspection of the field. They spent the night at the Belleville Hotel, Belleville, and will inspect the post this morning before beginning the return flight to Washington.

The allocation of the War Department is seeking from the Works Progress Administration includes $3,369,000 for new quarters to replace the wooden barracks built during the World War, and for new hangars and headquarters, and $150,000 for hangar aprons, and repair of the flying field. If the money for Scott Field is not obtained, Congressman Edwin J. Schaefer of Belleville, a member of the Military Affairs Committee and one of those who made the trip, plans to introduce a bill for a special appropriation to modernize the post.

Woodring said he had seen the field before, and was "all for appropriating the money to fix it up." He said he was taking the committee to inspect it to allow its members to judge for themselves. Representative J. J. McSwain of South Carolina, chairman of the committee, said that as the members had not inspected the field, they could give no opinion on the likelihood that any appropriation for the post would be reported favorably.

The committee came from Fort Knox, Ky., where it inspected the mechanized cavalry unit of the army. Traveling in two army transport planes, it reached Scott Field two hours after leaving the Kentucky post. The members were greeted by Lieut. nant-Colonel Frank Kennedy, commandant at the field. A trip to the Municipal Opera, planned for them, was called off because of their late arrival.

Besides Schaefer and McSwain, the party included Congressman Edmondson (Dem.), West Virginia; McLean (Rep.), New Jersey; Ardens (Rep.), Illinois; Harlan (Dem.), Ohio; Downey (Dem.), Pennsylvania; Costello (Dem.), California; Plumley (Rep.), Vermont, all members of the committee; Congressman Harter (Dem.) of Ohio; Kenneth Anderson, chief of the committee, and Maj. Richards of the office of Chief of Staff.

Kansas Brothers Seek $3500 Damages; Officials Say They Misrepresented Their Condition.

By the Associated Press. KANSAS CITY, Kan., July 27.—Two Negro World War veterans, cut off from relief rolls, sued Lester Wickliffe, Wyandotte County Relief Administrator, for $3500 damages today. Richard W. Bradford asked for $2800 and his crippled brother, Alfred, asked for $700, charging their work cards had been canceled without cause.

"The cause was misrepresentation," Wickliffe said tonight. "Each had a wife and a child and depended upon him. Investigation revealed that each wife was working and efforts to find Richard Bradford's child so far have failed."

George Littick, attorney for the men, said that, as veterans, they were entitled to some form of relief. Richard Bradford charged in his suit that he had to "go around in a dirty condition and seek my own living" after his work was cut off July 1.

Schrafft Candy Helress Engaged. By the Associated Press. MEXICO CITY, July 27.—The engagement of Catharin Schrafft, heiress to the candy millions of her father, the late George Schrafft, of Sir Peter Norton-Griffiths, was announced here today. After their marriage in Boston in October they will live here, where Sir Peter is connected with an oil company.

Other Democrats who have obtained school fund bonds include J. C. A. Hiller, chairman of the Election Board, who borrowed $1250, with relatives by marriage, W. S. and Floyd Shotwell, brothers of State Senator Clarence Shotwell, as securities. Floyd Shotwell obtained a $1700 loan with Hiller and W. S. Shotwell as securities. Interest on both loans was paid.

C. August Jacobsen, father of Circuit Clerk Oscar Jacobsen, borrowed $3000 in 1920 and had paid his interest. One of his securities was former County Judge Gardner. Phoenix Jablonski, brother of the former Highway Engineer, is listed as a borrower of $5500 in good standing. He also appears as security on a $2000 loan to Frank Kesselring, interest on which also is paid.

BEGGS HEIR TAKES UP MIDGET AUTO RACING

Robert McCulloch Coming to St. Louis With Two-Motor Car, Aug. 6.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. MILWAUKEE, July 27.—Robert McCulloch, 24 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard McCulloch of St. Louis, and one of three grandchildren who inherited the utility millions of the late John I. Beggs, is going on the midget racing circuit with a two-motor car of his own designing.

He is going to take his race car to St. Louis for the races there Aug. 6, and expects to go on a tour of Middle-West tracks. Cy Drew, veteran Milwaukee midget car chauffeur, drives the car on percentage.

McCulloch, who studied engineering at Stanford University, turned from motorboat racing to midget car designing last winter. In his experimental laboratory near State Park, Milwaukee, he worked on the problems of building a car with two 2-cylinder outboard motors, and with a shaft which would stand the strain. Several shafts broke before one was found which would stand the strain.

Three weeks ago, the McCulloch car made a new track record of 18.8 seconds on the Evanston quarter-mile oval. A week later, it won three races here, with a new record of 18.4 seconds for the one-fifth mile. Last Thursday night it won four races here.

McCulloch is planning to go into the midget motor business. "When a man puts an outboard on a midget," McCulloch said, "he practically has to rebuild it. We'll give him a motor ready to mount in the chassis and go."

PLANES TO STOP IN ST. LOUIS ON WAY TO SANTIAGO, CHILE
Three Transport Ships Will Leave Chicago This Morning on 7500-Mile Flight.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, July 27.—Three huge transport planes will leave the Chicago municipal airport tomorrow at 7 a. m. on a 7500-mile flight to Santiago, Chile, where they will be placed in service over routes of the Lines Area Nacional.

Officers of American Airlines, which sold the planes to the South American firm, said the trip would require two weeks. One of the pilots will be Ralph E. Heimer of Robertson, Mo.

The planes are Curtiss Condor biplanes powered with twin engines. They will be flown over routes of the Pan-American Grace Airways and Pan-American Airways System from Brownsville, Tex., to Santiago.

They are scheduled to land at St. Louis at 9 a. m.

T. M. SAYMAN FILES MOTION FOR NEW SLANDER TRIAL
New Action Cites 21 Reasons for Rehearing and Charges Damages Were Excessive.

A motion for a new trial was filed at Clayton yesterday by attorneys for T. M. Sayman, soap and patent medicine manufacturer, against whom a jury last Wednesday returned a verdict for damages totaling $52,002 in a slander suit.

The verdict was in favor of Bishop M. Crawford, widely known trapshooter, for derogatory remarks alleged to have been made by Sayman about Crawford when they were associated in a shooting club in St. Louis County. Crawford was awarded $12,500 punitive damages on each of four counts, $1000 actual damages on each of two counts and $1 on each of the other two.

The new trial motion cited 21 reasons for a rehearing and charged that the punitive damage awards were excessive and evidence of prejudice on the part of the jury. Several instances of alleged error by the Court were given.

RETIRING EXECUTIVE

Emil G. Steger Resigns
Community Fund Job

Failing Health Given as Reason —Statement Issued by Council.

Emil G. Steger resigned Friday as director of the Community Fund, Community Council and the United Charities, positions which paid him a salary of $12,000 a year.

Failing health was the reason given by Steger, who is at a camp near Arcadia, Mich. The executive boards of the Community Fund and Council accepted the resignation, and a new director is to be appointed shortly. The board of United Charities, formerly the United Relief, will meet Aug. 5.

Statement of Officials. The following statement on the resignation was issued by Sidney Maestre, president of the Community Fund, and Dr. Llewellyn Sale, head of the Council:

"The triple job which Mr. Steger had so ably held for the last three years, and with much regret, Mr. Steger brought to social work in St. Louis an outstanding piece of service. He served through trying times and, we feel, has accumulated a debt in his favor that St. Louis can never repay. His resignation is a real loss to the city."

Appointed Three Years Ago. Steger became director of the Community Council and Fund in February, 1932, succeeding Robert W. Kelso, resigned. At that time he had been secretary and manager of the St. Louis Provident Association for nine years at a salary of $10,000 a year. He came to St. Louis from St. Paul, Minn., where he was secretary of the United Charities. A graduate of Concordia Seminary, Steger spent several years in the ministry and later engaged in newspaper work before entering the social service field as a Red Cross secretary during the World War.

As a director of the Citizens Committee on Relief and Employment, Steger was active in obtaining secretary for nine years at a salary of $10,000 a year. He was honored at a testimonial dinner in which civic and religious leaders joined.

Mentioned as possible successors to Steger were F. H. Byrns, executive secretary of the Missouri American Red Cross; J. A. Wolf, of the Neighborhood Association, and Peter Kasius, St. Louis Relief director.

Visit of 10 in Connection With
Appropriation.

Ten Congressmen, nine of them members of the House Military Affairs Committee, and Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, arrived by plane at Scott Field at 7:15 o'clock last night for inspection of the field. They spent the night at the Belleville Hotel, Belleville, and will inspect the post this morning before beginning the return flight to Washington.

The allocation of the War Department is seeking from the Works Progress Administration includes $3,369,000 for new quarters to replace the wooden barracks built during the World War, and for new hangars and headquarters, and $150,000 for hangar aprons, and repair of the flying field. If the money for Scott Field is not obtained, Congressman Edwin J. Schaefer of Belleville, a member of the Military Affairs Committee and one of those who made the trip, plans to introduce a bill for a special appropriation to modernize the post.

Woodring said he had seen the field before, and was "all for appropriating the money to fix it up." He said he was taking the committee to inspect it to allow its members to judge for themselves. Representative J. J. McSwain of South Carolina, chairman of the committee, said that as the members had not inspected the field, they could give no opinion on the likelihood that any appropriation for the post would be reported favorably.

The committee came from Fort Knox, Ky., where it inspected the mechanized cavalry unit of the army. Traveling in two army transport planes, it reached Scott Field two hours after leaving the Kentucky post. The members were greeted by Lieut. nant-Colonel Frank Kennedy, commandant at the field. A trip to the Municipal Opera, planned for them, was called off because of their late arrival.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 27.—
Four men who started out on a week-end flying trip around Lake Michigan were killed this morning when their rented plane crashed near Curtiss-Reynolds airport here.

Robert M. Henschen of Winnetka, Ill., was at the controls. Accompanying him were Attorney William H. Ennis, George T. Tengberg and George R. Burkhardt, all of Chicago. Henschen and Tengberg were employees of the Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago. Investigation showed Henschen had the presence of mind to cut the ignition switch and thus prevent the plane from catching fire. Witnesses said the plane went into a nose dive at an altitude of about 300 feet as Henschen was bringing it in for a landing. The party took off from Glenview, Ill., an hour before the accident. Henschen held a private pilot's license, and had been flying for three years.

Pieck, reporting on behalf of the executive committee of the Third Internationale, said "the organization of Fascist hordes and the frantic arming" for war would provoke workers to action. Delegates from 50 nations cheered loudly as Chow Hsing, who said he was an emissary of the Red army in China, assailed "Japanese Imperialism," which he said was trying to divide the world. Asserting the Red army was the only hope of the Chinese people, Chow shouted: "The Chinese peo-

SURVEY SHOWS TRADE GAIN FOR ST. LOUIS

Department Stores Report Increase of 10 Pct. Over Same Week in 1934.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 27.—Retail trade in St. Louis and Kansas City during the week ended Wednesday was ahead of the corresponding week of 1934, the Department of Commerce reported today in a survey of 32 major cities.

The three largest St. Louis department stores reported an average increase of 10 per cent in retail sales over the same week last year. No material change in wholesale and retail trade, as compared with the previous week, was reported for Kansas City, but gains were shown over the same period of 1934.

The report for the St. Louis area said: Hot weather stimulated seasonal lines as apparel, beverages, touring and outing supplies and sport goods. Country retail stores reported heavy demand for supplies in connection with wheat harvest. Wholesale and jobbing lines, with exception of groceries and electrical supplies, tended to lag. Employment declined seasonally in industrial occupations, but loss was offset somewhat by employment in wheat fields and other harvest operations. Demand for credit continued at the low ebb of recent months. Farm implement business was best in decade.

Kansas City reported fall buying in wholesale trade larger than a year ago. There was a heavy demand for farm machinery. Farmers' buying power, due to higher grain and livestock prices, is estimated to be up 20 per cent. Bank clearings continued to rise. Repair and remodeling, particularly on residential property, is largest in volume since 1930. Crop condition fairly good.

SUIT TO ENJOIN THE DIVISION OF CENTRAL TOWNSHIP DROPPED

Constable A. J. Frank Applies for Writ for Review of County Court Order.

Following application to Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday by Constable A. J. Frank of Central Township for a writ of certiorari, or review, of the County Court order of July 15, dividing Central into three new townships, a taxpayers suit to enjoin the County Court from carrying out the division order was dismissed.

William H. Freeseimer of Normandy, plaintiff in the injunction proceeding, which was to have been heard yesterday by Circuit Judge McElhinney, dropped the case without explanation.

Frank alleged in his petition that the County Court, or administrative body, was not authorized to enter the division order and had exceeded its jurisdiction. He said its proceedings were altogether outside the course of common or statutory law or judicial action.

Under the order, Frank was relegated to the constableness of Normandy Township, one of the new units, where he resides, and the County Court appointed new Constables for the other units, Clayton and Jefferson Townships. Frank declared he would lose a substantial amount of fees if the order decreasing his jurisdiction were not quashed.

LOBBY COMMITTEE UNABLE TO FIND HEAD OF UTILITY

Chairman Black Says H. C.
Hopson of Associated Gas & Electric Hasn't Answered His Telegram.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 27.—Members of the Senate committee investigating congressional lobbies reported tonight they have been unable to obtain the appearance of H. C. Hopson, dominant figure in the Associated Gas and Electric Co. which expended $700,000 fighting the administration public utilities bill.

The committee expects to go into the details of Associated Gas and Electric's expenditures in the campaign against the utilities bill and its "death sentence" for holding companies. It issued a subpoena for Hopson and another for J. I. Mange, president and chairman of the board.

Mange was discovered to be a patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. Process servers were sent to reach Hopson. Chairman Black dispatched a telegram to Hopson yesterday requesting his appearance on Monday. The committee reported that thus far no acknowledgment had been received from Hopson nor any word from any of his associates that the telegram had been delivered.

It was recalled that when the Senate Banking Committee was investigating Wall street under the guidance of Ferdinand Pecora, much difficulty was experienced in bringing Hopson before the subcommittee. Associates in his New York office told the committee he was unwell and was making a cross country tour by automobile. They did not know, they said, where he could be reached. A United States marshal served a subpoena on Chicago.

In a general order to all employees today, the Federal Communications Commission warned those participating in its investigation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. not to accept gifts or favors from company officers or employees.

Meanwhile, House and Senate conferees on the utilities bill remained deadlocked. Chairman Wheeler of the Senate Conference Committee reported no development since the conference adjourned indefinitely after another row yesterday.

The conflict arose over the presence of Ben Cohen, administration representative, whom the Senate conferees insisted should be permitted to advise them. In this they were joined by Chairman Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, of the House group. But other House members, notably Representative Huddleston (Dem.), Alabama, objected with such vehemence that no conference action has been possible.

"We are maintaining our position that Cohen should be permitted to help us," was all that Wheeler would say today.

CORN-HOG CHECKS MAILED

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 27.—The Farm Administration mailed out its first 1935 corn-hog checks today, sending more than $4,000,000 to farmers in 35 states.

The checks represent about two-fifths of the total corn payment and one-half of the total hog payment due the farmers under the 1935 program. The final installment will be paid some time after Jan. 1, 1936, when local administrative expenses can be determined and deducted. The states to which corn-hog checks were sent and the amount represented include: Illinois, $80,845.05; Missouri, $313,053.

Pastor Says Nazis Plan World Anti-Jewry Drive

Kansas City Unitarian Minister Tells of Clearing House for Anti-Semitic Literature in Berlin.

(The Rev. L. M. Birkhead, American churchman touring Europe to study especially those countries which have dictatorships government, has written the following article on Germany's anti-Semitic policies for the Associated Press.)
By THE REV. L. M. BIRKHEAD, Pastor of All Souls Unitarian Church, Kansas City, Mo.

BERLIN, July 27.—The Nazi anti-Semites, under the leadership of Julius Streicher, now in the midst of a violent campaign to eliminate Jews from Germany's cultural and political life, have started plans to anti-Semitize the world and spread the poison and hatred of Jews everywhere.

I made this discovery while visiting Nurnberg, where I sought an interview with Streicher. After insisting for several hours that I should see him and question him regarding the anti-Jewish campaign I was sent to the "secret police" maintained by Streicher and his violently anti-Jewish newspaper, "Der Stuermer," where foreigners with proper anti-Semitic credentials are received.

I found this office about three blocks from "Der Stuermer's" quarters. Over the entrance was the legend "Fencing School." I was greeted with the question: "How did you get in to this secret office to which only properly credentialed persons are admitted?"

Anti-Jewish Headquarters. Why Streicher should maintain a secret office is a mystery to me, for he had been one of the boldest and most uncompromising leaders. After explaining I wanted to know the why and wherefore of Streicher's anti-Jewish drive, I was informed this so-called secret office of Streicher's was operated by Paul Wurm and that he was in touch with anti-Semitism throughout the world. His concern is not the why and wherefore of anti-Semitism, which is only incidental. This office, I learned, is maintained "to promote anti-Jewish hatred in every land."

I asked numerous questions about Streicher's life, character, and further plans. Then the files, which hitherto had been concealed, were exposed. I was shown books, papers, pamphlets, cartoons and clippings from anti-Jews in all major countries.

In other words, the office was an anti-Semite clearing house to which they have sent publications which Streicher has filed handily for his own use and where they also display them to foreigners with the idea of encouraging them to engage in anti-Jewish activities. There seems to be frequent and regular correspondence between Streicher and anti-Semitism everywhere.

A representative of the English "Imperial Fascist League" was introduced during my interview with Wurm and assisted in giving me information regarding Streicher's plans to "drive the Jews from the face of the earth."

Allied With English Group. The English "Imperial Fascist League" which represents the British "racial fascists" seems to be on the friendliest terms with Streicher and is frequently in counsel with him.

"Wurm," said Streicher's English friend, "hand this man our circular entitled 'Britons awake and oppose the Jewish stranglehold.'"
A circular was immediately pro-

DR. PEREZ, FAMOUS ART DETECTIVE, DIES

Former Argentine Envoy to Rome Checked Genuine-
ness of Paintings.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, July 27.—Dr. Fernando Perez, former Argentine Ambassador to Rome, died suddenly at his home here. He was 72 years old. He was the founder of a laboratory in the Louvre for the study of technical problems of painting and the restoration of old pictures.

Dr. Perez gained fame through his efforts to eliminate fraud in the sale of high priced objects of art and became an authority on the genuineness of paintings attributed to the masters. One of his methods was to search for fingerprints. By discovering fingerprints of the masters on their paintings and comparing them with those on a painting called into question, he was able to tell whether the painting was genuine or not.

While not the discoverer of this approach to detection of such frauds, by years of practice he became one of the most proficient experts of it. He invented two instruments especially designed for this detection.

One was a special microscope for observing the surface of a painting in an effort to find fingerprints. The other was a device for throwing a light on a picture so that it would fall from the side at an angle of five to 10 degrees. ONLY so great a master of the modern orchestra as Tschai-kowsky could have woven a tone fabric so extravagantly colored as the brilliant, effervescent "Nutcracker Suite". You will never enjoy it more than in this performance, as Leopold Stokowski floods it with the bright light of his inimitable genius.

Victor higher fidelity recording has caught all the richness of this delightful fantasy. The kaleidoscopic changes of mood are given full value. We tingle to the Russian Dance, with its swiftness and glitter of pelting snow, when the blood runs quick and warm and furred boots fly—and are left breathless when it shifts suddenly to the languorous, sultry rhythms of the Arab Dance.

Here is a Tschai-kowsky who never again showed himself—in toxicating music for your lighter moments. It is one of the few complete performances of the "Nutcracker Suite"—all eight movements: The Overture, Miniature, March, Dance of the Sugar-Plum Fairy, Russian Dance, Arab Dance, Chinese Dance, Dance of the Flutes, and Waltz of the Flowers—recorded on three 12-inch Victor Records, six sides. Hear it at your Victor dealer's today. The set complete with album and explanatory booklet is only $6.50.

TESTIMONY HEARD IN WALKATHON SHOWS

Operators Say Performances Are Not Injurious—Physi-

Testimony was heard yesterday by Circuit Judge Douglas in a suit by Alois Rauer and Fred Sheldon, partners of the "European Walkathon show," to enjoin the city and Police Department from interfering with the "walkathon" conducted by them at the Winter Garden, 520 De-Balliere avenue.

They alleged that two ordinances governing endurance exhibitions were unconstitutional. One ordinance provides for payment of $500 a day as a license fee and the other ordinance imposes heavy penalties for failure to comply with the city's regulations. In an answer by the city it was set forth the ordinances were valid and were passed in the interest of "public peace, health and safety."

The petitioners asserted they received a license to conduct an exhibition, which they paid $75. The license was issued by Fred Knick, License Collector. A deputy in his office told the court the license did not cover a human endurance contest, such as the city intended the exhibition was, but authorized a floor show.

Rauer, who resides at 6306 Clayton avenue, testified the show has been operating since July 5 at the Winter Garden, at which time it moved from Sylvan Beach, St. Louis County, on account of floods in the Meramec River. He said the average cost per day is $300, while the income since the show opened in the city has been between $150 and $180 per day. He denied the contest was injurious to participants, explaining contestants were permitted 8 hours consecutive rest and were not on the floor more days.

DR. PEREZ, FAMOUS ART DETECTIVE, DIES

Former Argentine Envoy to Rome Checked Genuine-
ness of Paintings.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, July 27.—Dr. Fernando Perez, former Argentine Ambassador to Rome, died suddenly at his home here. He was 72 years old. He was the founder of a laboratory in the Louvre for the study of technical problems of painting and the restoration of old pictures.

Dr. Perez gained fame through his efforts to eliminate fraud in the sale of high priced objects of art and became an authority on the genuineness of paintings attributed to the masters. One of his methods was to search for fingerprints. By discovering fingerprints of the masters on their paintings and comparing them with those on a painting called into question, he was able to tell whether the painting was genuine or not.

While not the discoverer of this approach to detection of such frauds, by years of practice he became one of the most proficient exponents of it. He invented two instruments especially designed for this detection.

One was a special microscope for observing the surface of a painting in an effort to find fingerprints. The other was a device for throwing a light on a picture so that it would fall from the side at an angle of five to 10 degrees. Coming from the side the light threw into sharp relief any roughness in the surface of the painting, enabling the scientist to pick out fingerprints easily, also to photograph them.

Dr. Perez, while Ambassador to Rome, proved to art authorities that one of the paintings in a gallery there, supposed to be authentic, was spurious.

TESTIMONY HEARD WALKATHON SHOWS

According to Rauer, when the show opened at Sylvan Beach, June 1, 57 couples were among the contestants, but the number was down to four couples and one solo contestant. He explained most of the performers entered out of curiosity and dropped out after a few days. "Those who don't get discouraged and argue with each other stay on the floor the longest," he said. "The contest is over when one couple is left. They are out when they get down on two knees." Drs. H. I. Spector and Edward C. O'Brien of the City Health Department testified they witnessed two performances at which they noticed some of the performers seemed limp and it was necessary for their partners to hold them up. Counsel for petitioners endeavored to make it appear that chorus girls in the Municipal Opera, baseball players and football players were subject to a greater physical strain than participants in a walkathon. The city doctors, however, said in their opinion the strain of the latter is more severe.

Judge Douglas took the case under advisement. Pending a decision a restraining order is in effect. City Counselor Hay and his associate, Oliver J. Sent, appeared for the city, while Dewey Godfrey and Rudolph K. Schurr, represented the plaintiffs. The court instructed them to file briefs.

500,000 TO TAKE PART IN ITALY'S WAR GAMES

Largest Force Ever So Employed in Country to Practice Next Month.

By the Associated Press.
ROME, July 27.—The largest army ever so engaged in Italy will take part in the maneuvers next month. About 500,000 men, many of them veterans of some of Italy's real wars, will participate.

(Premier Mussolini, in an interview with L'Echo of Paris said: "Acting are more significant than words: at the end of August, I shall order great maneuvers in northern Italy with 500,000 men. In October there will be more than 1,000,000 Italians under arms.")

The maneuvers will last almost a month. Emphasis will be given to the defense of Italy's Alpine frontier, particularly in the vicinity of the Brenner Pass leading to Austria. Eight divisions of about 15,000 men each, have been ordered to concentrate at Bolzano for the exercises facing the Brenner Pass.

Divisions of the Naples-Bari sector will engage in mock warfare in the southern Apennines. Milan and Udine in the north will be focal points for mobilization while the entire peninsula will be crowded with units hurrying to concentration points. Among the divisions taking part will be the elite units which Mussolini has created to fill the vacancies left by two regular divisions sent to East Africa.

100 QUIT WORK ON BRIDGE

AT ST. CHARLES IN LABOR ROW

Union Men Called Off Work on Part of Approaches; Non-Union Workers Forced Off.

Work on a $150,000 contract for the approaches to the new Wabash Railway bridge over the Missouri River at St. Charles has been interrupted since Friday afternoon by a labor dispute. About 100 men quit work, including union members called out by their agents, and non-union workers who were reported to have been forced by the unionists to quit.

The contract was awarded jointly to the Inland Construction Co. and John Henske Construction Co. of St. Louis, under a PWA loan. Specifications called for PWA minimum wage scales, with a few exceptions. Agents of the Hoisting Engineers' Union and the St. Louis County Hod Carriers' and Laborers' Union undertook to unionize the job. The contractors, it was understood, began paying a mixed wage scale, with higher rates for union members in St. Louis County and with open shop in St. Charles County. It was learned that a decision was made last week to make the whole undertaking open shop.

A non-union operator was assigned to a crane Friday afternoon, whereupon pump men, signal men and equipment operators belonging to the union were called off duty. The situation has been held in abeyance pending a hearing by the Labor Board of Review at Washington Tuesday.

GOV. NICE ATTRIBUTES WORKS DELAY TO 'PRESIDENTIAL YEAR'

Declares It Is Case of "Spending the Money Where It Will Do the Most Good."

By the Associated Press.
BALTIMORE, July 27.—Pausing at his desk between his return to Maryland and his departure on a cruise with Eastern Republican leaders today, Gov. Harry W. Nice charged that "presidential year" politics was causing delay in the Federal public works program.

"There seems to be a general impression, probably with a strong basis," he said, "that the beginning of this work will be held back as long as possible in order to utilize it in the most advantageous way to insure political supremacy." The idea, he said, boils down to "spending the money where it will do the most good in a presidential year."

The guest list for the cruise includes: Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania; W. S. Hallanan, Republican National Committeeman from West Virginia; Col. Charles H. March of the Federal Trade Commission; George H. Moses, former Senator from New Hampshire; Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee; Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Hoover, and E. T. Clark, secretary to former President Coolidge.

LIQUOR DEALERS TO BE SUED

Attorney-General Alleges Violation of License Provision.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 27.—Attorney-General McKittick announced today that his department was prepared to file suits against eight liquor dealers to recover on their $2000 bonds because they had violated provisions of their State licenses. The suits will be sent to Prosecuting Attorneys of the city or county in which the dealer operates.

McKittick said it was the State's first attempt to forfeit bonds of dealers whose licenses either had been revoked or surrendered. Among the eight defendants is Thomas L. Remley, St. Louis.

WOMAN SLOWLY TURNING TO STONE AT OMAHA, NEB.

Physicians Powerless to Save Her; Too Much Calcium in Tissues.

By the Associated Press.
OMAHA, Neb., July 27.—Mrs. Wilda Jaeger, 54 years old, of Columbus, Neb., mother of two children, is slowly turning to stone in the University of Nebraska Hospital here. Physicians admitted today they were powerless to save her.

She is suffering from a hardening of the muscles, caused by too much calcium in the tissues, Dr. Francis Beas, superintendent of the hospital, explained. The medical term for her illness is myositis ossificans.

Although she suffers no pain, the disease has affected her mouth and jaw muscles and she is unable to eat or drink much. Her body is rigid from her neck down. The surface skin has not hardened, but the tissues beneath are solid. She has been ill for two years.

Fullback Aids Two in Wreck.

By the Associated Press.

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn., July 27.—Bronko Nagurski, fullback of the Chicago Bears, professional football team, helped to extricate two persons from the wreckage of an overturned truck today. Nagurski was traveling behind the truck when the driver lost control, and it rolled over. He lifted the wreckage while James King, the driver, and his 12-year-old son were pulled out.

FOUR KILLED IN TANK BLAST IN MONTANA

Ten Containers of Oil Destroyed in Fire Following Explosion at Billings.

BILLINGS, Mont., July 27.—Four employees of the Yale Corporation refinery were killed today in a series of oil storage tank explosions followed by fire. Ten tanks of oil were destroyed before firemen got the fire under control just short of a battery of tanks filled with gasoline.

The first explosion is believed to have been caused by a spark from a welding outfit. Other blasts, heard for miles, followed.

The dead: Jake Walker, 27 years old; Ralph McDermott, 18; Ernie Hiber, 37, and Leon B. Smith, 24. Several persons were injured, among them Phil Fortin, vice-president, who was burned when he stepped in a pool of acid. Seven firemen were overcome by heat.

New Jersey Flyer Killed in Crash.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., July 27.—Irwin Siemonds, 22 years old, of Highland Park, was killed when an airplane crashed from an altitude of 800 feet near the Hadley Airport today. His companion, Robert Conover, 25, of Milltown, leaped with a parachute and landed unhurt.

HOLC STARTS FORECLOSURES ON 712 MORTGAGED HOMES

Action Inevitable in Course of Agency's Business, Says John H. Fahey, Chairman.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, said today "it is inevitable that some thousands of homes must be acquired by the corporation in the normal course of its business."

Up to July 15, the agency had started foreclosure proceedings against 712 homes whose owners had defaulted on HOLC loan payments and officials estimated that such actions were being instituted at the rate of about 40 a week.

"The vast majority of borrowers are making their payments regularly and are in no danger of foreclosure," the corporation now holds mortgages on $85,000 homes. Soon it will have more than a million. . . . Even in normal times the large lending institutions have to deal with thousands of pieces of property on which they are obliged to foreclose in the course of a year. The Home Owner's Loan Corporation cannot expect to escape similar experiences. . . . To imply that the HOLC is a 'shylock' in foreclosing against persons who refuse to pay when they can pay," Fahey said, "is to argue that dishonest people should be given free ownership of their homes on the Federal credit, at heavy cost to everyone else."

WOMAN SUSPECT IN CHICAGO KILLING HELD IN NEW YORK

Evelyn Smith Wanted in Murder of Ervin Lang, Whose Body Was Found in Swamp.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 27. — Mrs. Evelyn B. Smith, 46 years old, sought since early this month in connection with the murder of Ervin Lang, 28, of Chicago, was arrested by detectives today in a West Thirty-fourth street rooming house. Mrs. Smith denied knowledge of the killing. She said she would waive extradition because "I have nothing to fear."

Taken to the Brooklyn Police Headquarters, the woman was quoted by detectives as acknowledging that she knew Lang's mother-in-law, Mrs. Blanche Dunkel, who has said she contracted to pay Mrs. Smith $500 to "get rid of" her son-in-law. Lang's legless body was found in a swamp near Hammond, Ind., on July 10. The legs later were found in another place.

Mrs. Smith, who said she also was known as Pearl Johnson, said it had been a year since she last saw Harry Jung, Chinese laundry man who was named by Mrs. Dunkel as Mrs. Smith's helper in the crime. She said she was born in Germany and had gone with her father, a cabinet maker, to China as a young girl. There her father hired Harry Jung to work for him and became so attached to the Chinese he brought him to the United States with him.

Mrs. Smith said they were brought up together in Great Forks, N. D., but the last time she had seen Jung he was operating a laundry in Chicago. Police said Jung's real name was Jun Hoy Yee.

The prisoner was booked as a fugitive from justice. She said she had been in New York since July 8, having arrived here by bus. In

Fugitive in Murder Arrested

MRS. EVELYN B. SMITH

At Brooklyn police headquarters after her arrest yesterday.

Chicago she worked as a laundress in an athletic club, she said.

Mother-in-Law of Murdered Man in Chicago Jail.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Police said tonight they believed that if the Evelyn Smith arrested in New York was the burlesque dancer sought in Chinatown over the United States, the killing of Ervin Lang, store clerk, would be solved. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Blanche Dunkel, 43, a grandmother, has persisted in her story that she hired a Mrs. Evelyn Smith to kill Lang, but did not witness the killing. Mrs. Dunkel was arrested a few days after Lang's body was found.

Mrs. Smith, she maintained, and her Chinese friend, Harry Jung, were responsible for the actual killing and the disposal of the body. Motives for the crime, as given by Mrs. Dunkel, were varied. At first she said it was because she resented Lang's "running around with women" after his wife's death. Her daughter, Mollie Lang, died Dec. 20, but Lang continued to live in Mrs. Dunkel's home. Friends of Mrs. Dunkel said she was infatuated with Lang and jealous of his attentions to other women.

Last week an unidentified person in masculine attire leaped to death in the Chicago River and authorities believed at first it might have been Mrs. Smith, who has said to have worn men's clothing at times. Newspaper clippings found in a coat discarded before the plunge mentioned the Lang murder. The body has not been found.

DEFENSE HINTS AT NEW MOTIVE FOR DETROIT MURDER

First Witness Heard at Trial of Four Accused of Killing Attorney Dickinson.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., July 27.—After five days had been spent in selecting a jury, the first witness was heard today in the trial of a man and three women accused of the murder of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney and relative of Chief Justice Hughes. The defendants are William Lee Ferris, Florence and Loretta Jackson and Jean Miller. When arrested, after Dickinson's body had been found in Rouge Park here June 27, Ferris signed a confession saying he and the women plotted to kill and rob Dickinson.

In cross-examination George Krapfel, first State witness, George S. Fitzgerald, attorney for Loretta Jackson and Jean Miller, asked questions concerning the estate of the late William H. Yawkey, lumber millionaire.

Prosecutor D. C. McCrea objected, but Fitzgerald replied: "We have a right to show that perhaps this killing grew out of some motive other than robbery."

Krapfel, an attorney, is representing the Yawkey estate in claims made by Mrs. Elizabeth Carmichael Witherspoon. Dickinson came to Detroit as a representative of the estate.

Fourteen jurors—seven men and seven women—were chosen to avoid possibility of a mistrial, in case any became ill.

CCC LIFE MORE POPULAR WITH RURAL THAN WITH CITY BOYS

St. Louis City and County Fall to Fill Quotas Allotted to Them.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 27.—Citizens' Conservation Corps camp life has a greater appeal to the boys of the country than it has for those in the city, and the $66,000 which is being passed up each month by youths from the urban centers is being taken by those from rural areas, Wallace Crossley, State Relief Administrator, said today.

Missouri's enrollment quota for the junior CCC camps was 8700, and while fewer than half the eligible young men in the cities have turned down the opportunity of joining, the country boys have filled the State quota. The quota for St. Louis city and county was 2478, but only 840 enrolled from that urban center. In Kansas City and Jackson County the quota was 1128 and 574 have signed up. Barry County's quota was fixed at 56, and 144 were sent. In Camden County the quota was 21 and 94 enrolled.

"Many city families," Crossley said, "think that if a boy enrolls his chance of obtaining work under the Works Progress Administration will be minimized. This will not be the case."

ROOSEVELT PORTRAIT TAKEN FROM CLUB IS RETURNED

Employee of Mayor Walmsley of New Orleans Restores It When Accused of Theft.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, July 27.—Arthur J. Romaguera, former chauffeur for Mayor T. Sammes Walmsley, today returned a crayon portrait of President Roosevelt to the old regular political headquarters where he took it from the walls last night, because, he said, the ward leaders had turned to Senator Huey P. Long "and you have no right to this picture."

The picture was returned after Ulic J. Burke, First Ward old regular leader and manager of the organization's Choctaw Club headquarters had filed a charge of petty larceny against Romaguera.

PRISONER NAMES THREE IN HOLDUP KILLING

Man Held at Ava, Mo., Admits Part in Fatal Shooting on Farm.

AVA, Mo., July 27.—Sheriff Ernie Gentry announced today that Clifford C. Woolery had made a confession implicating three men as the ones who fled with him the night of last July 9 after Henry W. Morefield, 28 years old, of Oklahoma City, identified as a robber, and Rondo Ellison, 22, were shot to death on the Ellison farm near here during an attempted holdup. The men named in the confession are said to be Dennis Morefield, Camden pool hall owner and brother of Henry; Oscar Barnhouse, Seymour woodcutter, who is alleged to have suggested the attempted robbery, and John Huff, Camden construction worker. Huff and Barnhouse are in jail here. Dennis Morefield, who fled on the day Woolery was arrested, has not been caught. Woolery, according to the Sheriff, is held "in a jail about 60 miles from here."

In addition, a man and woman said to be Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Montgomery of Eldon, are held here as accessories. Woolery, in his confession, says he left Camden with them on the day after the attempted holdup.

Woolery, according to his confession, says he drove to the Ellison farm with the two Morefields and Huff, asked Mrs. Ellison, mother of Bondo, for a drink, as a pretext to enter the house, and went in the kitchen with her. While he was there, he said, he heard shots and ran out to find Rondo and Henry Moorefield lying wounded on the ground. They deserted Henry, he said, and drove to Camden.

LABOR IN MEXICO DEMANDS OUSTER OF GOV. OLACHEA

Official of Northern Territory of Lower California Accused of Using Terroristic Methods.

THREAT OF GENERAL STRIKE NEXT MONTH

Assured of Removal of Rafael Villareal, Peasants Lift Sieges in State of Tamaulipas.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, July 27.—Threats of a nation-wide general strike against Agustin Olachea, Governor of the northern territory of Baja California, gave President Lazaro Cardenas new cause for anxiety today.

The National Federation of Workers and Peasants threatened to strike early next month unless Cardenas removed Olachea, whom the labor organization accuses of using terroristic methods against opponents.

Developments in four other states today were virtual sieges of several cities, including the capital, Ciudad Victoria, was lifted and thousands of rebellious peasants started home, confident that Cardenas would oust Governor Rafael Villareal. Reports from Tampico said the Governor would resign soon, having been unable to answer charges of "oppression" lodged against him.

Tabasco—Tomas Garrido Canabal, his 12-year state dictatorship ended by Cardenas' intervention to remove "Garrido's Governor," Manuel Lora, said he would not flee into exile. He said he would stay in Tabasco and "show that I can take it."

Queretaro—A permanent session of the Federal Congress prepared to meet Tuesday to consider impeaching Gov. Saturnino Osorio, charged with homicide.

Chihuahua—Gov. Rodrigo Quedo was confronted by agrarians who protested to headquarters of the National Revolutionary (Government) Party against his administration, alleging favoritism and misgovernment.

EMPEROR SELASSIE ONCE OFFERED LEAGUE A LION

Sir Eric Drummond Gave Thanks, but Lacking Zoo Facilities He Accepted Rhinos' Horns.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, July 27.—Once upon a time the Emperor of Ethiopia offered a lion to the League of Nations.

The League was embarrassed, for it has no zoo. Only recently a zoo was opened by the city of Geneva, and had the offer of a living lion come now the League could nobly have placed the animal under the protection of the municipality.

The offer was made some eight years ago when the Emperor Haile Selassie was the pretender to the throne and was known as Ras Tafari. He came to the League in person and was received and shown over the League building by Secretary-General Sir Eric Drummond. When the visit was over the Ethiopian Prince said to Sir Eric: "I would like to send you a lion for the League."

Sir Eric, a skillful diplomat, who is now British Ambassador to Italy, thanked the future King of Kings for his handsome offer. But where was one to keep the lion? The Prince saw the point.

Finally a compromise was reached. The Prince presented the League Council with a big inkstand which is adorned with huge rhinoceros horns.

FEDERAL HOUSING CHIEF SAYS DEPRESSION HAS BEEN BROKEN

Stewart McDonald Bases Assertion on Rise in Home Building Activity.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—An assertion that the "backbone of this terrible depression has been definitely broken" tonight came from Stewart McDonald, acting Federal Housing Administrator. McDonald, who spoke over the radio as part of the Master Builder program, based his statement on what he listed as a progressive rise in home building activity since early spring.

McDonald said development of the new, long-term, self-liquidating mortgage method had aided business.

"During the three months ending June 30 over $132,000,000 in home loan mortgages were selected for appraisal as being apparently suited for mutual mortgage insurance under the Federal Housing Administration plan, and when more, each succeeding month has shown a big gain over the previous month."

"Only last week the Bureau of Labor statistics of the Department of Labor reported increases during the month of June in residential building activity of more than 224 per cent compared with June a year ago."

Simonson of New York took the lead in the third round of play in the Masters' Division of the American Chess Federation congress tournament here today. Arthur Duke of Portland, Ore., is second, tied with Reuben Fine of New York.

YUGOSLAV PREMIER WARNS AGAINST RESTORING HAPSBURGS

Speaks at Belgrade Station Where Declaration of War Was Read 21 Years Ago.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, July 27.—Premier Milan Stoyadinovich, standing on the platform at Belgrade from which the Hapsburg monarchy's declaration of war was read on July 28, 1914, reminded Yugoslavians today that dangers accompany any dreams Austrians may have for restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty.

He spoke on the eve of the twenty-first anniversary of the declaration of war with Serbia, an event which led to a world conflict.

Stoyadinovich also addressed the Senate. His Government is satisfied, he said, that Austria does not intend to follow the restitution of property to the once-ruling family with restoration of their throne.

In Austria, meanwhile, word was passed around quietly that monarchist propaganda should be softened in all provinces. Burgo-masters were instructed, furthermore, to "postpone" any further grants of honorary citizenship to Archduke Otto, Hapsburg pretender to the throne. Two Austrian provinces already have taken such action.

"Out to Lunch," Sign Halts Robbers.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Four men drove up to the Mount Prospect State Bank today, waved residents of the suburb aside with a machine gun, but stopped short at the bank entrance. The door was locked, and in its glass center hung a sign: "Out to lunch." The four ran back to their car and drove away.

$152,000 REMODELING JOB AT WHITE HOUSE BEGUN

Modern Fittings for Kitchens and Butler's Pantry Being Installed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—President Roosevelt's regular kitchen has gone out of commission, as the beginning of an overhauling of the White House which will cost $152,000. Until Congress adjourns the President will get along with a third floor electric stove that can cook for three, no more.

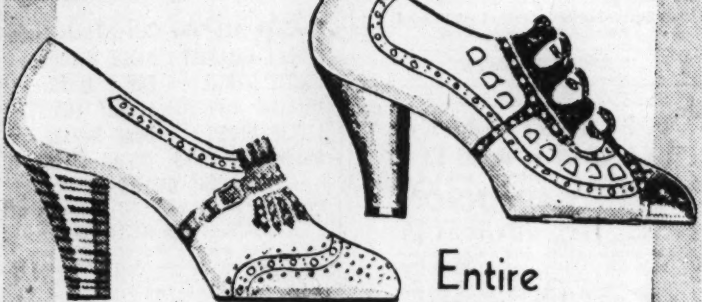

The remodeling within the mansion proper will bring the below-stairs kitchens and main floor butler's pantry up-to-date, including electric stoves, coffee urns, ice cream cabinets, food warmers. All stoves, cabinets, counters for preparation of salads and all refrigerators will be of white porcelain; all working surfaces of stainless steel.

Drunken Woman Driver Fined.
SALEM, Mass., July 27.—Mrs. Alyce A. Vickery, 35 years old, who said she was the wife of a Coronado (Cal.) surgeon, was arrested early today on charges of drunkenness and driving when drunk. She pleaded guilty of driving when drunk and was fined $50. The other charge was suspended. Police said the Vickery family was spending the summer at Rye Beach, N. H., near Portsmouth.

CONFESSION READ AT MURDER TRIAL OF PEORIA MAN

Statement in Killing of Mildred Hallmark Admitted Despite His Counsel's Objections.

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., July 27.—A statement signed by Gerald Thompson, setting forth how he assaulted and killed Mildred Hallmark, 19 years old, in Springfield cemetery, was admitted to evidence today in his murder trial.

The defendant, on the witness stand, protested that he had been tricked into signing the statement and his counsel objected against its admission. But Circuit Judge Joseph Dally ruled against them and State's Attorney Edwin V. Chapman read the document. Spectators, most of them women, jammed the courtroom. The victim's father, John Hallmark, his face flushed and his fists clenched, was led from the chamber by an assistant prosecutor.

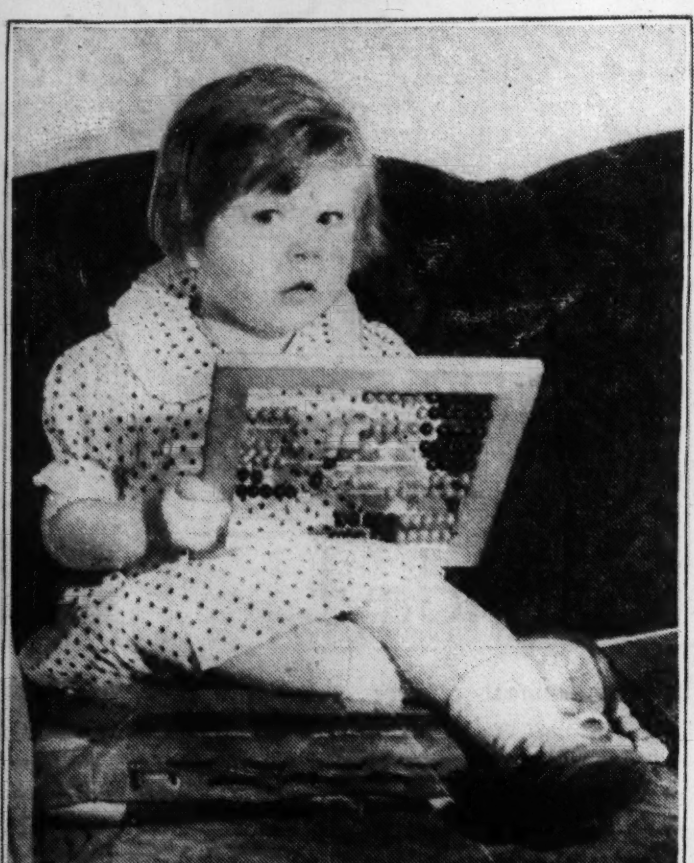

Thompson looked toward the floor and scarcely moved as Chapman read the statement, which police said disclosed attacks by Thompson on 16 other girls and attempted attacks on 64 more.

Statement by Thompson. The confession related how Thompson induced Miss Hallmark to enter his automobile on the pretext of driving her home last June 16. Instead, the statement said, he drove her to the cemetery, and "tried to pet her."

Miss Hallmark resisted, the confession set forth, but the 26-year-old machinist forced her into the back seat.

"I choked her to keep her from screaming," it went on. "She bit me on the thumb. She scratched me. I hit her on the jaw and she

JOAN MCGLAMERY

OF San Francisco, who has shown an exceptional knowledge for a child of her age. For 15 minutes, the other day, her father took her from room to room in their home, and not once did she fail to name any of the objects to which he pointed. She can also count to ten, spell her first name, tell her address, sing "Yankee Doodle," and recite without error numerous nursery rhymes. Her father, Alexander McGlamery, said she was now beginning to write.

laid back in the seat. Then I attacked her.

"In all this struggling around her clothes got torn. I thought I would undress her and hide her clothes so she could not be identified. I cut her clothes with a scissors and took off her shoes and stockings."

Thompson, pictured as a sexual monomaniac by Defense Attorney Ben Thurman, said he "didn't stop" to ascertain if Miss Hallmark was dead but "I listened to her heart in the car but could not tell whether it was her heart or my own beating."

The confession related how Thompson threw the girl's garments into the culvert and "went home and went to bed."

He was accustomed to keeping a diary in which he recorded his attacks, according to the confession, but did not make a record of this one because he was "afraid to."

Taking the witness stand for questioning in the absence of the jury, regarding the circumstances under which he signed the confession, Thompson charged he had been tricked into believing he would be let off with a life stop.

He did not repudiate the confession, however, admitting he had read it before signing, and recalling he had told police freely about "all those attacks."

Thompson said he had been arrested in the early morning. He had had nothing to eat, he told the court.

"They (the police) questioned me about girls in my diary," he said, "and I admitted the attacks on them but I denied having picked up Miss Hallmark."

"The police told me, 'We can get you two or three consecutive sentences on these charges, but if you confess to this you'll only get one sentence.'"

Testifying calmly, and addressing himself to the judge, the defendant said detectives told him: "You know, Jerry, if we book you on a murder charge this jail won't be strong enough to hold you."

"How would your poor old grand-mother like to see you hanging to a tree?"

"What promise did I make you?" Champion asked Thompson.

"Well, murder was hardly ever mentioned," the defendant answered. "I was under the impression I was going to get life for all these attacks—and the pictures, and I wanted to clear up this case."

"Didn't I inform you that you had been accused of Mildred's murder?" "Yes."

"And didn't you have lunch Friday while you were being questioned?" "No, I had nothing from about 7:30 Thursday night until about 6 Friday night."

PIERSON OUT ON BOND PENDING HIS RETRIAL

Defendant in Hotel Fire Deaths Is at Liberty First Time Since 1931.

For the first time since Jan. 23, 1931, Ralph Pierson, former part owner of the Buckingham Hotel Annex, is at liberty. He was released on $75,000 bail by Circuit Judge McAfee yesterday, pending his third trial on a charge of first degree murder growing out of the Annex fire of Dec. 5, 1927, in which seven lives were lost.

Pierson was convicted and received a death sentence Jan. 23, 1931, but won a reversal in the Missouri Supreme Court because of prejudicial remarks by the prosecutor. He was again convicted in May, 1933, and sentenced to life imprisonment. He was serving the sentence in the State penitentiary when the Supreme Court again reversed the conviction, July 11, on the ground the trial court erred in refusing to allow the defense to attempt to prove a State's witness at the first trial was insane when she testified. He was removed to the city jail last week.

Although the Supreme Court denied bail to Pierson pending his second trial, the State did not oppose his release yesterday. Assistant Circuit Attorney McLaughlin explaining its case had been changed somewhat.

The sureties, who qualified for a total of $122,000 in real estate above liabilities, were: John L. and Grace K. Pierson, a brother and sister, 7464 Warner avenue, Richmond Heights; Ruth P. and Frank S. Coddington, 6316 Faulkner drive, Clayton; and Dominick Tarella, 3731 Westminster place.

Ex-Convict Freed of Tax Charge. By the Associated Press.

ELKINS, W. Va., July 27.—A jury acquitted William "Big Bill" Lias, Wheeling, in United States District Court tonight on a charge of defrauding the Government out of $21,000 tax on his 1931 income. The Government sought to prove Lias had made $100,000 in a numbers game while in the Petersburg (W. Va.) Reformatory serving a 10-year law violation sentence, and failed to pay tax on it.

Former Stenographer Testifies as to Book, Said to List His Beer Profits.

By the Associated Press.

MALONE, N. Y., July 27.—Marguerite Scholl, former stenographer of Dutch Schultz, took the witness stand today at his tax evasion trial and identified the "black ledger" as a book that was guarded in a secret drawer at her one time employer's Bronx beer headquarters.

Miss Scholl, 21 years old, testified she directed Federal agents to the book's hiding place. This is the ledger in which the Government contends Schultz kept a record of the profits from his million-dollar-a-year beer business.

It was the first time the ledger, which the defense has strenuously fought to keep out of evidence, has appeared in Schultz's second trial.

It was also the first appearance in the present hearing of Miss Scholl, who was the Government's star witness at the Syracuse trial that ended in disagreement last April.

Miss Scholl was asked to tell about the Schultz payroll.

"There were 75 to 100 names on it," she said.

"Which person received the highest salary?" asked Assistant District Attorney John H. Burke Jr.

"Schultz," she replied.

Schultz sat at the defense table scribbling all the while on a piece of paper. Although Miss Scholl glanced at him frequently, he did not look in her direction.

She named George Varlas, Dick Wolf, Henry Stevens and Charlie Miller as men who were on the Schultz payroll. Miller was one of two Schultz men who were called earlier in the day to testify against their former employer. Both were returned to jail because of their failure to answer questions. Miller professed to have a poor memory, but Rocco di Larmi, the other, resisted in a surly manner all of Judge Frederick H. Bryant's demands that he testify.

After Di Larmi refused to answer a question as to whether he knew Schultz, Judge Bryant ordered him sent back to jail "until he purges himself of contempt."

OVERLAND man and his mother, a resident of Little Rock, Ark., who were reunited last week after a separation of 23 years. Maher was left by his mother, at the age of six weeks, in a St. Louis foundling home. Eventually he was adopted by a family, but did not learn until his twenty-third birthday that his mother was still alive. The mother, who was in destitute circumstances when she left her son here, returned to get her child after she had found work, but was told he was dead. She lived in that belief until Maher, after a search, found her last week. Maher is an assistant superintendent of the National Insurance Co. branch office at 2806 North Grand boulevard.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, July 27.—Charging Ernest Vajda, Hungarian film writer, with "oppression, fraud and malice" in causing their arrest and perjury charges, Vilma Aknay and Sari Fedak, Hungarian actresses, sued him today for $300,000 each.

Miss Aknay and Miss Fedak were arrested after Miss Aknay filed a breach of promise suit with Miss Fedak named as her principal witness. Vajda countered with charges of conspiracy and perjury. Later they were acquitted of the conspiracy charge. Miss Fedak was acquitted of the perjury charge and a similar accusation against Miss Aknay was dismissed.

G. O. P. Leaders on Cruise.

BALTIMORE, July 27.—Gov.

Harry W. Nice and other Eastern Republican leaders today set out upon a week-end Chesapeake Bay cruise offering opportunity for informal conferences which, despite denial, were expected to have a bearing upon the party's 1936 campaign plans. Harry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said that he "came along to fish." George H. Moses, former United States Senator from New Hampshire, said that he was prepared to do "a lot of listening" on the cruise.

KILLER OF SON-IN-LAW HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Homicide Verdict Returned Against George Kappen in Death of W. H. Porter.

A Coroner's verdict of homicide, holding George Kappen, 63-year-old unemployed watchman, for the fatal shooting Friday morning of his son-in-law, William H. Porter, was returned after an inquest yesterday. Kappen was held without bond, awaiting action by the grand jury Sept. 12. He lived with Porter and his daughter, Porter's wife, at 5479 Beacon avenue. Under the hallucination that they intended to desert him, he killed his son-in-law with a revolver and inflicted a minor bullet wound on his daughter. Once during the inquest he stood up to give his name in response to a question. Seemingly he did not comprehend when asked if he had counsel. He had none. Assistant Circuit Attorney Murphy told him he would not be required to make a statement and he resumed his seat. Policemen testified as to the facts in their report, as published. The only other witness was Kappen's son, William, his only relative at the inquest. The son testified that he heard the shots from his second-floor room and mistook them for a gas explosion. Starting down, he passed his father coming upstairs, carrying a revolver. "Father," he related asking, "What are you doing with that gun?" but he added that there was no answer. However, the witness said his father handed him a pocketbook containing some money as he went by. Deputy Coroner Sweeney inquired whether the young Kappen knew of any household trouble over money. The witness said he knew of none and had not known whether his father had any money or had given the Porters money. Family Had Planned Trip. Because the family had planned a short trip to the Lake of the Ozarks, he continued, the elder Kappen had complained, fearing he would be left uncared for. Apparently, the son said, he did not believe they would keep their promise to have a woman cook and look after the house. After the jury had stepped out to deliberate, Murphy inquired informally of George Kappen about money matters. Kappen told him that when he went to a hospital in March for observation he had given Mr. and Mrs. Porter $1900 to keep for him. He asserted that they for him. He asserted that they would not return it when he came home, but had used $900 of it to buy an automobile. Kappen then declined to answer further questions. FIRE DAMAGES LAUNDRY TRUCK; POLICE SUSPECT INCENDIARISM A truck belonging to the Cascade Wet Wash Laundry Co., 2855 Victor street, burned yesterday in the 3400 block of North Eleventh street. Albert Shock, the driver, who resides at 3620 Meramec street, was making a delivery at the time the fire started. A resident of the block saw the truck in flames and turned in the alarm. Police, who estimated the damage at $200, believe that the truck was fired as a result of labor troubles.

SUIT TO FORECLOSE ON KNITTING MILLS

Action Under $600,000 Mortgage Bond Issue Filed Against Chester Company.

Suit to foreclose on 10 factory properties of the Chester Knitting Mills, Inc., under a $600,000 mortgage bond issue was filed in Federal Court yesterday by the St. Louis Union Trust Co., successor trustee, against the company and its receivers. The petition was filed under leave granted by Judge Moore. The plants are at 3864 Laclede avenue, Waterloo, Chester, Effingham, Pinckneyville and Nashville, Ill., and Rome, Ga., and on leaseholds at Belleville, Red Bud, Ill., and Charles City, Ia. The bonds were issued July 1, 1926, and, according to the petition, $155,000 worth of them were paid off, but there has been a default in principal and interest amounting to $100,000 since July 1, 1931. The petition said a majority of the bondholders were of the opinion foreclosure should be instituted. Thomas B. McPheeters, counsel for the trustee, expressed the opinion that the properties were worth $250,000 to $300,000 now, while $445,000 of the bonds remained due. Since June 15, 1931, the company has been operated by J. L. Gauen and George W. Rodway, receivers appointed in Federal Court in Illinois. Gauen was president and Rodway an accountant. The company's trouble was attributed, at the time the receivership was instituted, to the switch in public preference from cotton hosiery, which it formerly manufactured, to silk stockings. Big Italian Steel Firms Merge. ROME, July 27. — The official Gazette announced today Italy's three largest steel companies, Cogne, Aosta and La Thuile will merge. All the companies have headquarters in Turin.

DIRECTOR ERNST LUBITSCH MARRIES WRITERS' AGENT

Movie Man Wed to Vivian Gaye at Phoenix, Ariz.; Divorced From First Wife.

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 27.—Ernst Lubitsch, film director of Hollywood, Cal., and Vivian Gaye, writers' agent, were married here today by Superior Judge M. C. Niles.

They were attended by Sam Katz, producer, and his wife, Sari Maritz, actress; Mrs. N. E. Bezenet, mother of the bride, and Hans Lubitsch, nephew of the bridegroom.

Lubitsch gave his age as 43 and Miss Gaye said she was 27. She signed the license as Sanya Bezenet, her real name.

It was her first marriage. Lubitsch was divorced from his first wife, Helene, in 1930.

INDIAN TREATY BASIS OF $4,500,000 SUIT

Cherokees Allege in Court of Claims That U. S. Owes Them That Amount for Land.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—A long-forgotten treaty between the Cherokee Indians and the United States has been resurrected to justify a $4,581,600 suit against the Government.

Frank Boudinot, Cherokee tribal counsel, told today how he had worked 35 years on the claims of his tribesmen to the three Oklahoma Panhandle counties—Cimarron, Beaver and Texas—and remarked that the records through the years were conclusive that the Cherokees suffered loss of land rightfully theirs.

"I have filed our case and the next step will be the answer of the Government," Boudinot said. "There's no answer they can give. We don't have to have hearings because history and treaties of the United States are the record."

Indian Policy Involved.

The suit, pending in the Court of Claims, revolves around the Government's practice of providing a "western outlet" for the Indians beyond the land they owned and arose shortly after the Government lifted secrecy from a number of Indian treaties, the first of which was signed more than 100 years ago.

As the nation's frontier moved westward, the Cherokees' "outlet" was advanced closer to the Rocky Mountains. Finally, they were granted use of a strip the width of their nation in what is now Oklahoma to the western boundary limit of the country. Then, when the United States created the Oklahoma Territory, the Panhandle was absorbed in the new area and the Cherokees now claim they should be paid for the use of that land—a total of 3,655,280 acres.

"The value of the property of the Cherokees in the said 3,655,280 acres now comprising Beaver, Texas and Cimarron counties, Oklahoma, and heretofore known as the 'Public Land Strip,' was on May 2, 1890, $125 per acre, or $4,581,600," states the Cherokee brief. The reasonable value of the use of said property since that date has been the equivalent of 5 per cent per annum on $4,581,600.

Power Not Challenged.

The Cherokees do not dispute the power of the United States to take the "outlet" and sell it for homes to others but they declare the Government should "pay the value of the property taken from them, with 5 per cent interest per annum from May 2, 1890 (the date so taken) until paid."

Houston B. Teehee represented the Eastern or emigrant Cherokees and former Senator Robert L. Owens of Oklahoma handled preparation of the case for the Western or Old Settler Cherokees. The latter division of the tribe was moved from Georgia to Arkansas and then placed still farther west in Oklahoma.

MOTOR ROADS THROUGH CANADIAN PARK

Make Access to Some of Most Impressive Scenic Views Easy.

Jasper National Park is one of the most impressive parks in Canada both in size and in the grandeur of its mountains. About 100 miles of motor highway have been built through the park, making it possible to ride within easy view of some of the most impressive sights. A series of hairpin bends from the level of the Athabasca Valley lead directly to the moraine of the Glacier of the Angels, so called because the shape and shadows of color in the ice mass resemble an angel with outstretched wings. Sky Line Trail takes one to Maligne Canyon, the Mount Robson group and a trip about 40 miles out takes one directly to the great Columbian Icefields.

ACROSS THE BORDER

Chateau Frontenac, Quebec

A Vacation that is Different

See an old world—French Normandy villages—picturesque English countryside. Thrill to 300 years of history—the Plains of Abraham where a continent was won. St. Anne de Beaupre, world-famous shrine—Nova Scotia, land of Evangeline. Swim in salt and fresh water. FISH—HIRE—GOLF—DANCE to alluring orchestras or just loaf in the age-old peace of a Normandy in America. Again prices are low—often the cost is less than staying at home.

INCREASE IN TRAFFIC OVER WESTERN RAILROADS NOTED

The decisive increase in passenger traffic throughout the West this summer is the direct result of newspaper advertising, according to Harry G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railroad Executives.

"The recent intensive advertising campaign of the combined Western railroads in which newspapers were the principal mediums used, is considered a vital factor in the development of the present record, and the outstanding success of our effort to win public attention to improvements in rail travel indicates a general trend toward business recovery," he stated.

A Vacation that is Different

See an old world—French Normandy villages—picturesque English countryside. Thrill to 300 years of history—the Plains of Abraham where a continent was won. St. Anne de Beaupre, world-famous shrine—Nova Scotia, land of Evangeline. Swim in salt and fresh water. FISH—HIRE—GOLF—DANCE to alluring orchestras or just loaf in the age-old peace of a Normandy in America. Again prices are low—often the cost is less than staying at home.

INCREASE IN TRAFFIC OVER WESTERN RAILROADS NOTED

The decisive increase in passenger traffic throughout the West this summer is the direct result of newspaper advertising, according to Harry G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railroad Executives.

"The recent intensive advertising campaign of the combined Western railroads in which newspapers were the principal mediums used, is considered a vital factor in the development of the present record, and the outstanding success of our effort to win public attention to improvements in rail travel indicates a general trend toward business recovery," he stated.

A check with the passenger traffic managers of the principal Western lines shows an increase of 15 to 22 per cent over last year's figures.

JOHN KEANE.
Graduate of St. Louis Municipal baseball, is reported recovering in a Houston (Tex.) hospital from a fractured skull suffered when he was hit by a pitched ball in last Monday's game. He is Houston's regular shortstop and is regarded as a fine major league prospect. Keane has been in professional ball for the past four years, and played with Waynesboro, Springfield and Rochester before being sent to Houston.

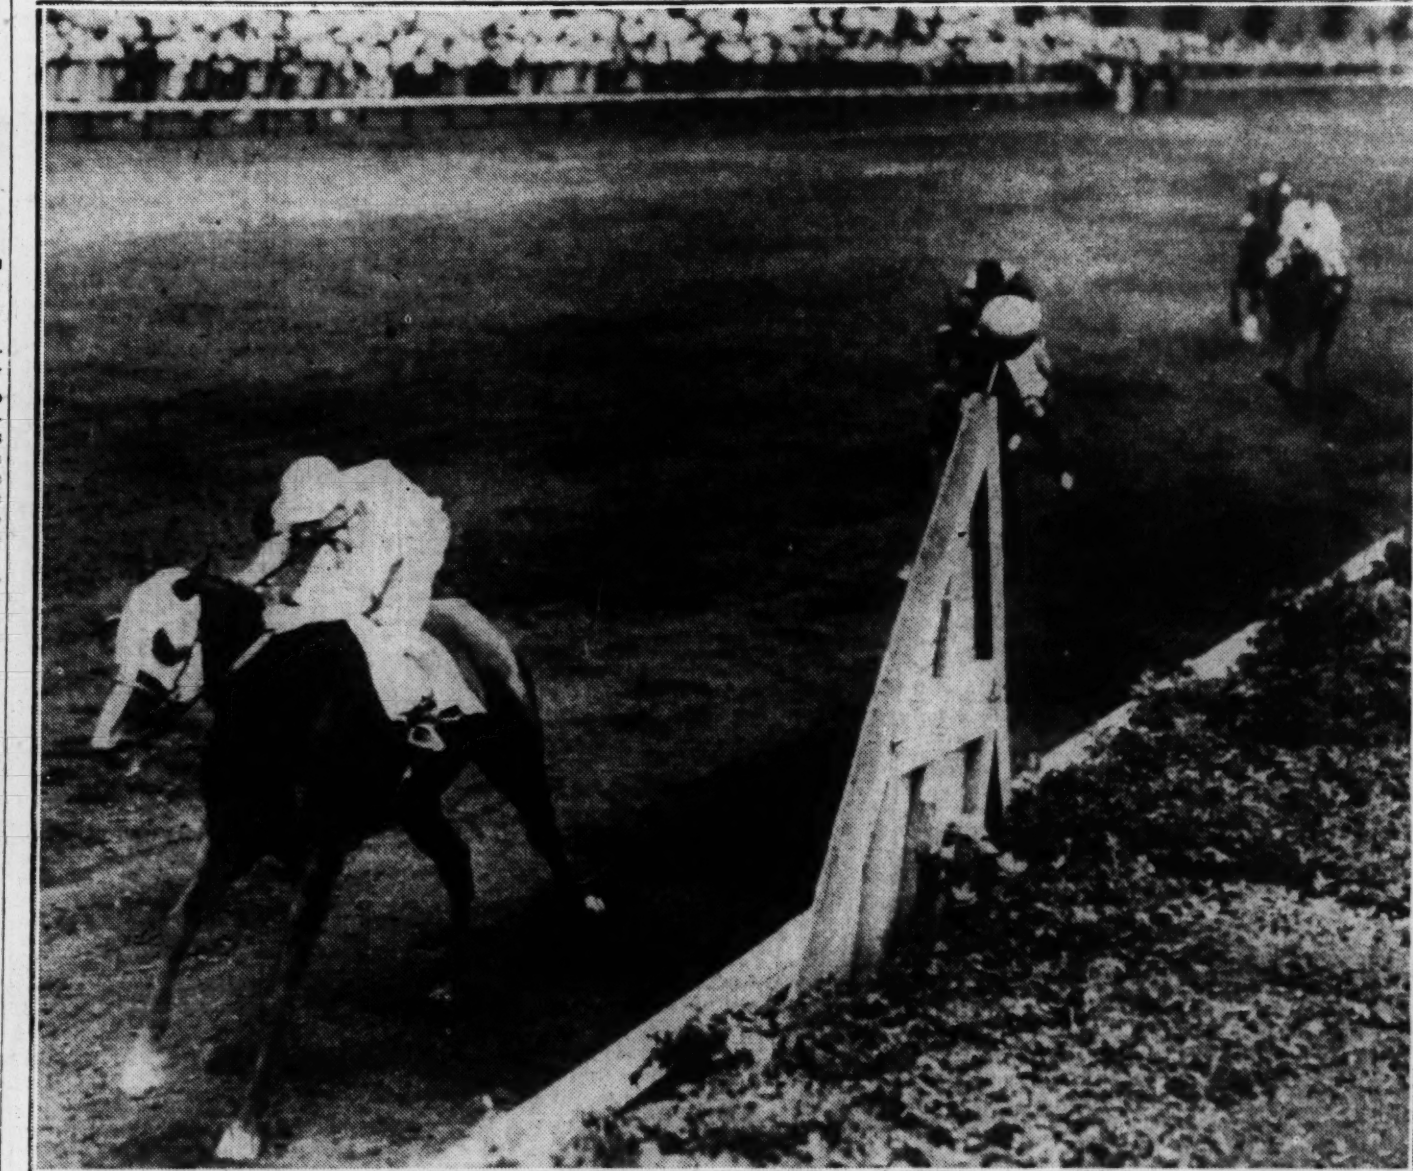

CANADIAN CREW BEATS TWO U. S. BOATS IN HENLEY

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont., July 27.—Canadian oarsmen, after years of bowing to American invaders, held their heads high tonight after smashing international victories in the forty-third Royal Canadian Henley Regatta. The home forces claimed all the major prizes in the competition.
The Hamilton Leander eight, rebuilt from the 1932 boatload that placed third to the United States and Italy in the Olympic competition, climaxed the Canadian drive by defeating the New York Athletic Club, U. S. champions, in a thrilling battle. The Canadian crew won by half a length.
Other high spots of the regatta were:
1. Charles Chuck Campbell's successful defense of his single.

ALLISON'S DEFEAT BY AUSTIN IS BLOW TO U. S.

By the Associated Press.
WIMBLEDON, England, July 27.
—There was something hauntingly familiar about the atmosphere around Wimbledon's cloistered confines tonight as America's Davis Cup tennis players, beaten in the two opening singles matches of the challenge round, tried to assume cheery fronts as they prepared to spend a quiet week-end in the country.
The official count was two to none for England, Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., and 20-year-old Don Budge of Oakland, Cal., losing to H. W. (Bunny) Austin and Fred J. Perry, respectively. The hardest blow of all was the Austin triumph, for it was hopelessly figured he would be the victim of two American victories. Instead, he took the measure of Allison in five sets, 6-2, 2-6, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5, while Budge captured the fancy of the capacity crowd of more than 15,000 by extending the sparkling Perry to four sets before bowing, 6-0, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.
A Familiar Situation.
As matters stood, the United States was in exactly the same spot it occupied a year ago, both in the matter of defeats at the end of the first day and in prospects for the next three matches. Allison's failure to "take" Austin sent America's hopes of recapturing the coveted cup, lost since 1927, down around the zero point. The American team, however, was not entirely downcast.
Budge, the "freshman" member, insisted on being aggressively confident.
"We are not beaten yet," he said determinedly.
Non-playing Capt. Joseph Wear, obviously crestfallen, echoed the freckled youngster's sentiments, but did not get anybody to take him seriously. Desperately he recalled how America lost the first two matches to Australia in the 1934 interzone final and then swept the next three to gain the challenge round.
"It can be done again," he said grimly.
Allison, however, hit the nail on the head and came closest to outlining the situation in a few words. He said:
"It looks like all I can do is come close to winning."
Representatives tried hard and glee representatives tried hard and frequently aroused unbounded hope in the breasts of several hundred supporters scattered in the big stand. One colony of Americans, in fact, attracted much attention by concerted cheering as Allison came within two points of beating.

135 POUNDS IS A FEATHER ON HIS BACK—Discovery Rumps Home

Five lengths and $8640 to the good, the champion horse of the year is shown defeating Stand Pat, Riskulus and four others in the Arlington Handicap at Chicago, yesterday. In carrying 135 pounds, he shouldered 39 pounds more than Skip It, the horse that finished fourth. It was his sixth straight victory run over five different race courses.

Discovery, due to the pace after three-eighths and raced very wide the first seven-eighths, took the ca while all strongly restrained on stretch turn, went to inside after drawing clear fast under light pressure and was well in hand as he continued to draw away the final eighth. Stand Pat went around Riskulus on far turn, saved ground thereafter and, while no match for winner, held on with fine courage. Riskulus on inside throughout, was under urging after half a mile and failed to keep up the last three-eighths, but was best of others. Skip It, away in a lunge, showed a good effort. Late Date lost ground and held on fairly well. Watch Him was far back after half a mile. Count Arthur being poorly and quite badly after three-quarters.

Mexican Infielder, Gomez, Makes Debut With Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.
JOSE GOMEZ, young Mexican, former member of his country's national champion Azteca team, made his debut as a major leaguer here today when he went to second base for Jimmy Wilson's Phillies. He handled four chances without an error but he failed to get a hit in three times at bat. He grounded out twice and flied out once.
Gomez has had considerable experience against Class A and AA competition in the past four years and recently has been starring for the Azteca in its tour of the United States.
Gomez played with the Mexican team at Belleville, Ill., a month ago when his club beat the Stags, 20 to 8.

GROVE LOSES IN 15 INNINGS AFTER HE HITS HOMER WITH THREE ON

By the Associated Press.
PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—The Philadelphia Athletics and Boston Red Sox played well into the evening in dividing a doubleheader today. The Mackmen won the first game, 7 to 6, in 15 innings, the visitors taking the second, 2 to 0.
Lefty Grove, who hit a homer with the bases filled in the second inning, went the distance in the opener and saw his winning streak of six straight shattered when McNair singled, sending Cramer home with the winning run in the fifteenth inning. Carl Reynolds' homer tied the score at 5-5 in the eighth inning and both sides scored a run in the fourteenth.
Wes Ferrell, in shutting the Mack out with three hits in the second game, ended a jinx of five years' standing. It was the first time he had defeated the Athletics at Shibe Park since the season of 1930. Ferrell, opening the sixth

St. Louis Awarded 1936 Convention of Soccer Group

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 27.—The United States Football Association which concluded its twenty-second annual meeting here this afternoon will hold its 1936 meeting in St. Louis on invitation of the Municipal Soccer League.
Re-election of its national commission featured the closing session of the soccer group this afternoon. The officials are: J. J. Barriskill of New York, president; Joseph Triner, Chicago, first vice-president; Harold Callowhill, Baltimore, second vice-president; J. J. MacEwan, Cleveland, third vice-president and W. T. Angus, Cleveland, treasurer.
The past president of the U. S. F. A. will in future sit as a member, without vote, on the national commission.
Terms of the secretary and his first assistant in future will be for three years. Much constructive legislation, including a proposed new method of developing an Olympic team and important changes in National Open and National Amateur cup regulations, was enacted. New York made tentative reservation of the privilege of having the 1938 meeting, the twenty-fifth of the organization.

California School Girl Indifferent To Olympic Bid

OAKLAND, Cal., July 27.
LOOKING UP from her books at Mills College for Girls here today, Frauline Helen Meyer received with mild surprise the word she had been invited to train with the German Olympic fencing team.
"I have not formally received any such invitation," she said. "Right now, I cannot say whether or not I would accept the bid."
Miss Meyer stated she is non-Aryan descent, and is partly Jewish.
News of her invitation from The German Athletic Committee she characterized as "possible propaganda." She expressed no sentiments—pro or con—regarding Hitler or his regime.

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.
PITTSBURGH, July 27.—Pie Traynor's Pirates bunched eight of their 10 hits off Phil Collins and Jess Haines in two innings this afternoon, turned five of seven bases on balls into runs and scored their ninth straight victory as they gave the Cardinals their fifth straight defeat, 10 to 4.

Fortunately, the friendly Brooklyn Dodgers trimmed the Giants, so the world champions lost no ground to the league leaders, remaining 3½ games behind Bill Terry's team.
The Cubs, by winning a doubleheader from Cincinnati, increased their second place lead over the Cardinals to two and a half games. The Cubs reduced the Giants' first place lead to one game.
Darrell' Elijah Blanton, who pitched for the Buccaneers, was not as troublesome as in the three other games he won from the Redbirds, but misfortune continued to dog the Redbirds, and Blanton had a commanding lead before the contest reached the half-way mark. Base hits bounded just out of reach of St. Louis defenders, and a momentary fumble in the first inning prevented Phil Collins from emerging from the frame unscathed.
Blanton struck in Pinch.
Then when the Pirate defense faltered in the second inning and the Cardinals had a fine chance to overcome the Pirate lead, the Redbirds could not solve Blanton's delivery and only one run materialized after they had filled the bases with nobody out.
Fidgety Phil, who was purchased from the Phillies in the hope that he might fill the vacancy created by the sale of Tex Carleton for a couple of messes of minor league potage, did not have his control and you could almost hear the sighs of relief from the Redbird infielders when he finally was withdrawn for a pinch hitter and their day's work was made not so dangerous.
With one out in the first inning, Lloyd Waner walked and Paul Waner almost took a leg off Rip Collins with a double down the right field line. Vaughan was passed intentionally, filling the bases, and Yung hit a double play grounder to third. However, the Wild Horse fumbled and had to be satisfied with touching third to force Paul Waner, Lloyd Waner scoring. Phil Collins then threw a wild pitch past Davis and Vaughan scored from second with the second run.

CUBS WIN TWO FROM REDS, CUT GIANTS' LEAD TO ONE GAME
By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, July 27.—The Cubs ran roughshod over the Cincinnati Reds today to win both games of a doubleheader, 9 to 8 and 12 to 1, and to reduce the New York Giants' league lead to a single game.
The twin triumph made it eight in a row for the Cubs and 21 out of their last 24 games and put them 2½ games in front of the third-place St. Louis Cardinals. Both the Giants and the Cardinals lost today.
Chicago had to come from behind in the first game.

RED BIRD NOTES

PITTSBURGH, July 27.
BILL WALKER and Dizzy Dean probably will oppose the Pirates tomorrow afternoon in the first major league doubleheader ever played in Pittsburgh on a Sunday. Guy Bush and Mace Brown are due for the Buccaneers.
The series opener attracted about 7000 customers.
The Cardinals are making their first all-star trip in some time. Not a wife in two carloads.
Terry Moore and Johnny Rothrock exchanged places in the Cardinal batting order, Frisch figuring it might add a little strength near the bottom of the list.

SCHMELING'S DEMAND FOR $150,000 HALTS NEGOTIATIONS BROWNS

'HE'S OFF LIST' AND 'TERMS ARE RIDICULOUS,' SAY TWO PROMOTERS

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, July 27.—Max Schmeling, the temperamental German, broke his silence today and talked himself right out of the American heavyweight picture.

He demanded such a fancy figure to come to New York to fight either Max Baer or the sensational Joe Louis, that Jimmy Johnson and Mike Jacobs, rival metropolitan promoters, threw up their hands and said they guessed they'd have to try to struggle along without the German financier.

"$150,000 Erre of Taxes."

All Herr Schmeling wanted was: A flat guarantee of $150,000 (free of taxes) deposited in an Amsterdam bank in advance of the fight; 35 per cent of the gate (also free of taxes) and $5000 for training expenses.

"I'm through," said Mike Jacobs, who was working on a Schmeling-Louis match in the interests of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club. "I've crossed that guy off my list."

"The terms are ridiculous," exploded Jimmy Johnson, Madison Square Garden impresario as he saw his chances for a Baer-Schmeling show knocked higher than a kite. "He talks like he was Dempsey and this is 1929."

Joe Jacobs, Max's manager, put on the hot spot by the German's jawing around, was aghast when he read his warrior's cable. He was disappointed and disgusted.

"I am convinced he's been giving us all the old run-around, including me, who put him in the championship," he said. "He's just been stalling."

$100,000 Offered.

Schmeling's decision followed upon several days of frantic cabling back and forth across the Atlantic. First it was indicated one promoter would win out and then the other. Also, Schmeling talked personally to both promoters during the negotiations.

The Garden, it was revealed, agreed to a flat guarantee of $100,000 and a third of the gate. The Twentieth Century offered a like percentage and was willing to post $150,000 as an evidence of good faith, but not as a guarantee. Schmeling wouldn't gamble on the weather, an injury to his opponent, or anything else. He held out for a guarantee and a bigger cut than either promoter was authorized to offer.

Developments followed swiftly on the heels of today's broadside from Berlin.

The Twentieth Century Club said it would go right ahead with plans to feature the Detroit "Brown Bomber" in a big show here in September and hinted it might seek Max Baer as Louis' opponent.

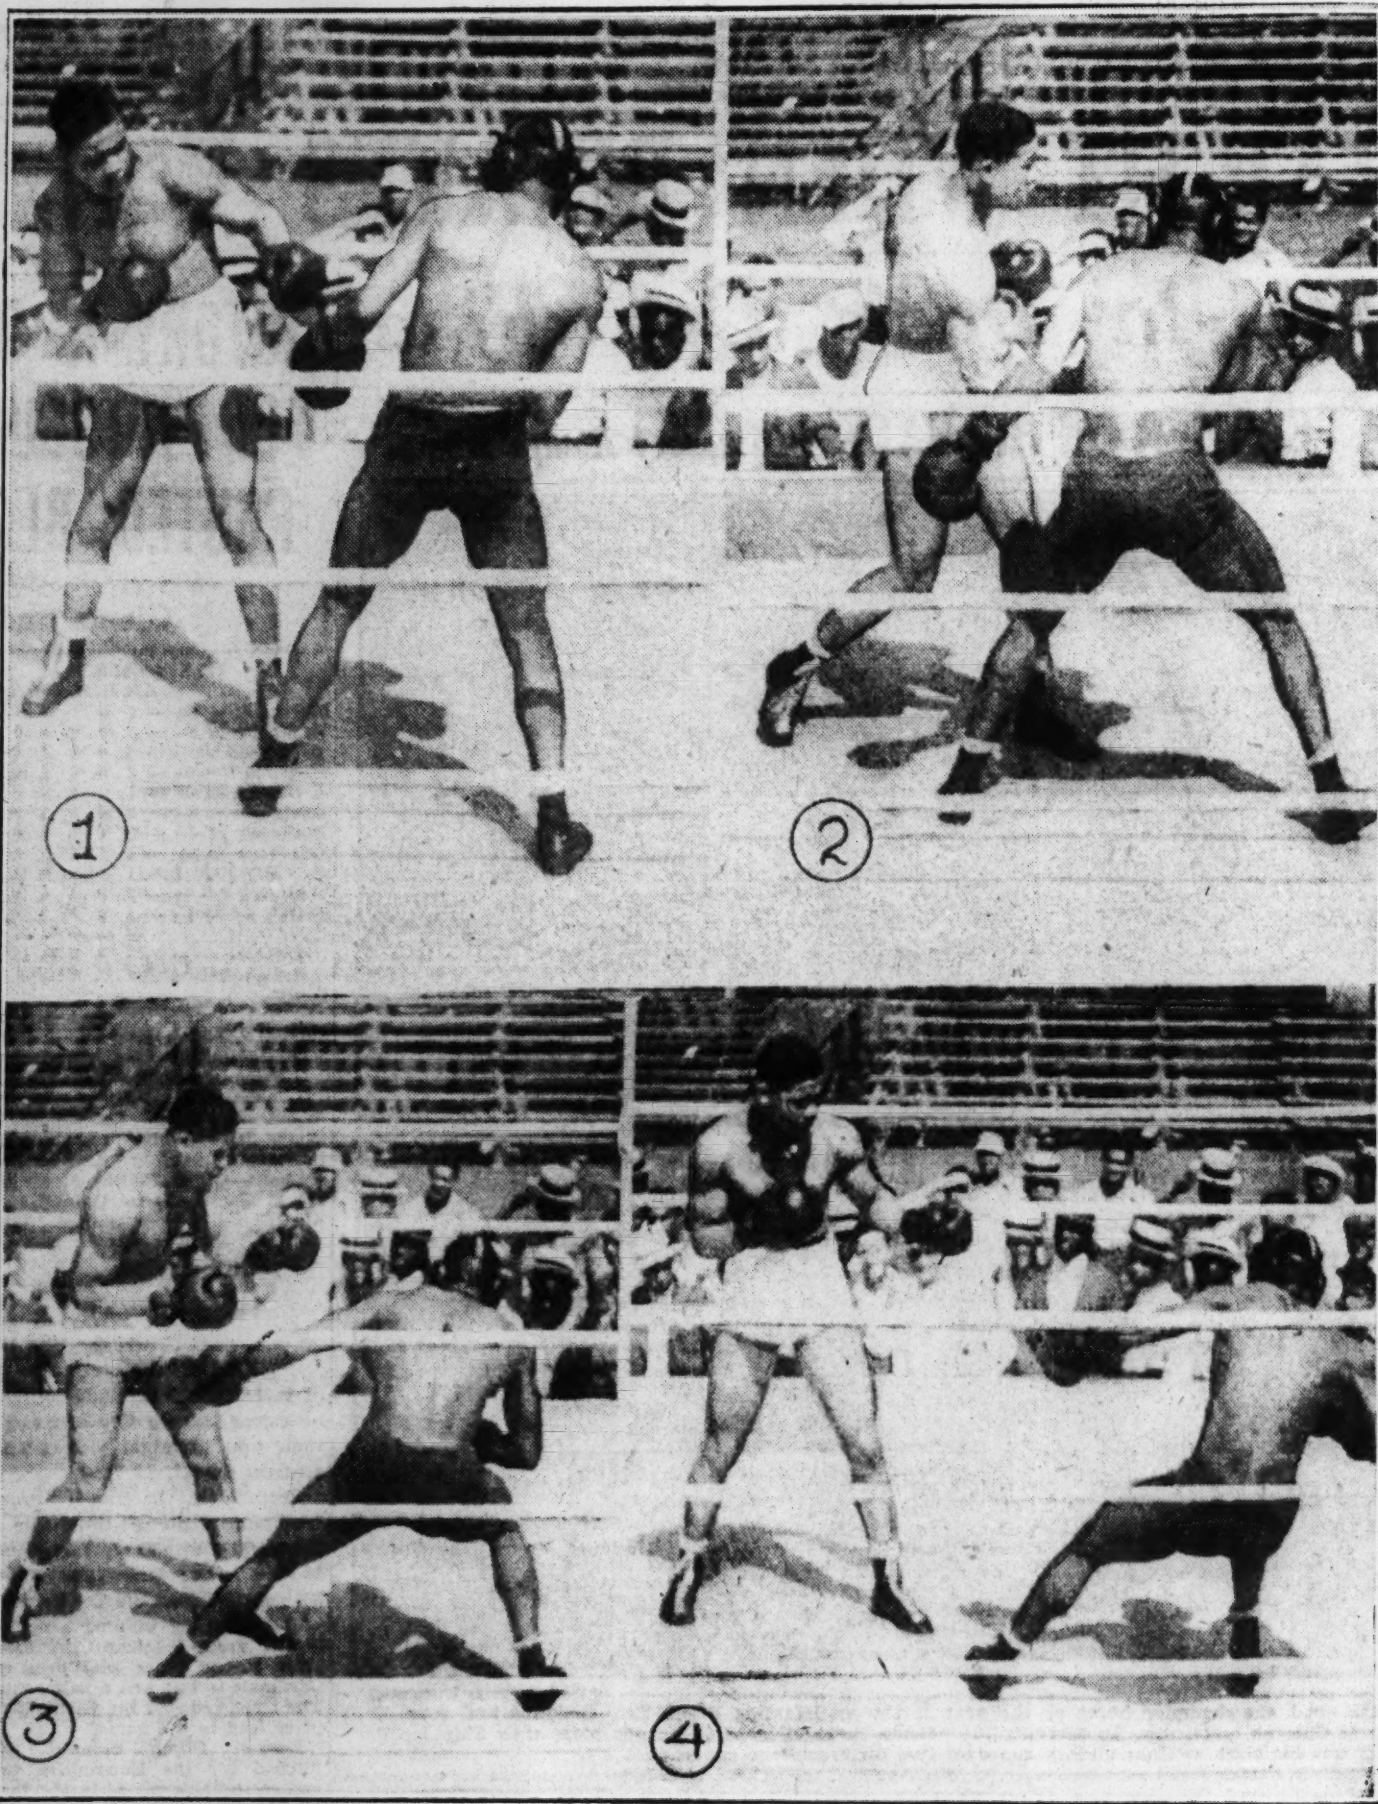

Baer has an agreement to fight for Madison Square Garden, but it is believed this agreement is contingent on the Garden getting Schmeling as an opponent.

If Baer is not available, Mike Jacobs plans to bring in Arty Lasky or some other good heavyweight, to oppose the Negro.

Johnson is uncertain as to the future. He still would like to match Baer and Schmeling, with the winner to fight James J. Braddock next summer, but this is out unless the German comes down to earth when he talks figures.

Johnson withheld comment on the gossip the Twentieth Century would try to sign Max Baer.

Professionalism Pays Babe!

THE Babe turned professional. She kept on turning: Basketball, baseball, track, billiards, golf—anything the Babe could do, she tried professionally. And the net result is this, according to a dispatch which we have before us: "Babe Didrikson has earned between $35,000 and $25,000 in the two years since she turned professional. She has invested in annuity bonds and figures that in two more years if she continues her present course, she will have a monthly income from her investment of $412."

Could anyone really expect the average person to prefer amateurism to independence, when there's no crime or offense of any description in turning professional?

Don't bring up the cases of Cochet and Perry as amateur purists, because they may not apply. Cochet hung on for a time, but turned pro last year and was sorry he hadn't done it sooner. Perry, we predict, will turn professional after the 1935 Davis cup campaign.

If he doesn't, it is almost a sure shot that some form of compensation is being provided for him to offset the bids by the promoters.

Those Olympic Purists.

WELL admit that the commercial idea seems a bit crummy at first, if we hark back to those ancient B. C. Olympic times when athletes came long distances, at their own expense, to compete in the Olympic events.

If they won, a wreath of leaves was their reward and not a contract for $15,000 a year and bonus.

But we also must recognize that there were no promoters jingling drachmae and talents by the thousand, to shake the Olympic idealists' determination. Virtue is

MANGIN WINS SEABRIGHT BOWL IN 3-HOUR FINAL

By the Associated Press.
SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 27.—Gregory S. Mangin of Newark and Mrs. Ethel Burkhardt Arnold of Los Angeles, closed out a week of brilliant performances in the forty-eighth annual Seabright invitation tennis tournament today by victories in the men's and women's singles finals.

Mangin, the national indoor champion, won his first leg on the huge silver bowl, by outlasting Wilmer Hines Columbia (S.C.) youth in a torrid five-set battle that lasted nearly three hours.

The scores were 6-8, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5. Mangin repeatedly coming from behind and reaching a climax at the very end when he won the twelfth game on Hines' service by a love score.

The tiny Los Angeles matron, who has clinched a place on the U. S. Wightman Cup team by her sensational playing here and at Manchester, Mass., lost only one game in beating Gracy Wheeler, Santa Monica (Cal.) miss, in the women's final. She won the first set 6-1 and the second 6-0, taking about half an hour to capture her second final in two weeks. She defeated Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabry of Brookline, Mass. The nation's No. 2 ace, in the Manchester final.

Because Berkeley Bell of New York was injured in an automobile accident in Asbury Park early today, he was unable to appear in the men's doubles and mixed doubles finals. The trophies in the men's went to Frankie Parker of Spring Lake and John Hope Doeg of Rumson, and the mixed doubles award went to Mrs. Marjorie Glendon Van Ryn of Philadelphia and John McDiarmid of Fort Worth, Tex.

Bell, winner of the singles last year, was Mangin's partner in the men's doubles and had reached the mixed final with Mrs. Dorothy Andrus of New York.

Retains Tennis Title.

HUNTSVILLE, Ont., July 27.—Tom Veach of Cleveland won the Northern Ontario singles tennis title for the second straight year today, defeating Young Harold Gausby of Hamilton in the finals. The scores were 6-2, 6-2, 6-4.

Doubles Match Tomorrow.

The rival players will rest over the Sabbath, resuming the international court conflict Monday when the doubles teams will get into action. Uncle Sam will be represented by the veteran combination of Allison and Johnny Van Ryn of Philadelphia opposed to George Patrick Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey. The American team is favored in this encounter. The concluding singles will be played Tuesday with today's lineup reversed. There were few willing even to suggest that Allison and Budge would take both remaining singles although Budge possibly will subdue Austin.

But the famous "Budge" who introduced short pants to big time tennis and made them stick did not look like a world-beater against Allison. He was lucky to win after the 31-year-old Texan veteran led 5-4 in the deciding set and was within two points of victory.

Bernie Bierman of Minnesota, yesterday's leader, was fourth with 135,775, and Frank Thomas of Alabama, second yesterday, was fifth at 135,437. Bo McMillin of Indiana, remained sixth with a 126,629 total.

On to Berlin!

GOING back to the Olympics. Let's hop over to Germany where the great stadium and the Olympic village are taking form for the 1936 revival.

Despite the recent talk of America's withdrawal, due to race and religious discrimination by Germany, that country is reported to be a beehive of organized athletic activity. The youth of the entire nation is being divided, subdivided and sifted to find the athletic gems that are to shine for Der Fuehrer next summer.

If there is potential talent in Germany it cannot possibly escape the intensive scrutiny to which the athletes of that nation are being subjected.

Still, it is expected that, despite the efforts of the past three years, Germany will not be very formidable in the track and field games. They have good men, but America, Finland, Japan, Italy and France will have better.

COFFMAN FAILS TO GO AN INNING; PEPPER KNOCKS TWO-RUN HOMER

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, July 27.—The White Sox of Chicago in the opener of a four-game series. All four reasons were pitchers—Dick Coffman, Al Smith, and Russ Adair. Fisher for the Browns. Fisher was good except in two spots while the Brownie trio pitched inharmoniously most of the time.

Coffman was chosen to start and that's about all he did for the Sox. He showed their pleasure in meeting him by hammering out four runs with only one out in the first inning. Thomas, his first relief, stopped the carnage temporarily, but himself was the victim of a three-run barrage in the seventh after the Browns' grandly had tied it up with pairs of runs in the third and fourth. Van Atta went to two innings and the Sox got to him for an unneeded run in the ninth.

Fischer was a great pitcher in six of the nine innings. All told, the Browns got seven hits off the Sox pitcher. Two came in the third when the Browns scored twice, one was mixed with two passes for another pair in the fourth and two, a single and a double in the ninth, gave the Browns their fifth and final run. In the other innings, he allowed only three hits.

Washington hit homer for Chicago with one on off Coffman in the first and Pepper hit one in the third also with one on. Larry and Burns were the only Browns to get more than one hit. They each got two while Piet and Appling, with three apiece, and Washington with two, led off Chicago's attacks.

Apparently the White Sox hadn't heard of Coffman's recent return to form for they hit Sir Richard with everything but the scoreboard and compelled his retirement with only one out in the first inning. Radcliff walked as a starter and Piet singled him to second. Haas sacrificed and Bonura doubled past Fisher for the two runs. Bonura then loped home, ahead of Washington when "George" hit a homer to right.

For two innings the Browns were helpless against Fischer, but, beginning with the third, they began to get the range. A double by Burns and Pepper's homer to left gave them a pair in the third and Larry's single after passes to Cliff and Carey and Thomas' sacrifice, tied it up in the fourth.

Thomas, after relieving Coffman in the first, wasn't bothered until the sixth, when, with one on, Washington walked and Appling doubled. It was considered good strategy to walk Dykes and fill the bases. It proved excellent strategy for Sewell hit to Cliff, and Washington was forced at the plate and Sewell was doubled at St. Louis. In the seventh, with one gone, Radcliff walked and Piet's ground-out took a bad hop to Larry for a single. This time, Thomas wasn't equal to the occasion, for Haas singled and Radcliff scored. Bonura popped out, but Washington doubled off Appling's sacrifice bunt. Appling filled the bases and Thomas then cut loose with a wild pitch to let Haas tally. Dykes was an easy out to end the fruitful inning.

Bejma flied out for Thomas in the last of the seventh and this brought Van Atta in as Browns pitcher. Van in the eighth. He started nicely by walking Sewell and Fischer, but luck took a sudden turn. Sewell was caught off second and run down. Radcliff took a third strike and Piet forced Fischer.

Van Atta allowed the Sox an eighth run in the ninth on a pass to Bonura, Appling's double and an infield hit by Dykes. Cliff's double starting the Browns' ninth led to a useless run when Larry singled with two down.

De Soto President Tells Dealers Here Sales Outlook Is Good

Byron Foy Points to Steady Increase Each Month Since First of Year.

Byron Foy, president of the De Soto Motor Corporation, was in St. Louis Wednesday to attend a meeting of De Soto distributors, dealers and zone executives. Foy, who also is vice-president of the Chrysler Corporation and secretary of the Automobile Manufacturers' Association, is the youngest president of a major automobile factory. He has been visiting key cities, talking with dealers, figuring the prospective automobile market.

Foy said that the St. Louis region had accounted for more than its proportionate share of national automobile sales, and that indications were that new car sales would be surprisingly firm through the summer.

"Everywhere I go, people ask why are people buying so many cars—will the influx of sales continue?" Foy continued.

"While it is difficult to make forecasts, look at what has happened in the past few months. Again the motor car industry has been the bright spot in American business. In the first half of 1935, the industry produced 2,335,369 passenger cars and trucks. In the period, the Chrysler Corporation alone produced and shipped 485,578 units, a 25 per cent increase over the first six months of last year. In our own division, De Soto sales and production each month for the past six months have shown increases over 1934.

Notes Stimulating Factors.

"I believe that one of the main reasons for the increase in motor car buying is the release of a pent-up urge for new cars which has extended over more than four years. Continuation of the present volume of business, and anticipation based upon advance orders, indicate a healthy business total for the entire year.

"There are other factors which have stimulated motor car buying. Cash farm income, for instance, has shown a sharp rise, with resultant improved business in the agricultural areas; during the past few weeks, weekly electric power production has risen to a new high since 1929, always a good index of business conditions; and the construction industry has been an important factor in the upswing.

Streamlining Trend.

"Our dealers here have shown sharp increases in their motor car sales, and, naturally, the activity which one finds in this state is cause for optimism.

"The streamline trend in cars, more pronounced than ever this year, will continue to be an important factor in motor car design. Not only has Airflow sales this year in the domestic market shown appreciable gain, but export sales of Airflow De Soto have more than doubled.

"In fact, our Airflow sales overseas are exactly 244 per cent ahead of last year. Furthermore, the success of the Airflow design has influenced European motor construction. Such manufacturers as Maybach, Mercedes and others have adopted the Airflow idea of streamlining. Streamlining is not only gaining in popularity because of its advanced style, but because of comfort and safety factors only possible in a car of Airflow construction."

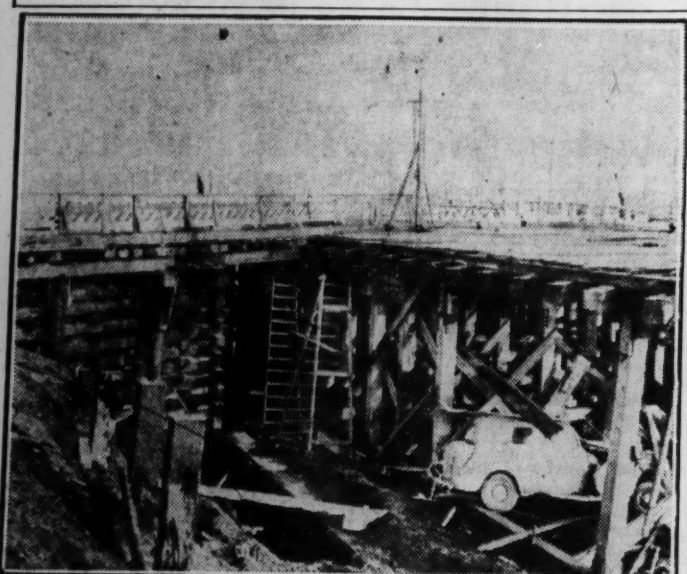

Goodyear President Back From World Tour of Motor Industry

P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., has arrived in New York from a trip around the world, during which he visited six of the company's plants in operation. The purpose of his trip was to open the newest Goodyear factory in Java and to look over the $3,000,000 rubber plantations of the company in Sumatra.

He inspected the company's 37,000-acre cotton plantation in Arizona and its tire factories in Los Angeles, Sydney, Australia, and Wolverhampton, England.

He stopped at Friedrichshafen, Germany, to discuss airships with Dr. Hugo Eckener and to look over the new Zeppelin airship, the LZ-129, now being completed. It happened that his stop at Friedrichshafen marked also his thirty-fifth anniversary with the Goodyear Co. He had joined Goodyear in July, 1900, after graduating from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and spending three years in rubber manufacturing operations in New England.

Buick Cars Driven 20,000,000 Miles by Police in Los Angeles

As a result of more than 20,000,000 miles' experience with Buicks in hard service, the Los Angeles Police Department has increased its fleet of Buicks to 41. The cars were purchased to inaugurate the department's radio patrol. Later this number was increased to 50. Within 24 months after the beginning of the radio activities the fleet had covered 6,142,477 miles and answered 222,490 broadcast calls in an average of two minutes and 40 seconds.

"The cars were placed immediately in unbroken 20-hour service, being driven by three shifts of officers, the same schedule that was followed by the succeeding fleet of 53 Buicks that took over the work. The latter cars, which are being succeeded by the new Buicks, have run approximately 6,000,000 miles with some of the cars having records of more than 140,000 miles.

"Cost per mile, as shown by the police records, are as low as 1.5-10th cents per mile over 135,000 miles. The highest cost was 21-10th cents per mile for a car totaling 59,951 miles of service."

Something New in Trucks

A Reo Speed Wagon designed for easy handling in metropolitan traffic. Its cab over engine construction permits use of a 15-foot body on the same wheelbase and over-all length as a conventional 12-foot truck. With full rated load, the gross weight of 13,500 pounds is distributed 35 per cent on front wheels and 65 per cent on rear. The engine hood is insulated and tightly fitted to protect the driver from heat and fumes. Hood side panels are easily opened to give access to the engine. The entire power plant, including the engine, transmission and radiator, is easily slid out through the front for any major repairs.

Testing Racers' Braking Speed

Public safety officials and Indianapolis race drivers who took part in safety braking tests at Minneapolis, conducted recently by the Minnesota Public Safety Committee. They are examining the double piston device on the front bumper of the Graham Six sedan used in the tests. The pistons fire just times before the product is offered to the public," says C. E. Newman, manager of Goodrich-Silvertown, Inc. in St. Louis.

Manufacturers' Tire Testing Conducted on Most Scientific Basis

"It is probable that few tire buyers realize how extensively and scientifically most manufacturers test tires before the product is offered to the public," says C. E. Newman, manager of Goodrich-Silvertown, Inc. in St. Louis.

"The B. F. Goodrich Co., Akron, O., has a test fleet of cars and trucks on the road almost constantly averaging more than a million miles annually in a scientific program of tire testing to improve the product and maintain accepted high standards of quality.

"Various unusual testing machines are employed there to determine the strength and safety factors of every size and type tire manufactured.

"There is no product offered the public which goes out from the place of manufacture more carefully inspected than automobile tires, and few, if any, products that have behind them any more actual service experience and intensive research."

Army of Drivers.

Approximately 1,000,000 chauffeurs and operators of motor vehicles are licensed in New York City.

Goodyear Manager Says Treadpoint Tests Make for Safe Driving

"Public consciousness of the fact that motoring is no safer than the tires which equip the automobile, has been aroused by the campaign launched by Goodyear in a safety drive to check up on tires that are dangerous," says C. M. Van Epps, manager for Goodyear Service, Inc., in St. Louis.

"Dramatized by the treadpoint plan, by the inspection stories of Joseph A. Faurot, finger-printing and crime expert, who made a survey for the tire company, and carried through to careful individual inspection of the tires on cars of customers, a definite, well-planned program to eliminate the unsafe tire equipment on highways this summer has been producing results.

"Certainly it is a plan to help business. But it is more than just that. It is a worthwhile safety measure which Goodyear believes will pay big dividends in lives saved, accidents prevented and general safety improvement right when it is needed most—at the peak of the year's biggest driving season.

"The treadpoint operation provides a quick, simple, and positive proof of the exact condition of the tires on the car, and this check-up is offered without obligation.

"We can show anyone in a minute just what his tires will do in case of emergency stops on the highway, because we can see what there is in the way of tread to provide adequate traction if a quick demand is placed upon the carcass. The car owner can hold the proof of his tire's ability in his hand and see at close range upon just what his motoring safety depends."

Now Head Hupp As President, Sales Director

VERN R. DRUMM

WILLIAM B. HURLBURT, New president and director of sales, respectively, of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation.

Hupp Production And Sales Gain Under The New Management

Addition of 118 New Hupp Dealers Reported; Mile-Long Improved Assembly Line Installed.

Following election, some weeks ago, of a new board of directors and installation of a new management, the average production of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation exceeds the average for the preceding 35 months by 556 cars a month. The big Hupp plant at Detroit is busier than for many months, sales are reported increasing rapidly and 118 new Hupp dealers have been added.

A statement from the Hupp Corporation says that results in the last 90 days give every evidence that Huppmobile is headed upward and destined again to become an important factor in the automobile industry.

The new management is headed by Vern R. Drumm as president and William B. Hurlburt as vice-president and director of sales. Drumm for 10 years was operating manager of one of the big Chrysler factories in Detroit. Hurlburt has had years of experience as dealer, distributor, factory representative and sales manager. He was formerly Packard branch manager in New York, a sales director for Chrysler organization, president of the Hurlburt Motor Truck Co. and executive vice-president of the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation.

The new assistant director of sales is George Clarke, formerly a distributor in Minneapolis and on the Pacific Coast, branch manager for Overland in Detroit, a regional manager for Chrysler and Hupp branch manager in Detroit.

Robert Hance is the new director of advertising. He has handled the advertising and sales promotion work of one of the country's largest Hupp distributors for a number of years with exceptional success.

Wallace Zweiner is treasurer. He was comptroller, then secretary-treasurer, vice-president, and a director of the Durant Motors Corporation, and from 1931 to 1934, comptroller of Continental Motors.

Among recent improvements in the Hupp plant is a mile-long new assembly line on one floor that has a capacity of 260 cars at one time. A new production system has been put into effect to make Hupp's all-steel bodies.

Notable economies in production and improvement in all manufacturing processes are reported by the Hupp Corporation.

C. H. Dinsmore Made Sales Manager for Steiner Automobile Co.

C. H. Dinsmore, veteran automobile dealer and salesman, has been appointed sales manager for the Steiner Automobile Co., and will direct the sales of Pontiac cars.

Dinsmore entered the auto business in 1916 as a used car and service dealer at Delmar and Union. In 1931 he joined the McNiece-Hill Motor Co. and also was distributor of the Jordan car. He has had 11 years with General Motors products.

The Steiner Automobile Co., of which Harry Steiner is president, at one time was distributor for one of the independent manufacturers. Since January last it has been the only exclusive Pontiac dealer in St. Louis. It recently remodeled its building at 3101 Locust.

American Airlines Passenger Traffic Sets Record in June

Transporting a total of 17,297 revenue passengers in 30 days, American Airlines established an all-time record in June, C. R. Smith, president of the company, declares.

"In each of the last five months," Smith said, "American Airlines' passenger traffic has shown an increase over the preceding month ranging from 1100 to more than 5000 passengers. April, May and June have been, successively, the biggest months in the company's history.

"The June total represents an increase of 1063 passengers over the 16,234 carried in May, previous record month, and a gain of 7622 passengers over June a year ago. The six months total of 76,930 passengers this year also is 4719 greater than the 72,211 passengers transported during the entire first three quarters of 1934.

"There has also been a substantial increase in the length of the average air journey per passenger. In June, 1934, each American Airlines' passenger traveled an average of 265 miles on each trip over our system. In June, 1935, this average was 365 miles."

Standard Oil Dealers Hold Second Meeting Of Year in St. Louis

See Demonstrations of Company's Motor Oil and Refinery Purifying Process.

Standard Oil dealers from Metropolitan St. Louis and vicinity met at the Elks Club Monday night for the second of their 1935 sessions. Speakers included R. W. May, assistant manager, St. Louis, and R. B. McFarland, sales manager. D. F. Conrad, special salesman, presided.

May gave a special laboratory demonstration of the quality of Iso-Vis "D" oil as demonstrated by viscosity test at low and high temperatures. This was made with a machine for this purpose. A demonstration of the Chlorex process showed how Standard Oil removes the unstable sludge forming parts of oil distillate in a refinery.

McFarland outlined the new summer advertising campaign, the new touring service started by the Standard Oil Co. and discussed Standard service and its benefits to customer and dealer.

Usual advertising developed that a new idea was inaugurated by the Standard Oil Co. this summer—one industry advertising another's products. Appearing at regular intervals throughout the newspaper campaign, are advertisements in which the oil company assumes the role of a manufacturer of new cars, representing approximately 90 per cent of the new car registrations this year, congratulating them on their choice. The advertisements are mainly composed of illustrations dramatizing meritorious features of the particular car.

Gasoline is advertised in copy which gives the results of an impartial certified survey showing how the company's products are used by salesmen in demonstrating the make of car featured in the particular advertisement.

Chevrolet Breaks Its June Record for Sales of Trucks

An all-time record for June truck sales was set this year by Chevrolet Motor Co. with a total of 13,336, it is announced. The June total was a gain of 2793 sales over the preceding month, and an increase of 21 per cent over June of last year. The previous Chevrolet record for June was set in 1929.

"Sales are holding up this year at a high level, month after month," said W. E. Fish, manager of the truck division of Chevrolet, "instead of diminishing after reaching their peak in the spring. Sales in June were only 200 less than this year's peak month, April—which was the best April in six years."

Property on South Side of Dock, East of Second, Owned by Essex Co.—One Building Transferred

OLIVE PROPERTY NEAR GRAND SOLD

Three Houses at 3644-48 Acquired by Francis J. Sommers From Nock Estate of Louisville.

By Berry Moore

It was disclosed yesterday that negotiations are pending with the Henry R. Wessel Co., for various parcels in the two blocks on the south side of Dock street, between Second and the wharf, a nine-story office structure, at the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets. W. H. Bixby is president of the Essex Co., which is a holding company.

The West Disinfectant Co. has concluded negotiations through the Henry R. Wessel Co., for various parcels in the two blocks on the south side of Dock street, between Second and the wharf, a nine-story office structure, at the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets. W. H. Bixby is president of the Essex Co., which is a holding company.

One of the largest corporations of its kind in the United States in the field of disinfectants and kindred lines, the West Disinfectant Co. has been using the building as a distributing station for its products in the St. Louis district.

There was no mention of the building. This is the first parcel of the two blocks to be sold by the Essex Co. A terminal switch serves the building.

Fronts 1124 Feet on Hall.

Extending from the wharf to Second street, with Hall street intervening, the two blocks of the Essex Co. have a total frontage on Dock street of 1124 feet, with a depth of 164 feet, running to the Wiggins tracks. Noteworthy are the shipping facilities offered by the Terminal Railway traversing Hall street, and by the Washab Railway on Second street, which have been a big factor in the development of this part of the city as an industrial and warehouse center.

Three two-story stone front attached houses, at 3644-48 Olive street, occupying a site 54 by 152 feet, about 444 feet west of Grand boulevard, have been purchased by Francis Sommers. The purchase was predicated on the value of the ground, to the exclusion of the buildings, which are to be razed.

The ground has been leased for a parking lot, pending its eventual improvement with a business building. The property was owned by the Nock estate of Louisville, Ky.

Negotiations were handled by the real estate department of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. in conjunction with the Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co. of Louisville.

Alteration work on the Lister Building annex at the southwest corner of Taylor avenue and Olive street, whereby four stories of the olive street side of the structure are being converted into modern office space, is nearing completion. Access to the addition will be through the present entrance and corridor, to a new large marble entrance just completed from the parking lot. The alterations will add approximately 5000 square feet of office space to the Lister Building, designed primarily for the medical profession. The only remaining store will be the corner corner, now occupied by the Massengill Drug Co. The new office space will have terrazzo floors with corridors, floors and walls finished in white marble.

Negotiations closed in County.

Negotiations were closed last week for several properties in exclusive residential parts of St. Louis County. The exact locations and the names of the buyers will be withheld, pending surveys and the placing of restrictions, designed to exclude the public from these areas.

Newspaper Advertisements. Concerning the new campaign, Allen Jackson, vice-president in charge of marketing, says: "With this year's new car registrations exceeding those of any of the past five years, it is apparent that the automotive industry is one of the main leaders toward business recovery. Through use of its large newspaper advertising circulation to promote its allied industry, Standard Oil believes it can contribute further impetus to the automotive industry's vigorous industrial leadership, with benefits not only to the automotive and oil industries, but to general industrial recovery as well."

Three Houses at 3644-48 Acquired by Francis J. Sommers From Nock Estate of Louisville.

By Berry Moore

It was disclosed yesterday that negotiations are pending with the Henry R. Weisel Co. for various parcels in the two blocks on the south side of Dock street, between Second street and the wharf, improved with buildings available for manufacturing and warehouse purposes.

The property is owned by the Essex Realty Co., which acquired it in 1934 from Sydney Shoenberg, investment broker, in part payment for the Columbia Building, a nine-story office structure, at the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets.

W. H. Blaby is president of the Essex Co., which is a holding company.

The West Disinfectant Co. has concluded negotiations through the Weisels Co. for the two-story building, occupying 45 by 164 feet at 110 Dock street, approximately 300 feet east of Second street. It has been occupying the building under a lease from the Essex Co. with an option to purchase, at a designated figure. Title to the property was taken in the name of the Weisels Corporation of Missouri, a holding company of the purchaser.

One of the largest corporations of its kind in the United States in the field of disinfectants and kindred lines, the West Disinfectant Co. has been using the building as a distributing station for its products in the St. Louis district.

There was no mention of the consideration. This is the first parcel of the two blocks to be sold by the Essex Co. A terminal switch serves the building.

SMALL HOUSES BACK TO PRIVATE OWNERS

Between $17,000,000 and $20,000,000 Worth Disposed of by Various Associations.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Transfer to family ownership of small homes valued at millions of dollars which were listed in assets of savings, building and loan associations six or seven months ago is an increasing factor in real estate activity, the United States Building and Loan League reported today.

Between $17,000,000 and $20,000,000 worth of these properties, on a sales contract basis, have been conditionally sold by the associations since January to families which will eventually hold title to them, according to T. W. Atkins, director of field service for the league, who has just completed a survey.

Additional small homes totaling several other millions of dollars in value have been bought outright with the aid of mortgage money from the association listing the property, Atkins pointed out.

"Small down payments, liberal interest terms and periods of between 10 or 12 years in which to pay out have made it possible for thousands of families to take possession of these bargain homes on a contract of sale with the associations, thus applying the rent money toward eventual ownership," Atkins said.

Data obtained by the league show home owners borrowed around $187,000,000 for buying building and loan associations during the three spring months of this year utilizing this source of credit to a greater degree than in any like period since 1931. H. T. Donaldson, vice-president of the league, said the advances by associations this spring have been 86 per cent higher than last year, twice the volume in the spring of 1933 and at least 40 per cent greater than in 1932.

MR. AND MRS. F. K. ADAMS BUY LAKE FOREST RESIDENCE

A recently completed residence of 10 rooms at 69 Lake Forest, at the southwest corner of Clayton and Hanley roads, has been purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Francis K. Adams from the Magidson Construction Co., which built it.

The first floor of the house comprises living room, dining room, kitchen, breakfast room, maid's room and bath. The second floor has four bedrooms and two baths and a recreation room. A sun garden with landscaped gardening enhances the premises.

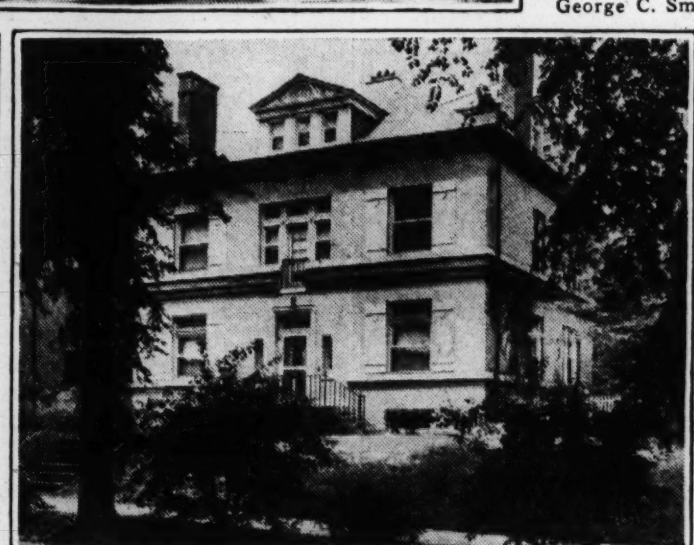

The transaction was handled by Carlisle-Birge Real Estate Co., in conjunction with Joseph C. Welch. The house was designed by Clay Weinell, architect.

SHACKELFORD ROAD PROPERTY BOUGHT

E. J. Winklemeyer Acquires 45 Acres, Two Miles West of Halls Ferry Road.

A tract of 45 acres on the Shackelford road, overlooking the Missouri River, has been purchased by Edwin J. Winklemeyer. It is approximately two miles west of the Halls Ferry road, and the large estate of Joseph Desloge. August Gruenloh was the former owner. LeGrand Jones, Inc., handled the negotiations for the tract.

The soil on this tract is knox silt loam, similar to that of the Florissant Valley. A United States Geological Survey shows that the highest point on this farm is 600 feet above sea level, which is 170 feet above the main channel of the Missouri River. A view may be had from this farm of six counties—St. Louis County and St. Charles County, in Missouri, and Calhoun County, Madison County, Jersey County and St. Clair County in Illinois.

Winklemeyer recently purchased 12½ acres on the north side of the Old Bonhomme road, a short distance west of Price road, as an investment through LeGrand Jones, Inc.

Charles J. Muller & Son recently announced the sale of two tracts on the old Jamestown road, north of Lindbergh boulevard, about a mile west of the Lewis and Clark bridges. One, comprising three and one-quarter acres, was acquired by M. A. Riek, and the other one and two-thirds acres by H. W. Jennings, a client of the F. E. Mayer Realty Co. Both were bought as sites for homes.

Four and one-half acres on the north side of Accommodate road, off Lindbergh boulevard, was recently purchased by William P. Humphrey of the brokerage firm of Humphrey, Jaques & Co. The site, one of the most attractive on the Missouri River bluffs, was acquired for a residence. Negotiations were handled by Daniel R. Bissell.

A number of homes are in course of construction in this section, including notably those of Francis Mesker, Mrs. Elias Michael and Dr. Sidney Schwab.

HOUSE REPLETE IN ELECTRICAL DEVICES

Residence of L. D. James on McKnight Road at Elsworth Lane Is Model.

The new residence of L. D. James, president of James & Co., Inc., distributors of General Electric appliances in St. Louis, on the McKnight road, at Elsworth lane, south of Fair Oaks, is replete with the electrical devices.

The house is early American in design. It has 11 rooms—eight bedrooms on the main floor, two on the second and one in the basement. There are three baths.

Everything in the house is electrical, with a complete General Electric kitchen and laundry as part of the major equipment. Even the water is heated by two electric water heaters and softened by Monel Metal water softeners. The kitchen is equipped with two refrigerators, electric dish wash-sink combination, towel drier, electric range. Wall cabinets and floor cabinets are placed for the greatest utility and appearance. An air conditioning plant is also installed.

The plans for the house were drawn by Beverly T. Nelson, architect.

NEW HOSPITAL SITE ACQUIRED BY CITY

Real Estate Men to Get $6413 for Getting Ground for Psychopathic Unit.

The city has completed the purchase of sites for a new psychopathic hospital, adjoining City Hospital, and a new power plant. The site for the hospital is the entire block bounded by Park avenue and Grattan, Carroll and Dillon streets, while the power plant will be built on the northeast corner of Dillon and Carroll. Cost of acquiring the property was $128,161.

Two real estate men, Walter M. Stinde and Edward M. Thornhill, employed by the city to obtain options on the property, will receive $6113 in fees for their services, according to Deputy Comptroller Cunningham. Fees will total about 5 per cent of the purchase price, the customary fee of members of the Real Estate Exchange.

Employment of Stinde and Thornhill was authorized by Director of Public Welfare Darst and approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, composed of Mayor Dickmann, Comptroller Nolte and President Mason of the Board of Aldermen. The two agents got options on the property for the hospital site for $104,838 and on the power house site for $18,322.

The hospital and power house, on which work will be started soon, will be paid for out of bond issue funds voted last year. A total of $1,000,000 was provided for the hospital and $250,000 for the power house, the cost including the cost of acquiring the sites. Only $380,000 of the bonds for these items have been sold so far.

AVERAGE MATURITY OF U. S. SECURITIES IS LENGTHENED

Treasury Reports Debt Will Fall Due in 19 Specific Years Up to 1961.

WASHINGTON, July 27. — Figures showing the average maturity of Government securities has been lengthened by two years and eight months during the last two years were made public today by the Treasury.

Computing Liberty bonds by their called rate, the Treasury table gave the average maturity on June 30, 1933, as five years and 11 months and the average on June 30, 1935, as eight years and seven months.

The figures do not include pre-war, postal savings and United States savings bonds, or securities issued exclusively to Government agencies and trust funds. On June 30, this group comprised $2,605,000,000 of the $28,700,000,000 public debt.

Treasury officials said lengthening maturities split up the debt and extended over a period of years obligations which normally would have become due in large sums at short intervals.

The charts showed that whereas the indebtedness of $18,067,700,000 on June 30, 1932, was scattered over maturities in nine specific years, the $28,094,700,000 debt on June 30, 1935, would fall due in 19 specific years up to 1961.

4 JUDGES ENJOIN AAA TAXES

11 Milling and Packing Firms in California Get Writs.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 27. — Four Federal Judges for the Southern California District issued temporary injunctions today restraining the Collector of Internal Revenue here from collecting AAA grain and hog processing taxes from 11 packing and milling companies.

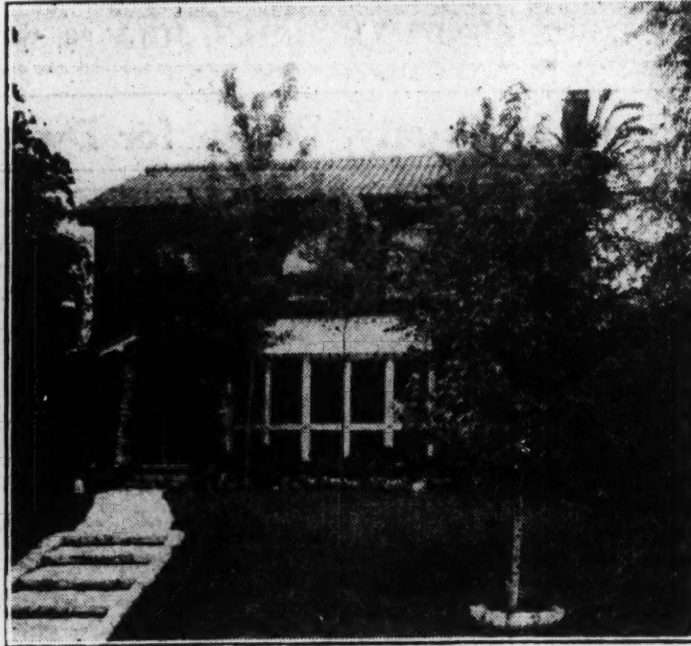

The jurists said there is "serious doubt as to the constitutionality of the law." Presiding Judge William P. James granted three injunctions, pending a final court ruling; Judge George Cosgrave granted four; Judge Harry Holler three, and Judge Paul J. McCormick one. Bonds for companies ranged from $100 to $75,000, to be deposited as a guarantee that the taxes and court costs would be paid if it was finally decided the injunctions were issued improperly.

NEW SALES RECORD SET BY SOUTH SIDE CONCERN

H. A. O'Rourke, Inc., 5471 Gravois avenue, reports through its sales manager, Lewis M. Booker, that since the inauguration of a new coast to coast country sales contest beginning July 1 that a total of 23 sales have been completed for the first 23 days of July by its sales organization. The firm's sales so far this month have set a new record.

The following is a partial list of our recent sales: Brick bungalow located in Southampton numbered 4908 Murdoch avenue to Oliver Stuckel and wife, a five and sunroom brick bungalow at 5627 Gresham avenue to Daniel L. Gimpel, another brick bungalow located at 5427 Gresham of five rooms to Emil Bubash, a brick cottage of five rooms at 4724 Michigan avenue in St. Anthony's parish to Sophia D. Angelo, a brick cottage at 5003 Tennessee having four rooms to Reginald Breeding, lot located on the north side of Itasca to Edna Lyng, matt brick duplex bungalow located at 5418-20 Pennsylvania avenue to a private client, a four-room brick cottage located at 7409 Alaska to William J. Chila, a 45-foot corner lot on Blow and Eugene to Joseph Fieldman, a five-room frame bungalow at 5525 Pennsylvania to Carl L. Sandt, vacant lot on Pernod suitable for a double flat to Ervine Meyer, a corner four-room double flat at 4500-04 West Papin to a client, a lot in the 3800 block of Fillmore for a single flat which is being built by George Blum and supervised by H. A. O'Rourke, Inc. sold to August Wessel and wife, single flat at 3426 Wyoming to Peter Becker and wife, single flat in Southampton located at 5329 Sutherland having five rooms sold to a client, a new five-room brick bungalow located at 4162 Iron to a client, a brick bungalow at 2112 Sixty-eighth street in the county to Max Deutman and wife, a lot on Itasca to Fred C. Winkel, a matt brick cottage of three rooms at 3244 Morganford to Bessie W. Appel, a new corner brick bungalow at 6103 Newport to Edward Bourg, a frame bungalow 4991 Loughborough was sold for Klingler estate, a 30-foot vacant on the north side of Elchelt-berger to Milton Duenke, a single flat having four-five rooms located on the south side of street numbered 2648 Geyer to Katie Koehler, vacant on Pine avenue of 50 feet in the Parkridge subdivision to L. G. Travers, an ultra modern brick bungalow at 5746 Goethe avenue to a client. Due to the increased activity in the loan department it has been necessary for A. T. O'Rourke, vice-president of the company, to make a number of appraisals in the southern part of the city. The insurance and rental departments are managed by William Fisher and Miss Myrtle Overton.

FOREIGN CROPS AND MARKETS

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, July 27.—World production of feed grains is expected to be well above last year's level, due largely to improved prospects in North America and in the Danube basin where unusually small crops were harvested in 1934.

Reports of foreign crops and markets indicate for the countries so far reporting, a 14 per cent increase over last year's crop of barley and wheat, a 20 per cent increase in production. Oats show a 14 per cent increase and a boost of nearly 72 per cent in production. There is a rise of nearly 6 per cent in the corn acreage.

A fixed minimum price to wheat growers in the four Western provinces, with board authorized to purchase all wheat grown there whenever growers cannot sell in the open market at or above the minimum price, and exclusive marketing powers which the board may invoke whenever it is satisfied that marketing agencies are not co-operating satisfactorily, are the outstanding features of the new Canadian Wheat Board Act.

There is no mention of the level at which the minimum price is to be fixed. The law merely authorizes the board to purchase wheat for export or to "fix" such a fixed price per bushel (based on weight, quality or place of delivery) as may be necessary to bring about the approval of the Governor in Council.

How Germany Subsidizes Export Trade by Manipulating Mark At Expense of Foreign Nations

Devalues Currency Abroad but Nominally Maintains Gold Standard at Home—Gets Business in Latin America.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 27.

IN the present cutthroat war for international trade, Nazi Germany through Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economics and president of the Reichsbank, has developed a complicated but effective machinery for subsidizing German exports at the expense of foreigners by depreciating the mark used in foreign trade while nominally maintaining the mark used in Germany on a gold standard.

The ingenuity and the ruthlessness with which the devalued marks have been used to support German industries and commerce have caused competing American exporters to complain to the State and Commerce Departments, citing loss of business, particularly in Latin America, but as yet no counter weapon has been devised to meet the unusual situation. All American diplomatic and consular agents have been instructed to report in detail on the operation of the German capture of foreign trade.

American officials admit that they do not know how to cope with the situation but express the view that it will gradually destroy itself or result in outright devaluation of currency by Germany. The meantime, Germany is repudiating its debt to foreigners in rapidly large but undetermined amounts.

Money in the Complaints.

There is an ironical twist in the American complaints. When the dollar was devalued by 40 per cent, American exporters welcomed it as giving an opportunity to underbid their competitors. As a matter of fact, American export trade did increase somewhat, particularly in Latin America, until other nations developed means to meet the situation.

The American and German methods of devaluation were decidedly different. By reducing the gold content of the dollar, the American Government made a straight horizontal cut in the value of its currency. The United States had tremendous gold reserves and a favorable balance of trade. These we have retained. Germany now has a gold and foreign security coverage which fluctuates between 2 and 3 per cent and its foreign trade is absolutely essential to its national industry, commerce and well being. Germany had had experience with devaluation and inflation after the war and was and is afraid to follow the example of the United States in making a horizontal reduction in the value of the mark.

Dr. Schacht's Solution.

Registered marks—seven different varieties—were Dr. Schacht's solution to the problem. Instead of a horizontal cut, the value of the marks used in foreign trade, if shown on a graph, would be a series of ups and downs. Some of these marks are worth only 25 per cent of their nominal gold value, others 60 per cent, others 60 per cent, and still others 35 per cent.

In domestic trade the marks have only one value, just as the devalued dollar has the same value in domestic American commerce. There is no physical difference between the domestic and foreign marks—they are the same marks, and this has resulted in a lucrative business to those money changers who are versed in the intricacies of international currencies.

In the international business transactions, except for the tourist trade, physical marks are not used. The deals are carried through by checks, which in reality, are claims on bank deposits. The devalued registered marks are carried through by the sale at a discount of claims against "frozen" or "blocked" bank accounts in Germany, that deposits by foreigners who are not allowed to take their money out of Germany except under certain rigidly stipulated conditions.

A Money-Changers' Maze.

To these seven variants, the Reichsbank has added several more, and the actual working of the machinery is a veritable maze, understandable only by those rapidly calculating money changers and international traders who have made life study of foreign currencies. Thus the permissible uses for blocked accounts and credits are as follows:

1. Investment in German securities, real estate, business enterprises and bank accounts.
 2. The purchase of German commodities for export. (This is the use that is giving competition to American exporters.)
 3. Gifts and donations to German beneficiaries.
 4. Expenditures in Germany for travel, study and health.
- Special permission is required to use the registered marks for each individual case.
- But some of these categories are in turn subdivided, and the subdivisions are interrelated to the seven varieties of registered marks.
- Thus, according to Douglas Miller, acting American Commercial

Background of Italo-Ethiopian Clash

England and Italy Once Composed Their Rivalry for Abyssinian Territory but Ras Tafari Upset Their Scheme to Compromise at the Black Nation's Expense.

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON,
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

GENEVA, July 27.

WITH the breakdown of efforts at conciliation and arbitration between Italy and Ethiopia (over the relatively unimportant Ualual incident) and Premier Mussolini's official declaration that Italy had embarked on a road from which there was no turning back, it has become apparent that if war in Africa is to be prevented the League of Nations must do it.

The Ualual Arbitration Commission was at best never more than a slender thread; it provided the means whereby the League could "dabble" in the Italo-Ethiopian controversy without getting its fingers burnt. Even had the commission reached an agreement over responsibility, indemnities and such, it would have meant nothing. The larger issues—Italy's ambition to dominate Ethiopia—were not involved.

Theoretically the question of Ualual should now go back to the League for review.

The Ualual Incident, Relatively Unimportant.

The Ualual incident, which has served as the bridge over which the Italo-Ethiopian controversy was taken before the League, in itself was insignificant and unimportant, as was the historic alleged dynamiting of a few feet of the South Manchurian railway near Mukden.

The facts of the case are: On Nov. 23 last an international commission for delimitation of the Anglo-Ethiopian frontier, when surveying pasture lands in the province of Ogaden, encountered an Italian detachment of native troops commanded by Italian officers, which was occupying Ualual. There were two British officers, Lieutenant-Colonel E. H. M. Clifford and Alex. T. Curle, and three Ethiopian officials in the commission, which was accompanied by a bodyguard of about 1000 soldiers, bearers and attendants.

The Italian commanding officer forbade the commission to proceed, saying that Ualual, which the Italians had occupied for some years, was Italian territory. The Ethiopian commissioners maintained that it was well within Ethiopian frontiers. An exchange of letters and personal interviews took place between the British and Ethiopian commissioners and the Italian commander and finally the Anglo-Ethiopian commission left the scene, leaving the Ethiopian soldiers facing the Italian post. On Dec. 5, an engagement took place. The Italians say the Ethiopians started the fighting; the Ethiopians blame the Italians. Several were killed and wounded on each side.

The following day the Ethiopian Government protested to the Italian Charge d'Affaires at Addis Ababa against the "illegal occupation" of Ethiopian territory by Italian troops, and invoked the Ethiopian-Italian treaty of Aug. 2, 1928, with a view to a peaceful settlement. Three days later the Ethiopians again, by official note, demanded arbitration, as provided in the treaty.

The Fascist Government, immediately thereafter, assumed the role of complainant and demanded due apologies, honors to the Italian flag, an indemnity of 200,000 thalers, punishment of the Ethiopian officers and surrender of a political refugee named Omar Samantar.

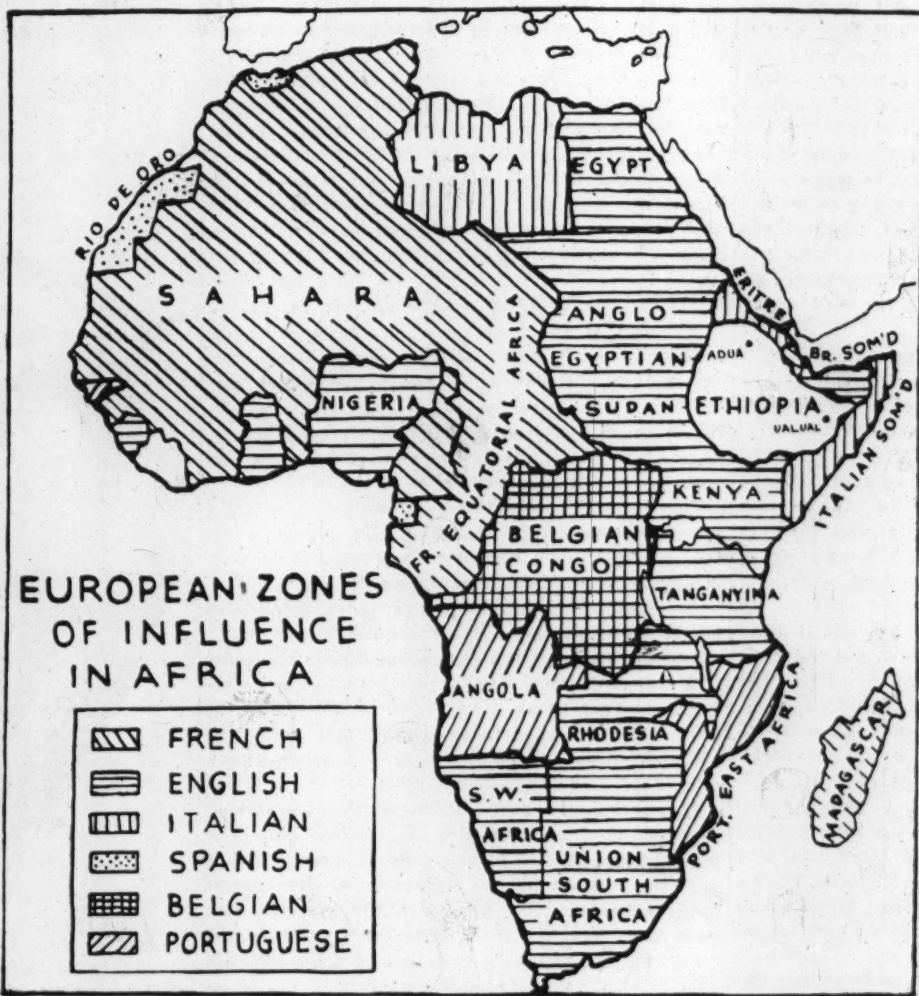

Ethiopia's Plea to Geneva

Under League Covenant. Ethiopian efforts at conciliation having failed owing to Rome's persistence in maintaining its original demands, the Ethiopian Government, under Article II of the Covenant, appealed to the League.

At the Council meeting of Jan. 19 last the question was heard. Italy, which previously had refused arbitration and insisted on reparation, modified its policy and promised to settle the dispute by arbitration, "in conformity with the spirit of the Treaty of Amity of 1928 between Italy and Abyssinia . . . and to take all measures expedient and to give all useful instructions for the avoidance of fresh incidents." The Ethiopians likewise having given similar pledges, the Council adjourned the matter until its next session.

By the time the Council met again, in extraordinary session late in April after the Stresa conference, no progress toward settlement had been made. The Italians refused to permit foreigners to represent Addis Ababa in negotiations. Fresh "incidents" had occurred; Mussolini was pouring tens of thousands of soldiers into Africa.

The Ethiopians urgently appealed again to the League and at the May meeting of the Council the British representative forced a showdown. Then the French stood aside allowing the British to deal with Mussolini. The result was that Rome reluctantly agreed to the Commission of Arbitration provided for in the Italo-Ethiopian treaty. Italy also consented to foreigners—Prof. de Lapardelle, a

The Italian Viewpoint

GENEVA, July 27.

WHAT can be considered as the official Italian viewpoint in regard to Ethiopia, is found in an authorized semi-official statement, by an unidentified "high Fascist official," which appeared in the French Agence Economique et Financiere on June 17. It reads:

"At the end of the World War, when it came to dividing up booty resulting from the German defeat, a very warm discussion arose on the allocation of the ex-German colonies. Italy, which had been promised large colonial concessions in the Treaty of London, in case of victory, was represented at Versailles by second-rate diplomats, who were not capable of making Italy's just claims prevail. Today Mussolini, with his plans of extension in Ethiopia, desires to correct the error that was committed at that time by incapable diplomacy. He wants Abyssinia and he considers that this is his good right, because of Italian blood shed during the war and as a corrective of the injustice done Italy at Versailles."

Frenchman, and Prof. Benjamin Pittman Potter, representing Ethiopia, with Prof. Gaston Jesse, another Frenchman, as legal adviser. The duty of the arbitrators, however, was solely to determine the responsibility for the Ualual incident. Other "important" questions would remain for direct discussion between the Italians and Ethiopians, Mussolini declared, adding that regardless of the results of the Ualual decisions the other questions maintained their full seriousness.

As was expected the conciliatoriness of the Italians over Ualual was merely procrastination. After two sessions—one at Milan and the other at Scheveningen, the Netherlands, the negotiations collapsed. The Italians wanted to bring—by airplane—native witnesses; the Ethiopians wanted to show that Ualual was indisputably Ethiopian territory. They produced British Colonial Office maps, Italian Colonial Ministry Maps and many other maps of Italian origin to prove their case. They also made counter demands for reparation, not only in respect to the Ualual counter but over the aerial bombardment of Ado and Guerlogubi, said to be Ethiopian territory.

While Emperor Haile Selassie refrained from mobilizing his tribesmen troops, on the ground that once mobilized it would be difficult to prevent hostilities, the Italians have sent more than 200,000 troops into Eritrea and Somaliland, and Italy says that a force of 400,000 will be sent before the monsoon season, which ends in September, is over.

What Ethiopia Did And Offered to Do.

The Ethiopians offered to deposit the 200,000 thalers demanded by Italy as indemnity in neutral hands before the arbitration negotiations began; they agreed to two postponements although the Italian troops were being moved into Africa; they apologized and gave the demanded satisfaction for "insults" to Italians by excited natives in Addis Ababa and punished an Ethiopian for circulating propaganda objectionable to the Italian Charge d'Affaires. The one thing they have steadfastly refused to do is acknowledge in advance that the Province of Ogaden lies within Italian territory. Ualual, they say, is more than 100 miles from the region which they long ago agreed to delimit as the Italo-Ethiopian frontier.

The Italians have raised one issue after another. They demand a "protectorate" or "mandate" over Ethiopia; they declare it is imperative to "avenge" the Adua and Dogali defeats of nearly a half-century ago; they say Ethiopia must satisfy Rome's demands for economic concessions and permit Italy to construct a railway and exploit Western Ethiopia; they consider it their sacred duty to wipe out slavery which is alleged to exist still despite heroic efforts on the part of the Ethiopian Government to suppress it among the half-savage mountain tribesmen; they demand expulsion of Ethiopia from the League of Nations; they even go so far as to claim the right to make their "sphere" of Ethiopia an integral part of the Italian colonial empire.

Having existed as an independent state, with a more or less continuous Government for 2000 years, with rulers claiming direct descent from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba and with a record as one of the oldest Christian nations, Ethiopia is loath to surrender its birthright.

Italy's 50-Year Effort To Gain a Foothold

Italy first tried to gain a foothold in Ethiopia more than 50 years ago. Coming late into the colonial picture, after France, Great Britain, Portugal and Germany had appropriated most of Africa's undeveloped territories, the Italians found only Ethiopia unclaimed by European powers. The Kingdom of the Negus had maintained its independence largely because of the fighting prowess of the Ethiopians and the comparative inaccessibility of the country.

Not until 1887 were the Italians able to extend the hinterland of Eritrea. After a sanguinary campaign the tribesmen gained the upper hand against the invaders and decisively defeated them at Dogali, the Italians leaving more than 400 dead on the battlefield. The peace treaty which was subsequently signed lasted only six years when King Menelik denounced it, saying he had been deceived. The Italian and Amharic (Abyssinian) texts differed, it was said. The strained relations which followed led to another Italian invasion which ended disastrously at Adua, in March, 1896. The Ethiopians overwhelmed the Italian force of about 15,000 men, killed thousands and subjected other thousands of captured and wounded to tortures. According to the Italians there were 90,000 in the victorious army, most of whom were fanatical half-savage tribesmen.

Under Gen. Baldisarra a punitive expedition started out to avenge the defeat. It met with little success, as the Italian people, opposing

Birthrate Rising, the Soviets Turn Attention to Campaign to Increase Stability of Marriage

Education, Propaganda and Shame Tactics Used to Correct Practices Inimical to Welfare of Children.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.
MOSCOW, July 15.

WITHIN the past few months there has been sweeping through Russia a quiet but persistent campaign for the "correct" attitude toward marriage and divorce; the relationship of the sexes; parenthood and filial responsibility. There has been no formal ukase, but there have been startling jolts in the Soviet press; and in Russia what appears in the press may be regarded as the voice of the Kremlin.

The searchlight of social condemnation has been turned on men who abuse the easy Soviet marriage and divorce laws—men who, under the pretext of "incompatibility," change wives as readily as one changes gloves. Russians are now advised no longer to sanction such behavior among their friends and to turn their backs on such men, dubbed here "grasshoppers."

Recently, as a warning to all-mony-dodgers, several men who failed to provide for their offspring were declared social outcasts at public meetings of their fellow workers and so were shamed into meeting their responsibility.

Pravda Asks a Question.

"Is it surprising," asks Pravda, leading organs of the Communist party, "that a woman in our country often refrains from bearing children because she is not certain of the permanency of the family relationship? How can she have trust in her husband if she herself is his third wife? He may go to a summer resort for his vacation and return with a fourth wife."

Public opinion is being marshaled against the practice of quick marriage and easy divorce. The foremost role in this campaign is being taken by the Komsomols the League of Communist Youth—numbering more than 5,000,000 members. It was at the request of this organization that "Romeo and Juliet" was this season put on the boards of the ultra-revolutionary Theater of the Revolution so that Soviet youth might be given an object lesson in true love.

The word to Russian men today is not to forget, under the guise of equality of the sexes, their obligation to treat women with chivalrous care. "Every young woman," the Komsomol newspaper urges, "should be appreciated not only as a good textile weaver, brave parachute jumper or engineer. She should be appreciated above all as a future mother."

For Sake of the Children.

The fundamental aim of this crusade is an attempt to strengthen the family bond and to reduce the number of divorces with their attendant evils imposed on the children. It is an attempt to give the millions of the children of Russia—where the birth rate is increasing with phenomenal rapidity—the proper start in life with a devoted father and mother who are united in a happy marriage.

It is interesting to note that the emphasis on raising families comes just now when the material conditions of the Soviet masses are registering a steady rise and hold forth promise of continued improvement.

In line with the policy of strengthening the family unit, the Soviet press stresses the fact that youth must fulfill its material and spiritual responsibilities toward parents. "Our young men are themselves becoming fathers," states one paper, "and how will they bring up their children properly if they themselves do not appreciate the duties of a son?"

The conduct of young people who act as if they were only lodgers in their home and forget the elementary duties of children to their parents, has been branded by the Komsomols as anti-Communist conduct. The Komsomols are being mobilized to fight against such misguided behavior and are told that respect and consideration for parents is a vital feature of Communist morals.

The Soviets startled the world when they came into power 18 years ago, by their radical marriage and divorce laws which proclaimed that marriage may be terminated at the will of either party by a mere declaration before the same civil bureau where marriages are registered.

All odium was removed from the mating of men and women who failed to avail themselves of civil marriage. The term "illegitimacy" was barred from Soviet statute books. It was definitely established that children of unmarried parents were to enjoy equal status with those of legally married parents. Clinics for birth control information became widespread and abortions were legalized.

While it would be incorrect to generalize that the family disintegrated as a result of these Soviet laws, it is undeniable that many Russians, blinded by the glare of sudden freedom, grossly misused the new liberties and many family ties were broken.

Does the moral crusade that is today sweeping Soviet Russia indicate that, after nearly two decades, she is now retracing her steps in the direction of "conservatism"? Should one assume that new and more conservative statutes on marriage and divorce will follow to replace those introduced 18 years ago?

The Answer Is "No."

The answer, apparently, is "no!" The desirability of the freedom granted is not denied merely because a minority abuses such freedom, say the Bolsheviks. That section of the population which misuses its unaccustomed liberty must simply be re-educated.

Through the abolition of the family may be one of the ultimate aims of the Communist State, at no time since the establishment of the Soviet regime did the Bolsheviks advocate it is desirable for the present stage of development. However, Soviet leaders did attempt to continue their efforts to break down the narrow interests of the family group and enrich it by linking it up with the wider interests of the Soviet society.

It was an easy matter for some extremists to distort "freedom," both in theory and in practice, into a denial of the family, throwing all responsibility of child care on the state. This idea was never actually entertained by the Soviet authorities.

The history of Soviet Russia since 1917 has been a history of major cataclysms—revolution, civil war, the launching of the industrialization program, the collectivization of agriculture—each in turn an important step that imposed untold hardships on the masses and great strain on the government apparatus.

It is only now since the government has consolidated its economic and political position and life has grown easier in Soviet Russia, that energy can be diverted to the task of remedying those tendencies which were long ago recognized by the Kremlin as being anti-social. The State is now prepared to cope with the situation and the signal for the new battle—the campaign to set Soviet morals in order—has been sounded.

Not Toward Conservatism.

Russia is not retracing her steps in the direction of conservatism. A true analysis would indicate that the Kremlin merely has set itself strongly to the task of rooting out by education and when they came into power 18 years ago, by their radical mar-

Farmer Scores Processing Tax.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I HAVE read your several editorials on the AAA processing tax. They are misleading. You evidently do not understand how this law works. It does not help all the farmers; only a small class of the more well-to-do who own large, well-equipped farms with tractors and other up-to-date machinery. The millions of small farmers are benefited not at all, but, like the consumers, are taxed for the benefit of the big farmers who get this easy money by contracting with the Government to grow less crops. The contracts are violated by one scheme or another everywhere.

I am a small farmer, having been on a farm all my life. I am willing to pay a reasonable tax for the support of the Government, but I resent having to pay a tax for the benefit of my neighbors who are better off. They do not pass the benefits on to their hired help, either. I know one man who got $900 from the processing tax the past year, who has three men with families on his farms. Each gets a cheap house to live in, a garden patch and 45 cents a day for each day he works. When it rains and he can't work, he gets nothing. When he buys a pound of bacon, it takes nearly a half day's work; a sack of flour of the cheaper grade, much more than a day's wage, yet a part of each goes as a tax for a donation by our generous Government to his employer for not raising something.

Of all the laws ever enacted by Congress, this is the most unjust and the most demagogic. M. L. BENSON.

Fulfilled Prophecy.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
YOU will recall that, during the heat of the last presidential campaign, Mr. Hoover made the dire prediction that if the Democratic party were put in office, grass would grow in our city streets.

It has come to pass that in our busy business section of Eighth street, between Walnut and Clark, a nice crop of grass is growing between the cobblestones.

Opposes Federal Aid to Youth.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
OF the unfortunate experiments sponsored by the administration's Brain Trust at Washington, none is more reprehensible than the appropriation of $500,000,000 to pay for college education of the impetuous American youth.

In the first place, this has the effect of pauperizing hundreds of thousands of young people who should with self-respect never go to college except upon the ability of their parents or themselves to pay the expense. Again, American colleges are today overcrowded by young men who should be engaged in the production of wealth, particularly at a time when the national debt nearly equals 30 billion dollars and is increasing rapidly. The Government at Washington, unless committed to a program of state socialism, has no right to waste public money in this way. It is true that the normal opportunity for young men is not available today, but in a country easily capable of supporting 10 times our present population and with a potential demand for at least 10 times the present amount of merchandise and services being produced, there should be ample opportunity for all who desire to produce wealth to do so. There are but three factors in the production of wealth—land, labor and capital. If our present unjust system of taxation were abolished and all taxes concentrated upon the value of land, this would have the effect of liberating all three factors of wealth production with consequent national prosperity.

Federal Guarantee of Wages.

PLATO JR., in his interesting letter on the economic situation, apparently agreed with Edward A. Filene that the one road to recovery is "a general, organized, compulsory raising of wages." Mr. Filene also said, three years ago, that if every family in the United States that could afford to do so would buy with cash or on credit $100 worth of goods (presumably in addition to their normal expenditures), the depression would be broken.

While both suggestions emphasize the belief that private spending regulates the ups and downs of the depression, they both lack information as to means to carry them out. The first suggestion is plain. How can one compel a horizontal increase of wages on a national scale? How can one expect hundred-dollar purchases in the presence of fear? Raising wages without a guarantee of a reasonable period of employment would remove but little fear—the only thing the President has said we have to face. It would mean, in general, for a while, heavier bank deposits, for who would know how long either the raise or the job would last?

A Federal guarantee of wages for a period of 18 months, as stated in my recent letter in your paper, would do more to banish fear and circulate cash and credit than anything so far devised. The circulation of cash and credit will circulate prosperity.

TAXING THE ST. LOUIS JONESSES.

By means of an article reprinted from the New York World-Telegram about two weeks ago, we were introduced to the Jones family (John, Mary and little Oscar) and made acquainted with their contributions to upkeep of the Federal Government. Of John's $3600 annual salary, we learned, $13.60 goes to Washington each April 15 as income tax. But far greater than this visible and tangible outlay are the Jones family's numerous contributions in "hidden" levies. These consist of taxes on their small car and its fuel and equipment, on the occasional picture shows, ball games, etc., they attend, on their modest purchases of cosmetics, playing cards, cigarettes, tooth paste, radio parts and other federally taxed items. These, their chronicler found, came to a total of $49.13 per year—a sum almost four times as great as the more readily perceptible income tax.

This interesting computation, of course, tells only part of the hypothetical Jones family's tax story. In whatever state they may live, they also pay for the upkeep of state and local governments, and the picture is incomplete until these expenses, too, are followed through. Let us assume that the Jones family lives in Missouri, and, to be specific, in St. Louis, and see how its tax expenditures for a year add up.

First, income tax. For easy computation, we deduct only the family exemption of $2000 and the $200 for the one dependent. This leaves a taxable income of $1400. Taxed at 1½ per cent, minus the $5 deduction of this bracket, the income tax due is $16.

The Joneses, as depicted in the World-Telegram article, drive their car about 10,000 miles a year, and consume 666 gallons of gasoline in doing so. Their Federal gasoline tax thus totals $6.66. Missouri has a 2-cent rate, so they pay the State $13.32 for the fuel consumed in a year's motoring. The City of St. Louis has a 1-cent tax, accounting for $6.66 more; total, $19.98.

State and city motor licenses are other essential items of automobile expense. The Jones car is a small one. The State collects $11 for the tag it issues for it, and the city $5.50 for the windshield sticker.

If the Joneses own their home, there is a property tax to be paid. If they rent, the landlord pays it, but it must come from the rent paid by the Joneses if he is to remain solvent. Let us assume that the Joneses own their home, and that it is assessed at $4000. The average levy over the State, according to the State Tax Commission, is about $1.65 on the $100 valuation. In St. Louis this year, it is $2.77 on the $100, including $1.74 for municipal purposes, $8 cents for schools and 15 cents for the State. The Jones' property tax thus would total $110.80.

Their contributions to Federal sales tax revenues are matched by their similar outlay to the State. Missouri now has a sales tax of ½ of 1 per cent, collected from the merchants, but paid by the Joneses and their neighbors just the same. After Aug. 27, it will be a direct levy of 1 per cent, laid against all their purchases of food, clothing, admission tickets, electricity, water and gas, laundry and cleaning services, railroad and bus transportation, telephone and telegraph service, etc. "America's Capacity to Consume," issued by the Brookings Institution, has charts showing that families of about the Jones' income level spend around 75 per cent of their earnings on such goods and services. This would total about $2700, for a year's total sales tax cost of $27.

These are only the direct taxes, roughly approximated, which the Jones family pays. We do not include the host of indirect taxes which go into the State Treasury from various sources, which get them from the pocketbooks of the Joneses and other consumers. These include the various inspection fees—on factories and stores, on hotels and restaurants, on egg, dairy, soft drink and ice cream producers and vendors. They include the cost of public utility valuation and rate investigations, which are paid by the companies and then amortized over a period of years as part of operating expenses. They include the taxes on liquor sales and the cost of licenses. They include the corporation franchise tax, occupation taxes, the State tax of 2 per cent on premiums of foreign insurance companies, etc.

Adding up the figures that can be computed with any degree of accuracy, we have a total of $190.28. With the Federal taxes included, the amount is $253.01. This is the Jones family's modest contribution to the 12 or more billion tax dollars paid annually to all the units of government in the United States. Their share is a microscopic one when viewed against the background of the national total, but it is an impressive sum when seen in the perspective of the Jones pocketbook.

This is the fragmentary tax budget of one American family—a family rather above the average, for it represents one of 1,700,000 individuals in a nation of 125,000,000 whose income is large enough to be taxed under the present Federal income tax schedules. Few families, it is safe to say, have any idea that their contributions to government bulk so large when separated from the daily record of expenditures.

The computation brings home the lesson that taxes, direct or indirect, are paid by all. It shows again how an added tax on consumption, such as the impending sales tax, is deceptive in its alleged painlessness. It shows how much more the average citizen should be concerned in the workings of the governments under which he lives, and the public servants whom he helps support. It takes a good many days of work for John Jones to meet his visible and invisible tax bill.

TOO EARLY TO CHEER.

Mr. Hopkins reports a decline of 6.8 per cent in the number of families receiving relief between May and June, continuing a downward movement that began last February. The total number of families on relief in June was 3,830,871. On its face, this is good news, but it is still too early to cheer. It remains to be seen what happened to the families erased from the rolls. Were most of their bread-winners absorbed by private business or were they merely transferred to public works projects requiring Government expenditure? If the latter, we are merely in the same position we were in December, 1933, when the sudden drop in relief expenditures was accounted for by enormous Federal expenditures under CWA.

Even assuming that the gradual decline in relief rolls since February is due to absorption of workers by private business, there is no ground for excessive optimism. Consider these figures: The number of families on relief in June (3,830,871) is approximately the number on relief in January, 1933 (3,850,000), and in April, May and June, 1934 (3,873,110, 3,781,775 and 3,716,755). Moreover, Federal expenditures for this purpose are greater. Relief costs in

It is difficult to see that any appreciable progress in making inroads upon unemployment has occurred in the last two years. Undoubtedly, NRA provided a considerable number of new jobs, but, as against this gain, many thousands of unemployed persons who had managed in one way or another to keep off relief rolls were forced to succumb. Last winter more than 20,000,000 persons, one in every six in the nation, were on relief. That figure is not very much lower today. (The family-relief figure for June does not include individuals on relief.)

We hear these days many cheering reports from various sources, but there can be no genuine hope for recovery until there is a marked decrease in relief requirements due, not to Federal public works projects, which are only another form of relief, but to re-employment of men by private business. It is yet to be demonstrated that the latter process is occurring.

THE BANKING BILL.

The banking bill which has just been passed by the Senate, with so little opposition that no record vote was taken, shows what can be accomplished in the field of legislation when men of different views stop calling names and sit down together in an honest effort to reach agreement.

No longer ago than last May the cry was going up from certain affected interests that the proposal to increase Washington's control of the flow of credit—a proposal that still remains the heart of the bill—would wreck the whole banking structure of the country by subjecting it to political domination. That unthinking criticism was reflected in a resolution adopted at the meeting in Washington of the United States Chamber of Commerce. On the other hand, the American Bankers' Association, which, as we commented at the time, is a better authority on banking problems than the Chamber of Commerce, saw nothing horrendous in the proposal, but saw it as an effort—mistaken in some particulars, but in the main both well-intentioned and practicable—to bring the banking practice of the country into line with the country's needs.

The Bankers' Association proceeded to offer a series of constructive suggestions—an abused word, "constructive," but applicable here—and it is very largely as a result of these suggestions that the fair and workable compromise embodied in the Senate bill has been reached. It appears likely that out of the deliberations of the Senate and House conferees will come a measure satisfactory both to the Treasury and to the generality of bankers, though not, of course, to those bankers who prefer that New York should continue to enjoy its present large degree of control over the national credit.

It is this matter of credit control that has formed the crux of the dispute over the banking bill. The open-market policies of the Federal Reserve Board are now initiated by the Governors of the Federal Reserve banks. This has meant, in practice, that New York has had the preponderant voice in the credit control which is exercised through so-called open-market operations—the buying and selling of Government securities by the Reserve banks. The Senate bill on this point offers a reasonable compromise between the present system and the provisions of the House bill, which would give the Reserve Board exclusive control over open-market operations. The Senate bill would create an open-market committee consisting of the seven members of the reconstructed Reserve Board and five representatives of the regional banks; thus the banks would have their say in the determination of open-market policies but on a division could be outvoted by the public's representatives.

There are at least two provisions of the Senate bill that ought by all means to come out. One of these is the permission to commercial banks, under certain restrictions, to return to the practice of underwriting securities. There should be no weakening of the law which lately set up bars against that dangerous and unsocial practice. Again, there is a provision in the Senate bill which loosens the present law pertaining to interlocking directorates. It is proposed that this law, which forbids interlocking directorates except upon permission by the Federal Reserve Board, be changed to permit one extra directorate without such permission. Interlocking directorates are conducive neither to the public welfare nor to sound banking, and the Senate's suggested extension of the privilege, along with the underwriting section, should be knocked out by the conferees on the bill.

TWO MORE PARKS.

It is good to know that steps are being taken in Washington to complete acquisition by the Federal Government of land in Missouri for two large recreational areas, projected some time ago. That of 12,000 acres, planned to include both sides of Glaise Creek in Miller and Camden counties, will be a fine addition to the recreational facilities in the Lake of the Ozarks region. Of more value to the St. Louis area because of its nearness to the city will be that on the Cuivre River in Lincoln County, which is the county north of St. Charles County. A park of 3000 to 5000 acres within a short drive of St. Louis, such as this second project promises, will be a notable community asset. We hope to see it developed as speedily as is consistent with the adequate preparation of a large natural playground.

THE DAVIS CUP MATCHES.

Barring miracles, Dwight Davis' cup, representing world tennis supremacy, will remain in England for another year. Our only chance, on paper at least, was for Allison and Budge to win two singles matches from Austin and for Allison and Van Ryn to take the doubles. In yesterday's palpitating match, however, Austin upset the strategy by defeating Allison, following which Perry polished off young Donald Budge. That means the United States must win the remaining three matches, and our chances are approximately those of Ethiopia against Italy.

We dare say no one will cavil at another English victory. Perry dominates tennis today almost as commandingly as Tilden in his prime, and Austin, under pressure, rises to magnificent heights. Speaking of Tilden, we might mention that this hero of former Davis Cup battles is the villain of the present piece. In luring Ellsworth Vines from amateur competition, he deprived the American Davis Cup team of its most brilliant star. Apparently, no man living is Perry's master unless it is Vines, who has forfeited the right to compete against him.

So let us all prepare to sing "God Save the King" and to salute the Union Jack, though muttering under our breaths, "Come on, you miracle!"

Ingenious, and More

THE FIRST BUS OUT. By Eugene Lohrke.
(D. Appleton-Century Co., New York City.)

HERE is one of the strangest stories this reviewer has seen in years. Story is, perhaps, hardly the word; for nothing eventuates, and it would be difficult for anyone to say with precision just what has been told when the telling ceases, although the imaginative reader will be held fascinated from beginning to end. What the author achieves, with highly exceptional skill, is a tremendous but indescribable mood such as may accompany the memory of some evil, self-defeating dream, haunted by adumbrations of meaning always about to be, but never quite, grasped.

A strangely assorted group of characters, with widely divergent life histories and aims, is assembled at a bus station in the eerie light of a foggy dawn. All are bound in different directions, and yet each in buying his ticket is told to take "the first bus out." By sharing the thoughts of the various passengers, the reader becomes aware of their lives as the bus speeds faster and faster.

The misty landscape takes on as many aspects as there are travelers, each of whom is ever on the point of arriving where he has longed most to be. Finally one, suspecting that he has already passed his station, reaches for the bell rope—and there isn't any. Then it is noted that there is no one in the driver's seat!

Some may insist that the whole phantasmagoria occurs in the mind of one of the passengers during the stretched-out moment in which he takes his own life. Others will find in the text, or at least read into it, a fantastic representation of human fate in general. But whatever the interpretation may be, it seems not too much to say that if Poe had written "The First Bus Out," it would probably be regarded as one of his most ingeniously concocted nightmares.

Often, by brief flashes, the extraordinary mentality of the author is revealed. There are many swift sentences with illumination in them—if only the light would stay. And before the book ends, the more careful and reflective reader is likely to conclude that the author is far from having accepted the cheap pseudo-philosophy of pessimism now in fashion, although no spirit of joyful affirmation is anywhere in evidence.

SAINTE GENEVIEVE: THE STORY OF MISSOURI'S OLDEST SETTLEMENT.
By Francis J. Yealy, S. J. (The Bicentennial Historical Committee, Ste. Genevieve, Mo.)

THE current celebration at historic Ste. Genevieve, down the Mississippi, called for a freshly written account of the town's two centuries, and Dr. Yealy, who is associate professor of English literature in St. Louis University, has brought out this compact volume to meet that need. The author makes a point of disclaiming any special abilities as a scientific investigator, but it is plain that he has gone about his task of assembling the facts from the more or less inaccessible studies of the past with a real relish.

His deep feeling for Ste. Genevieve is indicated at the outset in the dedication to his father, who "through a long course of years has observed the development of Ste. Genevieve, furthered it with unselfish effort, adorned it with a gracious and noble life." There are a number of good pictures of fine old houses and a list of 30-odd references for those who want Ste. Genevieve's story in greater detail.

THE NEW AMERICA, THE NEW WORLD. By H. G. Wells. (Macmillan Co., New York City.)

WHEN H. G. Wells visited Washington in April of last year, "there seemed to me," he confesses, "an unprecedented creative effort in American affairs." He was "enormously impressed," thinking that "America was about to be made over, with its eyes open, into a more rational social order." When he returned in March of this year, "it was a considerable anticlimax," he declares, "to hear America talking aloud in the person of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin," and in the various "raucous voices," notably that of Huey Long.

Conceivably, there are those who might feel greater confidence in what the prophet now has to say about America if he could give cogent reasons for having been "enormously impressed" last year.

"That axis of strength, clear thought which I had hoped to find," he says, "that lucid, guiding outline of the relations of America to its future and the world, I found, hadn't appeared—not even in the White House." He does not say specifically how he managed to endure such a hope in this necessarily chaotic stage of the social process, nor why he should have expected so early a clarification of the muddle, in America of all nations.

Mr. Wells "had a quite extraordinary conversation with a group of Government administrators," as a result of which "it was astonishing to realize" that no "primary decision" had been reached as to just what, exactly, was the social aim.

Such amazements and anticlimactic surprises may well seem in themselves amazing and anticlimactic in a social philosopher and prophet of Mr. Wells' alleged caliber; for surely the fundamental social pattern has changed not at all during the past year.

In considering constructively the present world-wide social muddle, Mr. Wells seems to regard the war danger, rather than the underlying cause thereof, as the matter of first importance; and early in his book he gives the impression of entertaining the idea that world unity ought to be established by international agreement before it is too late—as though it were possible to create an integrated world order out of nations that, by reason of their internal social economy, are absolutely compelled to compete desperately for survival.

Later on, he does touch upon the internal social organization of the nations, suggesting the fatal joke involved; but he certainly seems to make a secondary matter of it. He even points out, what should be obvious, that if international peace could be established by agreement under the present social scheme, unemployment in all nations would be very considerably increased by the shutting down of munitions factories and the consequent crippling of allied industries.

Then why talk as though the immediate establishment of a world order in the interest of peace, without first attacking the fundamental cause of the trouble, were desirable? The unemployment problem and the modern war problem are traceable to a single source.

America has been accustomed to flatter itself and to be flattered on the assumption that we are the leaders of the world in the matter of high idealism. It would be well if we could discard that sort of may-kish nonsense. As a nation we are, in reality, hard-balled go-getters with an appalling strain of glib sentimentalism in us.

Mr. Wells concludes with something of the old flattery to which we are accustomed. America, most it seems, lead the way. "If America does not go high and resolute and proud, consciously taking the leadership of mankind in the realization of a new way of living, she will go low and she will drag the world down with her. The only way out for America is up."

Up where? THE CIRCUS OF DOCTOR LAO. By Charles G. Finney. (The Viking Press, New York City.)

I T would seem that Charles G. Finney, having striven in vain to make some sort of sense out of the tangled irrationalities of the contemporary world, had decided to call it a day, and, by way of relieving boredom too profound for tears, had set about the doubtful business of telling himself a tale even more hilariously preposterous than reality. If this was Mr. Finney's purpose, it is only just, both to him and to the world, to admit that he seems to have succeeded.

Surely in "The Circus of Doctor Lao" the cock-eyed genius of absurdity has produced a negative masterpiece deserving to rank with even the most serious efforts of Gertrude Stein. And it is not as though Mr. Finney were not lucid in his statements to know what he is talking about at every moment of his narrative. The sentences march in well-ordered paragraphs and the whole moves proudly like an army with banners. But where to and why? The publishers say you can search them; they don't know the answer. The author says you can search him, too, for he doesn't know the answer, either. There isn't any answer.

But for some reason or other, you chuckle along with the crazy tale, often wishing you could advise Mr. Finney to take a jump in the lake, and wondering why you don't search him, too, for he doesn't know the answer, either. There isn't any answer. But for some reason or other, you chuckle along with the crazy tale, often wishing you could advise Mr. Finney to take a jump in the lake, and wondering why you don't search him, too, for he doesn't know the answer, either. There come times when intellectual fooling may be better for the moment than serious thought. "The Circus of Doctor Lao" is for such times.

TAX BILL ALTERED TO HIT INCOMES AS LOW AS $50,000

Democrats of House Committee Expect to Have It Introduced Tomorrow and Passed This Week.

SAY IT WILL RAISE $275,000,000 A YEAR

Exact Levies Agreed on Withheld—Enlarging of Scope May Meet Criticism by G. O. P.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 27.—The President's new tax bill was altered in committee today to increase the rates on incomes as low as $50,000. House Ways and Means Committee Democrats who are drafting the bill have yet to consider many comparatively minor points. Acting Chairman Hill, Washington, said it had been arranged to have the bill introduced formally and taken up by the full committee Monday. The Democrats hope to get a new measure through the House a week from tonight.

Senate Seeks Quick Action.
Senate Democratic leaders meanwhile were at work lining up their big majority against all amendments when the tax bill reaches the Senate. They figured such an agreement would get the bill through the Senate within a week. If this could be done, it would leave ample time for Congress to finish its work before the end of August.

Many obstacles, such as conference agreements on the AAA amendments, omnibus banking, social security and utilities holding company bills, nevertheless still stand in the way of prompt adjournment.

Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader, made a criticism of the bill common among members of his party. He said: "The tax bill is not intended as a revenue bill. When you write a revenue bill, you have to go down and tax the middle classes."

The decision of committee Democrats to expand the scope of their bill obviously was designed to answer such arguments at least in part.

Estimated Revenue $275,000,000.
Until today, the tentative understanding among Democrats had been that the bill would increase the taxes on individual incomes of more than $150,000 a year. The stepped up surtaxes in that group were estimated to produce $20,000,000 a year. Inheritance and gift taxes $110,000,000 to $118,000,000; graduated corporation income taxes $15,000,000, and excess profits taxes $100,000,000.

That made the total $245,000,000 to $253,000,000. Today's action, in addition to hitting the top tax payers—instead of fewer than 1000 under the first plan—was estimated to bring in an additional $24,000,000 or $25,000,000 a year.

Thus, said Chairman Hill, the total bill would produce $275,000,000 a year in time like the present and upward of $400,000,000 when business was normal. Furthermore, he said there was a chance that the levies already tentatively accepted on inheritances, which range from 4 to 75 per cent, might also be increased.

Details Withheld.
Committee men declined to make public, for the time being, the exact, proposed new individual income tax schedules. Hill said, however, that roughly the new schedule would increase the surtaxes on a $50,000 to $60,000 income about 1 per cent above the present 30 per cent. The rates, he added, would blend at a higher point in the scale into the schedule already tentatively adopted, which topped the maximum would still be 75 per cent, against the present 59, on income of more than $100,000.

The Democrats had tentatively agreed to make the individual and graduated corporation and excess profits taxes effective for the first taxable year following the enactment of the bill, Hill said. The inheritance and gift taxes, he said, would become operative immediately.

Some Exemptions Listed.
Also, it was learned that the bill included no provision earmarking the new revenue for retirement of the public debt, despite the assertion by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that he time had come to begin thinking about reducing borrowings and decreasing the debt. One reason, it was asserted, was the constitutional question. Congress, under the Constitution, has authority to raise revenue only for general financing of the Government.

Charitable, eleemosynary, educational and other organizations not operating for profit will be exempt from paying taxes on gifts which they receive, Hill said. No change would be made, however, in the existing laws which give the giver of a gift must pay. At present, an individual donor may give up to $5000 but not to exceed 15 per cent of his net income, without paying a tax. A corporation or business is not exempt from taxes on any gifts except those necessary to the maintenance of its operations.

Text of Ethiopia's Complaint In 1926 Against White Races

THE text of Ethiopia's protest to the League in 1926, expressing distrust of the white races, follows:

"Peace be with you!"

"Our Government has recently received from the British and Italian governments identical notes informing us that these governments have arrived at an agreement to support each other with a view to obtaining a concession for the British Government to undertake the conservation of the waters of our Lake Tana, and for the Italian Government to construct a railway through our empire."

"We have been profoundly moved by the conclusion of this agreement, concluded without our being consulted or informed and by the action of the two governments in sending a joint notification."

"In the first place on our admission to the League of Nations we were told that all nations were to be on a footing of equality within the league, and that their independence was to be universally respected."

"Nor must it be forgotten that we have only recently been introduced to modern civilization and that our history, glorious though it be, has not prepared us for ready adjustment to conditions which are often quite beyond the grasp of our experiences. Nature herself has never gone forward by sudden bounds and no country has been metamorphosed over night."

"With our well known eagerness for progress—given time and the friendly advice of countries whose geographical position has enabled them to outdistance us in the race—we shall be able to secure gradual but continual improvements which will make Abyssinia great in the future and not to have throughout the past. But if we try to go too fast accidents may happen."

offer to Mussolini, the British Ambassador said they "lead to no practical results."

Registration of Treaties.
Under the League Covenant, all international treaties and agreements, negotiated previously to the creation of the League of Nations, had to be registered with the League's treaty section. That was a part of "open diplomacy" and the supposed death blow to the intrigues of secret treaties of pre-war days. The British consequently, quietly and unobtrusively, registered the agreements which marked the various sources of a fairly comprehensive picture of the understandings over the coveted Ethiopian territory, resources, etc., is available. The terms of the Italians, in part, provided that:

In the event of the predominance of Great Britain in respect of the control of the waters of Lake Tana, Italy offers Great Britain her support in order that she may obtain from Ethiopia the concession to carry out works of commercial and industrial nature in the lake and its tributaries, pending the delimitation of the extent of the territorial zone to be recognized as pertaining to Great Britain in respect of the latter's predominant hydraulic interests, and pending a just consideration of the reservation on behalf of Italy by the Tripartite Agreement likewise in respect to her hydraulic interests. Italy further offers her support to Great Britain in order that the latter may obtain from Ethiopia the right to construct and maintain a motor road between Lake Tana and the Sudan."

In return, the Italians demanded from Britain a real support to their desires to build a railway across Ethiopia connecting their two colonies of Eritrea and Somalia, and running west of Addis Ababa. Rome also asked for support in obtaining an exclusive economic influence in Western Ethiopia and in the whole territory crossed by the proposed railway, and a promise that the British would support before the Ethiopian Government, all of Italy's requests for economic concessions in the Italian zone.

Reopening of Question.
In reopening the Ethiopian question with Mussolini in December, 1925, Sir Ronald explained that at the time (in 1919) the British had not seen their way clear to consider Italy's offer, chiefly because of its objection felt in England to the idea of allowing a foreign power to establish any sort of control over the headwaters of the rivers so vital to the prosperity and even existence of Egypt and the Sudan.

At the time, however, had changed, it seems, because Sir Ronald told Mussolini (in December, 1925) that "in view of the mutual confidence that has been established, His Majesty's Government after further examining the questions, have recognized that the Italian proposal (of November, 1919) is not in contradiction with the London Agreement of Dec. 13, 1906."

"I therefore have the honor, under instructions from the Foreign Ministry," said Sir Ronald, in a note to Mussolini, "to express His Majesty's support and assistance at Addis Ababa with the Abyssinian Government in order to obtain from them a concession for His Majesty's Government to construct" any time for reflection or consideration for our people's needs."

"For this reason, we have every intention of guiding them along the path of improvement and progress; but through their history they have seldom met with foreigners who did not desire to possess them with a view to obtaining a concession for the British Government to undertake the conservation of the waters of our Lake Tana, and for the Italian Government to construct a railway through our empire."

rather embarrassing position. On Aug. 3, 1928, he sent a note to the Secretary-General of the League, explaining that the Ethiopian Government had "misconstrued the purport of the Anglo-Italian agreement" and quite obviously the intentions attributed to London and Rome never had been entertained. Furthermore, Sir Austen's note explained, there was no desire to impose on a fellow-member of the League the wishes of another. Previously, in Parliament, the Foreign Minister had stated that his government considered the agreement in the interests of all three parties, but that if Ethiopia objected, as it had a perfect right to do, the conversations had no value whatsoever.

The Italians similarly deposited with the League explanations identical to those made by Sir Austen. The Italian note said:

"The Italian Government would observe that neither in the letter nor in the spirit of these notes can anything be found which would justify the apprehension on the part of the Abyssinian Government that the Italian and British governments, in concert, intended to precipitate and forcible pressure on Abyssinia; the friendly and explicit assurances already given in this connection should have sufficed to prove that any such apprehension is absolutely groundless."

The Ethiopians were quick to take advantage of the favorable diplomatic turn and on Sept. 4, 1928, to make the record clear and official, they asked the League to register all correspondence, statements, declarations and explanations together with Addis Ababa's Rome's and London's interpretations, which all agreed that Ethiopia's independence, sovereignty, equality of membership in the League, right to be judge of its own interests were to be recognized and not to be invaded.

The Italian Government then followed up with a Treaty of Conciliation and Arbitration with Addis Ababa, wherein the parties agreed to submit any dispute not settled by diplomatic means to conciliation and arbitration, and not to have recourse to war. Just why this treaty was negotiated, in the view of present events, is not clear unless it was to gain Ethiopia's confidence.

The treaty specifically pledges each party not to engage under any pretext in action calculated to endanger or prejudice the independence of the other. It also provides, in Article 3, that "both countries undertake to develop and promote trade between the two countries."

The slowness of the Ethiopians in putting into full effect Article 3 has been cited by Mussolini as a reason for his present aggressive policy. The Italian newspapers interpret Article 3 as a pledge by the Ethiopians to grant Italy the economic and political advantages in the Anglo-Italian notes of 1925 and the London agreement of 1919.

It is interesting to note that two days after the League Council ended in May, during which session Capt. Anthony Eden of England had steadfastly fought for Ethiopia, Addis Ababa came to a tentative agreement with London over the Lake Tana concession. The British were invited to send delegates to Addis Ababa to discuss "terms." Recently, however, after Eden's death, the hands of Mussolini's British Foreign Office asked Ethiopia to postpone the discussions in view of the delicate political situation.

COFFEE PLANTERS PREFER CUT IN PRICE TO BURNING PRODUCT

Industry Points Out Two-thirds of Supply Is Consumed in United States.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 27.—Brazil's invasions of world coffee markets at prices which may be ruinous for competitors was regarded here in political circles as a possibility following a convention of the country's leading planters and brokers.

The coffee men put themselves emphatically on record as opposed to the burning of excess coffee stock, which during the past three years has meant the destruction of more than 35,000,000 sacks, each weighing 132½ pounds at a cost estimated by Finance Minister Arthur Souza Costa to be $225,892,928.

If the policy of selling at low prices is put in force, coffee men pointed out the effect would be to immediately reduce the United States, as three-fifths of this country's coffee is sold in America.

How Nazis Make World Subsidize Export Trade

Attache at Berlin, under certain conditions funds in blocked credit accounts, old credit accounts, emigrants' accounts, notes and securities, and accounts from the sale of securities may be used to purchase German merchandise for export, but only 25 per cent of the invoice may be covered by these blocked funds and the remaining 75 per cent must be in foreign exchange or free reichsmarks. In some instances the owner of the registered marks must buy the goods for his own use, and in other, not more than 20 per cent of the value of the goods may be of foreign raw or auxiliary materials. With other commodities—such as non-essentials as chinaware, brushes, artificial flowers, gloves and the like—registered marks to the extent of 50 to 75 per cent of the invoiced amounts may be used for the purchase of German goods for export, and in still others the marks from the foreigner's special account for domestic payments may be used for 100 per cent payment of the invoiced prices.

System Fixes Prices Abroad.
From the above typical instances it will be seen that the Reichsbank and the Ministry of Economics have power to say at what prices and under what conditions German goods can be sold abroad in competition with other exporters. The regulations chide away and sometimes daily, according to American observers of German trade. The Government's use of the devalued international mark makes it the virtual manager of a "black bourse," that is, an irregular money market, for the benefit of German exporters. Because the transactions are for the most part in bank checks and credits there has been no inflation of the German currency. The plan has also reduced German indebtedness abroad because it includes the purchase of German securities held abroad.

A citation of a few typical cases will perhaps show how the complicated machinery works.

A German exporter offers a New York firm goods priced at 500 reichsmarks or $200 at the present nominal rate of 40 cents a mark. The American, however, says that this price is too high and that he will pay only $175. The German exporter goes to the Foreign Exchange Bureau and explains his difficulty. The bureau may permit him to receive $100 in cash, equal to 250 marks of nominal value. The New York importer then finds an owner of a blocked account of marks in Germany who will sell him a check for the remaining necessary 250 marks at 30 cents each or $75. The owner of the blocked account is willing to sell at a 25 per cent discount because he cannot get his money out of Germany. Thus the German exporter gets his 500 reichsmarks, the New York importer gets the German products for $175, and the owner of the blocked account gets $75 in cash for a $100 (250 mark) check on which he could not realize. As a matter of fact, if he had created the mark account in Germany before he devalued the dollar, he is making a profit of 5 cents on every mark block account. He has made 25 cents each. Such are the intricacies of foreign exchange.

The above example has been simplified because the transaction between the individual owner of the blocked German account and the New York importer would not be approved by the German Government. The transaction would have been conducted through a bank which had a special account with a German bank.

The American National Foreign Trade Council has protested against Germany using these methods to compete with American goods in Latin America. In response to these protests, the German Government, about three months ago, prohibited the use of registered marks in Brazilian-German trade. The usual procedure at the time was for payment to German exporters of 35 per cent registered marks and 65 per cent in foreign currencies. Lately, however, in answer to the protests of Brazilian importers, this decree has been greatly liberalized and registered marks are again in use.

Sales in Latin America.
According to information in Washington, the products Germany is selling to Latin America under this scheme include locomotives and railroad equipment, automobiles, textiles and optical goods.

One or two of the Latin American countries with adverse trade balances in their German trade tried to monkey with the German currency bus-saw by insisting that Germany buy from them an amount equal to that Germany sold to the particular country. These Latin countries, however, reckoned without Germany's registered marks and the use to which the varying percentages could be put. Thus Germany has been able to increase the sale of its goods in Latin America, more than Germany could consume at home, and proceeded to sell the goods in other foreign markets in competition with the goods of the protesting country. This reduced the price of the goods in the foreign market. Germany, however, took the foreign currency and bought at a discount German blocked accounts or German securities held abroad and thereby reduced its foreign indebtedness.

The American official observers of German trade insist that it is necessary to estimate how much of German international trade is conducted with registered marks. They claim that most of the German trade is either on a registered mark or on a barter basis and that relatively little of it is carried on

SILVER MARKET ABROAD UNEASY OVER U. S. POLICY

Lack of Information on American Policy Leaves Speculators in Far East in Doubt.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 27.—The silver market has become nervous as a result of heavy speculation and lack of information regarding the attitude of the American authorities.

Basing their operations on the idea that the United States Government would continue its buying program, speculators, especially in the Far East, had built up a big bull position. In fact, the silver market since last April has been described as a "speculators' paradise."

Recently some uncertainty developed in consequence of varying statements from political sources abroad, and Eastern speculators unloaded their holdings, leaving the support of the market almost entirely to the United States.

Several leading London authorities hold to their opinion that the present price of silver is artificial and that a slump must come with any reversal of American policy, unless normal demand operates.

An instance of the uncertainties of the situation was seen early this month when there were heavy speculative sales of silver in the absence of the usual American support. Buying orders from American sources prevented a collapse then.

The Financial Times says: "No authoritative pronouncement upon United States silver policy has been made for some time. This has progressively worried the bulls, whose scope for talent will become the more restricted the longer the American sphinx remains silent. The interesting question now is whether the apparent change of policy is intended to be permanent."

The newspaper considers the original object of buying silver to raise commodity prices by increasing money circulation has not been successful, and the hope that China and other silver producing countries would benefit through expanding their buying power has been frustrated.

"The effect has been deflationary and disorganizing, as China has been at pains to make clear," it says. "These circumstances, coupled with the modification of its buying, have raised the question whether the United States has determined henceforward to be content with maintaining the price."

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 28, 1935.

"Cat and Fiddle," Hit Show of 1933 Municipal Opera Season, Returns

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE," Jerome Kern's modern and sophisticated musical romance which drew an attendance of 69,500 when Municipal Opera played it for the first time two years ago, will be brought back tomorrow night for a week's run. St. Louis will say farewell to "Beloved Rogue," for the time being, at its final performance tonight.

Two members of the original New York company of "The Cat and Fiddle" will be seen in this week's production. They are Odette Myrtil, as Odette, and Bobby Jarvis as Alexander Sheridan. Both came to the American Theater in February, 1927, when St. Louis saw the show for the first time. The male romantic lead at that time was played by Michael Bartlett, who has risen to fame in recent weeks with Grace Moore in "Love Me Forever."

Miss Myrtil, making her first appearance in Forest Park, will remain for "The Desert Song" and "Roberta." In the latter show, she will do Clementina Scharwenka, a part that was hers at the American Theater last winter and which went to Ginger Rogers in the screen version of the show.

Widely known both as an actress and violinist, Miss Myrtil has been on the stage since 1911, when she started out as a girl violinist. Three years later she reached New York in "The Folies of 1914." Her subsequent shows include the "Folies of 1915," "La Ceinture de Venus," "Vogues of 1924," "The Love Song," "Countess Maritza," "White Lilacs," "Broadway Nights" and "A Night in Paris."

Robert Halliday, the season's busiest leading man, will be the young Rumanian composer, Victor Florescu, and Nancy McCord, who returned to St. Louis for "Beloved Rogue" last week, will be the Shirley Sheridan who was in the 1933 opera version of "The Cat and the Fiddle."

THE romance of Victor and Shirley creates the action of the show. At the beginning, they meet by chance in Brussels, Belgium, and are attracted to each other but immediately are separated. Later, however, chance brings them into studios on the same court. Victor is writing an operetta, "The Passionate Pilgrim," but his producer, Daudet, thinks some of the music is too heavy and wants to interpolate numbers written by Sibley.

Victor, even on knowing that Shirley wrote the melodies, is unwilling to have them used. He is goaded on, too, by Odette, prima donna engaged for the lead in the show. Eventually the situation works out to complete happiness for the lovers.

In two acts and 15 scenes, "The Cat and the Fiddle" contains many songs which have long ago been classified as "hits." Among them are "The Night Was Made for Love," "She Didn't Say Yes, She Didn't Say No," "Try to Forget," "The Love Parade," "A New Love Is Old" and "One Moment Alone." The book of the show is by Otto Harbach, whose works are well-known to opera-goers.

Opposite Jarvis in his comedy role will be Audrey Christie, as Angie. William Hain is the street vendor, Pompinet; and Leslie Adams the Daudet. Al Downing, Roy Gordon, Sheila Dille, Frank Hazzard, Charles Gallagher, Una Val, Earle MacVeigh, Marion Huntley, Victor Casmore, Phil Farley, Duke McHale and Rosemary Deering complete the list of principals. John McManus will direct the orchestra.

As in the 1933 season, "The Cat and the Fiddle" will be followed, a week from tomorrow night, by "The Desert Song," which originally was a Broadway production of Laurence Schwab, the opera's present producing director. Robert Halliday, who created the role of Pierre Birabeau, will play it here. Ruby Mercer, star of "The Chocolate Soldier" and "The Vagabond King" will return as Margot, opposite Halliday. Helen Gray, a newcomer. Bobby Jarvis, William Hain, Odette Myrtil, Audrey Christie and Roy Gordon will be in the cast.

Mummers to Present Gilbert's "Engaged" In Garden This Week

THE Mummers, under the direction of W. H. Holland, will present W. S. Gilbert's "Engaged" in a garden theater at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Marx, 3508 Longfellow boulevard, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights of this week.

"Engaged," by one of the celebrated authors of the Gilbert-Sullivan operettas, is a farce satirizing the over-elaborate speech of the Nineties. In the cast are Mary Hohenberger, Marie Stonecipher, Mae Forsyth, Jeanne Favre, Dorothy Timmerhoff, Leland Brewer, George Abel, Charles Gallagher, Wesley Gore and Frank Novotny. W. H. Holland directed and Robert Pegram designed the settings.

Only 3 Per Cent Of Movie Stories Held Censorable

ONLY three per cent of the material—plays, novels, originals—considered for motion picture production are flatly turned down because of objectionable themes. Half of the stories and plays bought by the film companies contain objectionable matter, which must be eliminated before filming.

John Hammell, head of the Paramount studio censor board, is authority for these statements. The improper material, he says, cannot even be revamped for filming, falls into two main classifications: Stories in which sex illegality is condoned and stories in which criminals are made to appear glamorous.

Hammell and his aides (who have their counterparts in all the major studios) read novels and plays and stories considered for purchase to determine whether they are filmable under the movies' own code of morals and the dissimilar rules of the various censor boards. Later Hammell works with the scenario writers, getting daily copies of their progress to check against irregularities in action or dialogue.

"State and municipal censorship is a hit and miss proposition," says Hammell, whose department was organized when outside interests began their vigorous campaign against alleged indecent movies. "Our purpose is to summarize the cuts made by all censor boards from all pictures so that we may avoid trouble under the rule of law. In the future what is considered objectionable will be considered objectionable. However, one state cuts an entire sequence from a film; another passes it by. A city censor objects to a line of dialogue while in another city, the censor okays that line, but cuts another."

"It has been our experience that good taste is the rule to follow. Almost any situation may be pictured and talked about on the screen if it is done with good taste."

THE new censorship of the Will H. Hays and his first assistant, Joseph L. Breen, passed its first anniversary this month and has asserted definitely its authority over screen writing.

When the industry's "code of morals" went into effect, Breen was forced to send script to order picture after picture whitewashed before he'd approve it for public release. After several months of such procreant, Hollywood's writers, who had been into their stories things they knew had no business there. They haven't all turned Pollyannas yet, but it's a safe conjecture that Breen's department writes fewer letters and has less arguments than it did a few months ago.

What has been the result of the demand for clean pictures, and its effect on the morals of the nation, only the public can judge. The cleanup campaign made Hollywood scratch for new material. It took the ban off costume pictures and permitted opera and Shakespeare to reach the screen. It made writers and directors more subtle and crafty. It made the movies get out of a rut and at the same time gave them a new, intelligent following. And it has helped the studios make money. Why shouldn't Hollywood be pleased?

Lofty Towers Of "Crusades" Sent to Flames

BY H. H. NIEMEYER.
HOLLYWOOD, July 27.

THIS is the time of the year, we have remarked before, when the summer tourists flock to Hollywood hoping to get a chance to go through the studios. Sometimes they have a letter of introduction from an usher in a movie palace back home. Generally, however, they are armed only with the hope, and a pretty forlorn hope at that. Once in a while someone with a genuine pull makes the grade and sees the wheels go round. A short time ago, we happened to go along with one of the lucky ones and discovered what impressed him most was not the construction at the studios but the destruction there.

It is rather amazing to find thousands of dollars' worth of great stage settings being torn to pieces and burned in the giant studio incinerators. Yet there is nothing else to be done with them. Of course, modern street sets, built out-of-doors, are rather permanent affairs and are left standing. A bit of paint can change a bank building into a well-cared for corner drugstore into a pool room. That is done every day, but the big special sets, sets for "Cavalcade," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Cleopatra" and things like that are just too good after the picture has been made and have to be torn down to make room for other dramas.

We saw them chopping down and carting away the buildings, and forests and huge walls which went to make up the paraphernalia for the lately completed film, "The Crusades." The sets occupied several acres of ground space and there were hundreds of helmets, uniforms and weapons of twelfth century vintage. The costumes and the war material were being stored away against the time when another such drama may be filmed. But the houses, the walls were a total loss. So it was being consigned to the flames. Studio expense sheets showed that this one prop cost over $5000.

Pictures of this type are so few and far between that it is not considered worth while to attempt to save the costly material and even though a half million board feet of new lumber—studio publicity department figures—were used in the buildings it was cut into such special shapes that there was no salvage in it.

The Community Playhouse in Pasadena is staging a series of the least known plays of Shakespeare at the present time and borrowed a lot of the arms and armor. The rest has gone to the storehouse.

BUILDING these sets, all sets in fact, comes under the head, in studio language, of "production value"—a vague generalization that includes the art direction, sets, furnishings, locations and the use of extra people. After the scenario, the art director is the first to know the facts and figures about a planned production. He gets to work as the scenario man starts the final version of the story. He works weeks, sometimes months ahead of other studio departments. His sketches and blue prints are ready and approved long before the cast is finally set, often before the picture has a name.

So it is that during the lowest ebb of actual studio production the art department may be extraordinarily busy. It is now, at most studios, during this slack season, only the average number of pictures are in work, but where plans for several particularly spectacular and costly productions are well under way.

One such picture is "Frisco Kid," which is a story of San Francisco in the vigilante days—in 1854 to be exact—and in which James Cagney will star. A whole section of the San Francisco waterfront as it was then, including several blocks of buildings and two or three old-fashioned ships, must be provided for this undertaking.

The set will be built on the banks of a studio lake, a man-made pond of several acres, and it will be, as far as it is possible to make it, an exact replica of certain sections of the frontier city during the exciting days of the gold rush.

This sounds simple enough but it is a man-sized job for any art director. John Hughes, who is in direct charge of the building of these sets, has on his desk the colored sketches of the old-fashioned streets as they are to be built for the camera. Draftsmen are at work in an adjoining room, translating these sketches into ground plans, blue prints, figures and estimates. For weeks the studio research department has scoured the country for him, gathering information.

For "Frisco Kid," Hughes has reproduced many famous old landmarks of early San Francisco. The Jenny Lind Theater will be shown. The "Bella Pacific" hotel, a replica of the old Bella Union, will be built during production on the site of a warehouse that is burned early in the story.

Pacific Street, Kearney Street, Washington and Clay Streets are to be shown, with more than 30 practical working fronts—stores,

As regards the event technique of the screen, it has not improved greatly in the last two years, nine months since "Smilin' Through" was issued. In lighting, perhaps, as may be judged from seeing the revival; in make-up, some. Miss Shearer and March have been rather perfect in their art, as anyone who remembers Miss Barrett and Mr. Browning in the conservatory scene of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will agree. Perhaps the director, Sidney Franklin, whose forte is exuberance of the romantic instinct, has improved. He did both pictures. Yet if "Smilin' Through" were to be filmed again today, Franklin probably would not find it necessary to create an eerie mood in which to introduce his ghost of Mooneye. He would exercise more care in selecting a child to represent Kathleen, one whose nose might at least be something like Norma Shearer's. (My argument there is to be derived from "David Copperfield," with Frank Lawton and Freddie Bartholomew as alike as two peas. He would scorn many of the conventions now outworn—

The Week's New Films

By COLVIN McPHERSON.

THE good old days are always with us in the motion pictures. This imperishability of screen performance is, I think, one of the most inspiring developments to come out of Mr. Edison's adaptation of the magic lantern. For the screen permits no midnight reminiscences on its parallels to Fanny Davenport, Edwin Booth, Sarah Bernhardt, or the first Ziegfeld show you ever saw. A trip to the archives and out comes the ancient visage. We soon discover whether Norma Shearer and Fredric March were better in "Smilin' Through" or "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." An argument can be settled. These are thoughts apropos of seeing the revived "Smilin' Through" at Loew's this week. Having beheld the lovely ghost of Mooneye Clare on stage and screen some 18 or 20 times now, I am fairly sure of her own immortality and that of her resurrected romance. I have always found, and still find it possible to shed a few tears of sweet surrender when Sir John takes her hand for the blissful exit. As regards the event technique of the screen, it has not improved greatly in the last two years, nine months since "Smilin' Through" was issued. In lighting, perhaps, as may be judged from seeing the revival; in make-up, some. Miss Shearer and March have been rather perfect in their art, as anyone who remembers Miss Barrett and Mr. Browning in the conservatory scene of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will agree. Perhaps the director, Sidney Franklin, whose forte is exuberance of the romantic instinct, has improved. He did both pictures. Yet if "Smilin' Through" were to be filmed again today, Franklin probably would not find it necessary to create an eerie mood in which to introduce his ghost of Mooneye. He would exercise more care in selecting a child to represent Kathleen, one whose nose might at least be something like Norma Shearer's. the bereft Kathleen waving goodbye to a troop train, and standing on the platform, on another occasion, a long time after the local had rounded the bend. Such things are invented by the geniuses of movie direction, serve for a while as conventions in short statement and pass on to the uninitiated "quickie" director whose shabby effort must employ as much salvage as possible. Characters in the "10 best pictures of 1935" would not be caught with such expressions as "You're telling me," "What do you think?" and "So what?" These stale comebacks are used in "Smilin' Through." In 1935, certainly, shall find that the bright cracks of today have kept their chromium plating no longer than the door-knobs treated by the sidewalk hawkers. The screen art must remain new and of the day. As any institution or human being not embarrassed by the specter of the past, it becomes wise each year. And the proof of that point is always within reach.

The New Adventures of Tarzan

DESCENDING now without the aid of a parachute, or even a long piece of rope made to look like a jungle vine, we come to consideration of "The New Adventures of Tarzan" at the Missouri Theater. Herman Brix is Hollywood's long-haired boy on this occasion and the entertainment is such as to send the marble-shooting part of the population into the seventh heaven of excitement. Scenes were filmed in Guatemala, and for any St. Louis not planning a hurry-up trip there this vacation, "The New Adventures of Tarzan" will serve as a fair substitute. Tarzan and his pals are hunting for a lost lieutenant and a stone goddess stuffed with a handful of gems. The natives, at so much a head, act very wicked and, in the ruined city of Antigua, Tarzan runs into the same kind of difficulties that beset Joan Lowell in her Guatemalan picture some months ago. The natives, it seems, are ruled over by a scarecrow bathing beauty who can't keep her hands off any comely young actor from Hollywood. But a member of the party has brought along a machine-gun instead of a toothbrush and when he starts decimating the population, he decimates. Tarzan goes swinging through the tree-tops, outwits alligators, wrestles with lions and ocelots and proves himself still the champion hog-caller, fog horn and fire siren combined. A trained chimpanzee almost steals his place. The tag-along picture at the Missouri Theater, "Secret of the Stars," in which two perfectly harmless bit players are killed and the featured actors left alive.

Shanghai.

THE excellent line-up which the Orpheum has been showing for the past eight days will remain over until next Saturday. Its headline is "Shanghai," a slow-moving but impressive drama of the prejudice against one of "Eurasian" (mixed yellow and white) ancestry in the big commercial center. Charles Boyer and Loretta Young give the story their best acting. "Front Page Woman," the second picture, offers a mirthful hour or so as Bette Davis and George Brent fight it out for reputational honors.

Several St. Louis Families Spending Summer Vacation At Point-aux-Barques, Mich.

Flower Garden of Mrs. E. G. Hotchkiss Is One of Show Places at Little Colony Near Saginaw Bay.

By MARGARET ALLEN RUHL, Society Editor of the Post-Dispatch, POINTE-AUX-BARQUES, Mich.,
July 27.

THREE generations of several St. Louis families have spent many summers at this quiet little resort which stretches a few miles along the beach between Saginaw Bay and Lake Huron on Michigan's east coast. Judge Daniel G.
Taylor, oldest St. Louisan in point of summer residence, gave his cottage to his daughter, Mrs. Edward Gillette Hotchkiss, a few years ago.
He still visits here and was here this summer until a few days ago, when he went to New York to sail on an ocean cruise. Mrs. Hotchkiss who is here with her son, Edward Jr., is one of the resort's most enthusiastic gardeners. Her flower garden is one of the show places.
Mr. and Mrs. Albert T. Terry brought their daughters, Miss Elizabeth, now Mrs. John R. Shepley, and Miss Lucy, who married David
B. Calhoun, and their son, Whitelaw Terry, here for years, and now their grandchildren are being reared here in the summer time. Mrs. Shepley and her children, Betty and Terry, have a cottage near her mother.
Mrs. Calhoun is expected early in August, and Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Terry with their family, will be here today from Wequetonsing.
They will be accompanied by Miss Jane and Miss Becky Wells, sisters of Mrs. Whitelaw Terry, who has been presiding as hostess at the summer home of her parents, Mr.
and Mrs. Ernest Wells.

Nearly all in one block. Across the street from the Terry cottage is one leased by Mrs. Marion Niedringhaus, Mrs. Terry's niece, who is here with her children, Gay and Barbara. Mrs. John Brodhead and her sister, Mrs. Robert Whittemore Knapp, are next door neighbors.
Mrs. Knapp, who bought her cottage a few seasons ago, will be joined next week by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton Farrah. Robert Knapp Jr. is with his mother, and Mr. Knapp joins his family when business permits. Miss Barbara Brodhead, a debutante of the past season, is a leader in the younger group, which finds amusement in a movie several miles away, and walks to Thumb Nail Rock, the peculiar flat rock formation at the tip of Michigan's Thumb, as the eastern part of the State is known.
Billy and Miss Janet Brodhead are also with their mother, and Mr.
Brodhead will drive up in August for a second visit.

Social life is centered around the Pointe-aux-Barques Club, built at the water's edge near the summer home of Edgar A. Guest, the poet.
Occasional dances and concerts are held there, and a few rooms are let to those who prefer them to cottages. Of the slightly more than 40 homes composing the resort colony, perhaps a dozen are occupied by St. Louisans who either own them or lease them through friends, for an association is in control, and the casual tourist is discouraged from even a brief visit.

Latest Arrivals.

The latest arrivals from St. Louis are Mrs. John D. Francis and her sons, John Jr. and Grover, who have the summer home of the late Sheppard Smith.
Mrs. Webster Tilton of New York, who lived in St. Louis until a few years ago, and her son, Webster Jr., are sharing a cottage with Mrs. Claire Dickey, and near the entrance to the grounds Mrs.
Benjamin Tompkins is entertaining
Miss Marquita Bakewell. Benoit
Tompkins Jr. is expected next week.
Mrs. Tilton's daughter, Miss Ann Stickney, is the guest of friends in Northeast Harbor, Me. She will come out informally in New York next winter, and probably in St.
Louis the following season.

HARBOR BEACH, Mich., July 27.
A SMALL group of 40 members comprise the Harbor Beach Association, a summer club which owns, on a co-operative plan, the charming resort of Harbor Beach.
The cottages, elaborate log buildings with clipped lawns and flowering hedges, are built on a curving drive close to the shore of Lake

MISS MARGERY SKINNER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse S. Skinner and FRANK GATKE of Oak Park, in his boat, the Michago, speeding on Lake Michigan at Ludington.

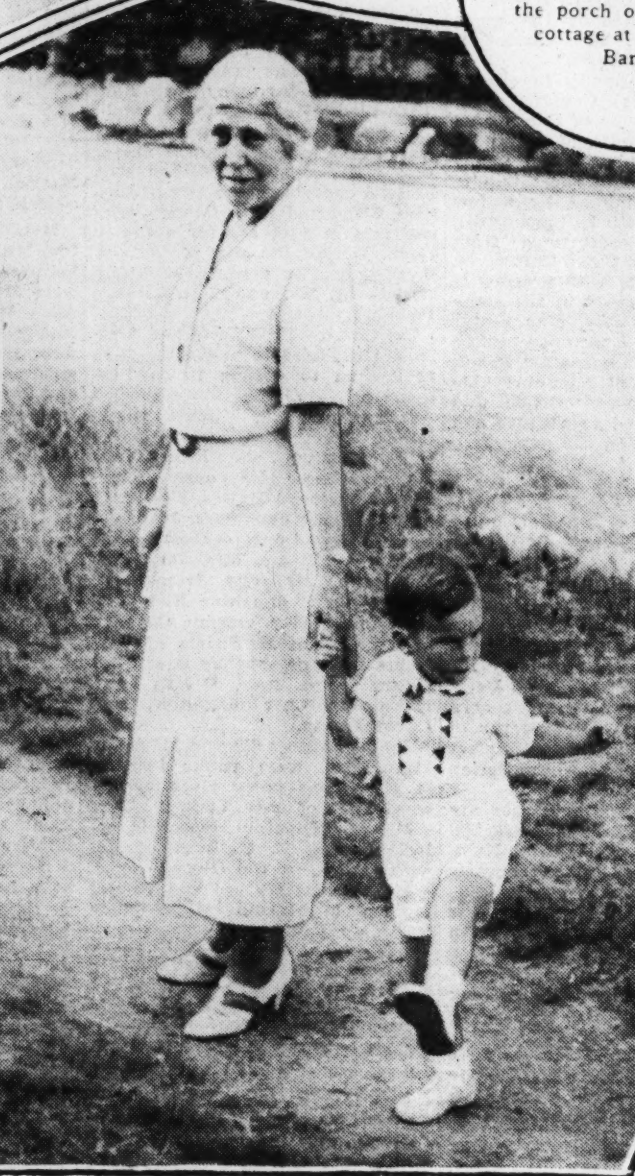

MISS BARBARA BRODHEAD, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Brodhead, silhouetted against the setting sun on Thumb Nail Rock, at Pointe-aux-Barques, where she is spending the summer with her family.

MRS. MARION W. NIEDRINGHAUS (left) making a quilt in her spare time, and MRS. JOHN R. SHEPLEY whiling away a summer afternoon on the porch of the Shepley cottage at Pointe-aux-Barques.

MR. AND MRS. JERE. MAH VAN BUREN JENKS at the salt water pool at Harbor Beach where they will remain until September when they will go to New Haven Conn. to live. She is the former Miss Ruth Ferriss.

MRS. ALBERT T. TERRY and her young grandson TERRY SHEPLEY son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Shepley out for a walk near their cottage at Pointe-aux-Barques.

MRS. THEODORE F. SCHROTH, on board a lake steamer bound for her home in Chicago after a visit with her parents Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bush at their cottage at Epworth Heights, Ludington. She was Miss Katherine Bush of St. Louis.

Summer Theater Diverts St. Louisans At Nantucket

NANTUCKET, Mass., July 27.
THE summer theater here holds the attention of the colonists, among whom are many St. Lou-isans this season. This week, "On Stage," with Osgood Perkins in the leading part, opened. In their accustomed places sat Mr. and Mrs.
A. Wessel Shapleigh, Mrs. Charles Clafin Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hess, the latter the former Miss Julia Evans of St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. Firmin Desloge, Mrs. George
Dobler and Mr. and Mrs. J. D.
Wooster Lambert. This play is being seen with unusual interest because Mrs. Baxter Jackson of New York, daughter of Mrs. Thomas G.
Ratcliffe of St. Louis, assisted in rewriting it. St. Louisans from Hyannis Port, Winooski, Woods Hole and Falmouth were in the audience, when the play was given at the Beach Theater at Falmouth later in the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Firmin Desloge were in Hyannis Port this week on their yacht, the Nimrod, leaving their summer home at Falmouth, Me., for a short visit. On their return to their summer home at Swampscott, Mr. and Mrs. Desloge gave a buffet supper for their sons, William Douglas Houser of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bond
Houser of Troy, Ill., was announced
Friday evening at a buffet supper which Mrs. Tankersley gave for 50 guests. The table was laid on the lawn and decorated with a bouquet of mixed white flowers and lighted
by white tapers.

Miss Tankersley attended Mary Institute where in her senior year she was May Queen, and the School of Fine Arts of Washington University. She spent last winter in New York as a student at the Traphagen School of Design. Mr.
Houser is a graduate of Princeton University. Their wedding will take place in the early fall.

Tankersley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Troy Tankersley, 636
Sherwood drive, Webster Groves, to William Douglas Houser of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bond
Houser of Troy, Ill., was announced
Friday evening at a buffet supper
which Mrs. Tankersley gave for 50 guests. The table was laid on the lawn and decorated with a bouquet
of mixed white flowers and lighted
by white tapers.

Miss Tankersley attended Mary

Two Sisters Added To Debutante List

THE names of Miss Elizabeth and Miss Carol Mansfield, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Mansfield, 5318 Cater avenue, have been added to the debutante list for next winter.

Miss Elizabeth Mansfield was graduated from Mary Institute in the class of 1932 and attended Washington University for two years followed by a year's study with Mme. Jean L. Boue in Paris.

St. Louis Colony At Michigan Resort

Huron, with a central clubhouse which houses the dining-room for all members and their guests. George Jenks, whose son, Jeremiah Van Buren Jenks, married Miss Ruth Ferriss a year or two ago, is president of the association, in which several St. Louis families are represented. Mr. and Mrs. Jenks Sr. divide the entire year between Harbor Beach and Pinehurst, N. C. Their son and daughter-in-law and their baby daughter, Jacqueline, will remain with them here until September, when the younger Jenks family goes to New Haven, Conn., for the winter.

Mrs. J. V. Jenks' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Ferriss, are not here this summer, as is their custom, but her grandmother, Mrs. Franklin Ferriss, has with her her daughter, Mrs. Nathaniel M. Semple and her son, Hugh Ferriss, now of New York. Later in the summer, Mrs. Semple's son, Hugh Semple, and his bride of a few months, will be here for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. William N. Claggett, with her brother, Walker Evans, are in their cottage for the season, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Dorothy Claggett, and their children, Billy, Dorothy and Donald Jr., have a cottage of their own.

Mr. and Mrs. Landen McCandless and their children, Landen Jr. and Anne, have the cottage belonging to the Bayle estate, and they with the Danforth family, swim frequently in the salt water pool which was opened this year. Mrs. James M. Sloan, who has been living in Washington since leaving St. Louis two years ago, has been a summer resident of Harbor Beach for 30 years. With her now are her daughters, Miss Berkeley; Mrs. George Dock Jr., of Washington, formerly Miss Mildred Sloan, and her son, Donald, and another daughter, Mrs. Mark M. Anderson, who was Miss Isla Sloan and who has been living with her sister, Mrs. H. H. Hopkins (Lucia Sloan) in La Jolla, Cal. Mrs. Isaac Orr of St. Louis, the former Miss Mary Sloan, is expected in August for a family reunion, as are Mrs. Sloan's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Carter Sloan, who will first visit her family in Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton H. Flak's daughters, Mrs. W. Robert Bryant of Detroit, who was Miss Mary Frances Flak before her marriage, and Miss Virginia Flak, have a cottage together, and Mrs. Ernest R. Kroeger, will entertain her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Talbot, later in the summer.

In addition to swimming, golf and tennis are favorite sports. Entertaining of an informal nature, consists chiefly of afternoon cottage parties.

LUDINGTON, Mich., July 27. Cottages occupied by St. Louisans dot each of the three tiers of homes rising from Lake Michigan at Harbor Heights, two miles northwest of the town of Ludington. Near the hotel is the cottage of the Robert F. Britton family, with Mrs. Britton and her daughters, Miss Dorothy and Miss Mary, as its present occupants. Mrs. Britton will be here in August, and Lieut. and Mrs. Frank H. Britton, transferred recently from Fort Bliss, Tex., to Fort Riley, Kan., will complete the family group soon. They are now visiting Mrs. Britton's family in Kansas City.

In their usual cottage high above the water are Mr. and Mrs. Jesse S. Skinner of Webster Groves, their daughter, Miss Margery, and their son, Watson. George Skinner will visit his parents before the season closes. Miss Skinner is president of "Co-Bu," a club for young people, and is prominent in the social life of the resort. Not far south are MISS NANCY NELSON POWELL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carter Powell, whose marriage to Dr. Paul O. Hageman, son of Dr. and Mrs. Harry F. Hageman, will take place Saturday Aug. 24.

MISS MARILYN TANKERSLEY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Troy Tankersley. Her engagement to William Douglas Houser of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bond Houser of Troy, Ill., was announced Friday night at a buffet supper given at the Tankersley home, 636 Sherwood drive, Webster Groves.

MRS. HAROLD JOSEPH HAFNER, a bride of Thursday, July 18. She was the former Miss Jacqueline Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Davis, Clayton. Mr. Hafner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Haffner.

Grand Haven Colony Popular with St. Louisans

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GRAND HAVEN, Mich., July 27. HE amply North Shore Cabana Colony Club House overlooking its tiny village of red, white and blue cabanas is becoming increasingly popular with St. Louisans as the warm season advances. Sheltered from the scorching sun by huge beach umbrellas, Mrs. Hiram S. Liggett, her daughter, Ann S. Liggett and Miss Katherine Annon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Annon, were guests of honor at a luncheon given Tuesday by Mrs. Julian Hutton of Grand Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Dozier, Judge and Mrs. M. L. Joyce, and Mr. and Mrs. Franz Cramers recently joined the club and are often found swimming and lunching there.

Miss Elise White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. White, has as her guests in "Broadview" at Highland Park, Alexander McVoy and Thurston Pettus of St. Louis.

Miss Virginia Rockwell, niece of Mrs. Milton Strauss, has been entertained during her stay by the younger set on St. Louis Ridge. Mrs. Paul Dillon is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. John F. Weber Jr. at "Bonaire."

J. E. Noon, formerly in charge of the St. Louis Country Day School, and director of Camp Cheboygan on Potomac bay for 16 years, returned to camp Saturday evening from a short trip to St. Louis. He missed by a few hours the important ball game with the Waukazoo Resort team from Holland, in which Camp Cheboygan carried off honors with a score of 13 to 7. Participants in the game were Jack Matcheck, star center on the St. Louis University basketball team; Nathan Schaeffer, Frank Edwards and Neil Humphreysville of Webster Groves. Punch and cakes were served to visitors and the two teams after the game.

John Strauss left Friday for a short stay in St. Louis. He represented the Spring Lake Country Club in the interclub golf tournament at Holland.

THIS NEW YORK

By LUCIUS BEEBE

A CERTAIN recently deceased rich man, according to legend, was a fellow with an eye to the details of living. He admired fine and costly things and surrounded himself with them; he liked plenty of service and had a nice eye to its detail.

The story survives that one evening, long ago, when valets and personal servants were more of a novelty in his life than they later became, he returned one night from the opera to be valeted into bed. His man removed his satin-lined lavender and carefully put away his collapsible Gibbs. He eased the great man's feet from his $40 patent leather pumps by Peel and hung up his Poole tailcoat. The platinum and sapphire cigarette box and the black pearl studs from Cartier were put away in the safe, and the plutocrat was rolled into his broadcated $75-a-pair Sulka pajamas. The French windows were opened just the right degree, the Thermos bottle of warm milk and a lettuce sandwich were placed on the bedside table, the night lamp was properly dimmed and the great man was tucked away for a good snooze.

Suddenly and frighteningly half an hour later the valet's bell began to ring clamorously. Servants hopped out of bed all over the house; lights went up; the night watchman came running; some one turned in the Holmes alarm; the valet rushed breathlessly to the master's room. The head of the house reclined in his bed, seething. His brow was congested, petulance and thwarted authority written all over.

"Well," he demanded, "aren't you going to wind my watch?"

It was, of course, Gene Fowler who brought Fire Island into being. The self-styled American peasant passed a winter down there once, living off canned salmon, with no body but the Coast Guard for company and turning out deathless word pictures like crazy. Fowler almost went crazy, too, and came back with his mind a sorry farrago of tatters.

Anyway, Fire Island has been discovered all over again this season, a process which seems to have been going on for some years now. It's a desolate sand spit off Long Island, only to be reached by a dubious sort of ferry out of Bayshore, and there the Herman Shumlin, the Ira Gershwin, Lillian Hellman and a flock of other celebrities pass the summer under the watchful eyes of the rotogravure photographers. There's a roughing-it retreat, however, at Cherry Grove, which one achieves by a ferry out of Sayville, which is reported to be very full of oh-ho and for pity's sake, lady. Linda Lindaburg, Lorna Lindsley's sister, Mildred Ridgely, and her husband, Ralph Allen, Alexander Steinart, John Chapin Mosher and a flock of other choice folk are a more or less permanent colony, and vast troupes of witty wretches come down from Manhattan over week-ends. There is no plumbing, but the swimming is said to be the finest anywhere around, and there is a hotel with an ancient bar that is a caution. John Mosher found himself in possession of a quart of gin the other evening and, experiencing a sort of Martini feeling, went to the hotel in search of French vermouth. The barkeep was agreeable, attentive and sympathetic. He wanted to please, but asserted that the hotel had only a single glass of vermouth left, and that it was just possible that he might be able to sell another Martini himself before the summer was over. He had sold one in June, he said, and there was no telling whether that was an isolated case or a definite trend.

Miss Janet Wilson
Weds J. W. Sims in Church Ceremony

MISS JANET WILSON, daughter of Mrs. Alvah Miller Wilson, 5900 McPherson avenue, became the bride of James William Sims of Carrollton, Ill., at 11 o'clock yesterday morning in a simple ceremony performed by the Rev. Ivan Lee Holt at the Church of the Unity. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Sims of Whitehall, Ill., who were among the out-of-town guests.

White gladioli and candles, in contrast to the green of ferns and palms, decorated the chancel of the church.

The bride wore a tailored ensemble of dusty pink sheer crepe fashioned with a fagoted collar and pockets. Her large straw hat and sandals were wine-colored, matched by the deep purple of the orchids she wore. The bride was unattended and was given in marriage by her grandfather, Frederick H. Deibel. Mr. Sims had his brother, Jewel Sims, as best man.

The bride's mother wore a white crepe ensemble, with a picture hat of white. Her shoulder corsage

Children to Present Pageant.

The children of the Fanning Public School Playground will present a pageant, "Heidi," under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Gorder, at 7:45 p. m. Thursday on the playground, 3417 Grace avenue.

Annual Autumn Fete
Of Catholic Alumnae

THE estate of the late David R. Francis at Maryland and Newstead avenues, will be the setting for the second annual autumn fete of the City Circle of the Catholic alumnae, Saturday afternoon and evening, Aug. 24.

Through the courtesy of the Sisters of Mercy, recent purchasers of the property, the grounds will be opened to the public for this occasion.

Arrangements for the autumn fete, consisting of cards in the afternoon and dinner and dancing in the evening, are in charge of a committee, representatives of the various local Catholic alumnae. The proceeds will be used to further the work of the City Circle—a sight saving class for parochial school children with defective vision.

More Contests
For Golfers in North Michigan

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., July 27. LAST week the professionals held chief attention on the golf links. This week the Michigan State amateur tournament was held on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. One hundred entrants were registered and the championship was won by Bob Bahish of Detroit, runner-up of last year's tournament. His medal score was 71. Edward Novack of Traverse City was runner-up. Many reporters from Harbor Point, Wequetonsing and nearby communities were daily visitors. The next tournament of local importance is the Belvedere Golf Club tournament. Qualifying matches will start Aug. 20. Richard Moss of Signal Hill, East St. Louis, is the defending champion and is expected to arrive with his family Aug. 1 to occupy a cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Mendle, accompanied by their daughter, Marian, and their son, Alvin, are in a cottage on Lake Michigan as are Scott Greenfield and his sister, Miss Minnie Greenfield, who will spend the season here.

Mrs. Ray E. Bolin of St. Louis, with her three sons, Charles II, Francis and Ray Jr., and her daughter, Betty, motored here Sunday and are occupying the same cottage they have had in former years. Mr. Bolin will join his family for August.

Mrs. J. W. Ferguson, accompanied by her son, Charles, of McAllen, Tex., formerly of St. Louis, motored to St. Louis for a week's visit with Mrs. Ferguson's sister, Mrs. Erwin Schwenegardt. Charles Ferguson arrived in Charlevoix last Saturday. Another son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ferguson Jr., joined Mrs. Ferguson in St. Louis and motored with her to spend the summer at their cottage on Lake Charlevoix, arriving Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Avery of Grand Rapids, Mich., arrived last Saturday and will spend the summer here with Mrs. Avery's mother, Mrs. William Noyes Bemis. Mr. Avery is a yachtman on the Ponjola, which has won several Chicago-Mackinaw annual races, and is on board this week-end for a cruise.

Mrs. Charles B. Fox entertained 12 guests for dinner Saturday evening, followed by bridge at her cottage.

Mrs. John M. Olin entertained for her daughters, Miss Georgene and Miss Louise, and their house guests, Miss Jane and Miss Ruth Watkins of Alton, Ill., at the Dillworth Lodge on Lake Charlevoix, preceding the Tuesday evening dance at the Casino.

Miss Rosebud Vailer entertained at dinner in her cottage Thursday evening, in celebration of her birthday. Among the guests were Miss Sally Ann Currie, Miss Georgene and Miss Louise Olin, their guests; Miss Jane and Miss Ruth Watkins, George McKay, Hampden, John Jr., and Curtis Swift and Dwight Currie Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Lortz and their daughter, Mrs. Norman Jones, are at the Belvedere Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Matthews entertained several guests for dinner at the Belvedere Club, followed by bridge at their cottage, Friday evening. Among the guests were Mrs. John Wallace Fristoe, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Vernon Clark and Mrs. Charles B. Fox.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Rarick are guests at the Belvedere Club.

John S. Swift Jr. returned to St. Louis on business Saturday and will join his family here in August. Mr. and Mrs. John S. Swift, accompanied by their son, Hampden, returned from a motor trip through Northern Minnesota and will be here for the rest of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith Fox arrived last Saturday accompanied by Miss Jacqueline Chapman and will be house guests of Mr. Fox's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Fox, on the First Terrace. Mr. Fox

WEDDINGS and ENGAGEMENTS

Brossman-Saul

The engagement of Miss Edith Saul, daughter of Mrs. Anna Saul, 1394A Hamilton avenue, and Max Brossman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Brossman, 8327A Wells avenue, has been announced.

Prinz-Bube

The wedding of Miss Adelyn Bube, daughter of Mrs. Walter A. Bube, 2823 Hampton avenue, and Edward Prinz, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Prinz, 3736 Hydraulic avenue, will take place Thursday at 8 p. m. at the Forest Park Hotel. The Rev. Maurice W. Fogle will perform the ceremony.

Among the pre-wedding parties for the bride-to-be were a kitchen shower which Miss Louise Brenner gave Tuesday evening, July 16, at her home, 4623 Tower Grove place, and a luncheon and miscellaneous shower Wednesday, July 24, at which Mrs. W. C. Nelson, 5032 Christy boulevard, was hostess.

Utrecht-Jenkerson

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Melva Lillian Jenkerson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Jenkerson, 4203 Humphrey street, to Charles H. A. Utrecht of Webster Groves. The ceremony was performed at the First Congregational Church of Webster Groves Saturday, July 20, in the presence of the immediate families. Mr. Utrecht and his bride left on a trip through the South and on their return will live at 217 Bompert avenue, Webster Groves.

Feldman-Goldberg

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Goldberg, 616 Eastgate avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lee Goldberg, to Maurice Feldman, son of Mrs. Mary Feldman, 1383 Montclair avenue. The wedding will take place in the late fall.

Katz-Wolff

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Wolff, 1376 Shawmut place, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Selma Wolff, and Ben Katz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Katz, 5645 Page boulevard. No date for the wedding has been set.

Beam-Shivers

The betrothal of Miss Clara Eugenia Shivers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Shivers of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Dr. Sim F. Beam, 7033 Washington avenue, has been announced by her parents. Dr. Beam is the son of Mrs. Sim Beam of Kansas City, Mo.

Miss Shivers is a graduate of Randolph Macon College in Lynchburg, Va., and a member of Phi Mu sorority. Dr. Beam is an alumnus of the University of Missouri and of Washington University Medical School. His fraternal ties are Sigma Phi Sigma and Nu Sigma Nu.

The wedding will take place in Colorado Springs in September.

Alvis-Pickard

The wedding of Miss Helen Pickard of Worthington, Ind., and Dr. Edmund B. Alvis, son of Dr. and Mrs. Bennett Y. Alvis, 7011 Washington avenue, will take place Thursday at 8 a. m. at the home of Dr. Alvis, with the Rev. D. C. Boyd officiating.

Miss Pickard, who makes her home with her brother, Dr. J. T. Jean, at 3707 Keokuk avenue, will have the bridegroom's sister, Miss Lillian Alvis, as her only attendant. Dr. Fred C. Reynolds of Texas, Ark., will serve as best man.

A wedding breakfast will follow the ceremony. Dr. Alvis will take his bride to Northern Michigan for two weeks. They will be entertained there by his parents.

Miss Pickard was the guest of honor recently at a luncheon where Miss Marcella Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey A. Anderson of Fair Oaks, gave at Hotel Chase. Miss Margaret M. Nauman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Nauman, 107 Austin place, gave a bridge luncheon and linen shower for Miss Pickard a week ago Saturday at the Missouri Athletic Association.

KIRKWOOD

MISS DOROTHY WHITE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. K. White, 7 South Moreland drive, became the bride Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock of James Paul Young, 7625 Forsythe boulevard, Clayton. The Rev. Dr. Henry Little Jr. performed the ceremony. The church of the Kirkwood Presbyterian Church, which was the scene of the marriage, was banked with palms and greenery, forming a background for large baskets of gladioli in pastel shades and white tapers in candelabra.

The bride had as her maid of honor Miss Margaret Baird of Edwardsville, Ill., and as bridesmaids Miss Wilma Stewart of Jefferson Barracks, Miss Vivian Villiger of East St. Louis, Miss Gertrude Hawken and Miss Lucille Young, sister of the bridegroom. The flower girls were Betty Mae Roblee, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Roblee of University City, and Elizabeth Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Presley Edwards of St. Louis. Mr. Young's best man was his brother, Carey Young of East St. Louis. The groomsmen were William King Jr., Charles and Richard White, brothers of the bride, and Charles McKown of Pana, Ill. Matthew Staed and Maude Brandau were ushers.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of white valenciennes lace. The skirt was formed by wide ruffles, the last one flaring into a brief train, and the neckline was V-shaped both back and front. It had short cap sleeves and a sash of white satin which tied in front at the waistline. She wore a tulle veil with a tulle lace cap and carried a bouquet of white roses and larkspur. The bridesmaids wore dresses of pastel-colored organdy embroidered in white. They were made on princess lines, the low round neckline and the armholes outlined with accordion pleated ruffles. Their hats were wide-brimmed straws of white blended with the shade of their gowns. They carried bouquets of spring flowers. Miss Baird wore green, Miss Villiger, peach, Miss Hawken, pink, Miss Stewart, blue, and Miss Young, yellow.

The flower girls wore dresses of white organdy made like that of the bride and carried small bouquets like hers. They wore bands of white flowers on their hair. Mrs. White was gowned in orchid chiffon and wore a corsage of gardenias.

The White home was decorated for the reception for 200 guests which followed with greenery and spring flowers. Garlands of smilax surrounded the wedding cake on the bride's table.

The bride attended Washington University. On returning from their honeymoon, she and Mr. Young will live at 2275 Yale avenue, Maplewood.

Miss Helen Austin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Austin, 453 South Kirkwood road, left recently for Pittsburgh to visit Mr. and Mrs. H. Miller, formerly of Webster Groves, and their son, Bruce. JAMBOREE PRACTICE
BY SCOUTS AT CAMP

Conditions at Washington Gathering to Be Duplicated at Irontdale.

Boy Scouts of the St. Louis delegation to the Silver Jubilee Jamboree encampment when they go to the Irontdale Reservation Camp on Aug. 13 for a five-day period of training.

Col. H. D. McBride, scout commissioner, will have charge of the preparatory camp as well as of the St. Louis group while it is in Washington from Aug. 21 to 30. He said yesterday that scout officials are planning the Irontdale experience as a duplication of the conditions the scouts must observe during the national encampment.

Each of the four St. Louis troops will camp in four army tents of the pyramid type, with a patrol of eight boys occupying a tent. Each patrol will constitute a "mess," eating hot food from a general kitchen and salads and beverages from the troop kitchen.

At Irontdale the scouts will rehearse "The Spirit of St. Louis," the model airplane demonstration which they will give as an act in the Region Eight Circus Aug. 27. They will also practice the general pioneering program of scouting, which the region will use in the circus "Pioneer Days."

Dr. C. E. Colgate, assistant campmaster for the St. Louis delegation, has been named deputy to Dr. W. E. Smith, chief medical officer of the jamboree.

The St. Louis quartermaster, Anzo Kruse, will serve as director of communications and postoffice for the five states of Region Eight, Charles H. Mills and Merle D. Shipley will have charge of activities and parades, respectively, for Section 1 of the region, Missouri and Kansas.

Registration for membership in the local group will close Saturday.

Ten sailboats of the "moth" type will compete in a regatta at the Sea Scout base on Creve Coeur Lake at 2:30 p. m. today. The boats, built by Sea Scouts, will be raced by their builders in the name of the group of which they are a part.

The "moth" type boat was designed by John McN. Cook, postmaster of the Sea Scout division, and can be built at low cost. Adopted as official by the local Council, the "moth" plans are also standard in many other cities.

During August, instructors will be on duty at the base on Saturday and Sunday. Scouts may receive instruction in navigation, drills and cruising, history, swimming, signaling and other subjects.

Ten cabins, built at the Irontdale Reservation by the Kiwanis Club for the use of scout campers, will be presented to the Council today by David Hopkins, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee of the club.

Troop 3, Holy Cross House, awarded First Class Scout badges to Robert Koehn and Lawrence Dickason Tuesday evening at the Grace Hill Gymnasium.

An American flag has been given to Troop 207, St. James Evangelical Church, by Local Council No. 8, Daughters of America.

Fourteen scouts of Troop 154, St. Mark's Catholic Church, spent Monday and Tuesday last week at Platin, Mo., accompanied by Scoutmaster John Minton.

Troop 64, Ferguson, will invest three scouts with Second Class badges at a court of honor Friday night. The troops' Tenderfoot scouts will give a play following the court.

Charles Durand Jr. received a Life Scout badge Friday at a court held by his troop, Troop 1, Thomas Station. Several other scouts received merit badges.

Troop 1, Augusta, Mo., awarded the Life Scout badge last night to Samuel Griffin, the scout who will represent the troop in the National Jamboree.

Favorable weather invariably finds the Camp Meenahga sailboats cruising outside the Fish Creek harbor. Ann Stoughton, Mary Caroline Morrison, Barbara Chivvis and Betty Jean Mayer are the St. Louis girls who are showing proficiency in this sport.

HANDICRAFT AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL EXHIBITS AUG. 20, 21
Hadley Vocational Building to House Display; Negro Pupils to Show at Cole School.
The annual handicraft and industrial exhibition of the 39 school playgrounds will be held Aug. 20 and 21 at Hadley Vocational School, it was announced yesterday. The five Negro school playgrounds will hold their exhibition at the Cole School, 3935 Epright avenue, Aug. 22.
As there will be no festival at the Public Schools Stadium this year, the exhibitions will serve as a downpourment for the summer's program for the playgrounds. They will be open to the public from 2 to 9 p. m. each day.
Mrs. Viola Holland, Miss Hallie Wharton and Miss Marion Bernard supervised the program for girls, and Russell Hibbert and Arthur Kreyling that for boys.

FOUGHT the SEA to SAVE THEIR FATHER— and LOST

By EDWARD ALLEN

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BOSTON.

It's just two paces from port rail of the ketch Hamrah to starboard side, forward. Four steps across her 12-foot deck at the place where she's widest. At the bow she tapers down to a racing sloop. Her stern is not much broader than a rumble seat.

Not much deck to cling to in a storm. Not when your boom and mainsail have gone by the board and sheets and rigging are sloshing around you as the waves pile over.

The six men who set sail in her from Newport, Rhode Island, last month, on a six-boat race to Bergen, Norway—which was won by P. Le Boutillier's yawl Stormy Weather—knew they were indulging in a risky business. Experienced sailors all, they expected and looked forward to having their hands full in sloppy weather. They would be disappointed if no opportunity arose to cope with elemental happenings on that wet and tilting narrow deck.

They got adventure—and tragedy—600 miles off Newfoundland. Three of the six fought and lost gamely, and went down to a grave as wide as the bottom of the sea. Too busy for sleep or sorrow, the other three fought on for 11 days, each keeping his own watch and the watch of a dead man besides. Finally they reached Sydney, Nova Scotia, and ate, and went to bed.

The men who started on this voyage knew the risks. Robert Russell Ames, 52 years old, warned the five younger members of his crew not to risk their lives to win the race, and rebuked them several times during the first few days of the voyage for rash acts.

The gaff-rigged ketch was a stout, expensive boat with 26 tons displacement, constructed of teakwood held by heat-treated bronze spikes—the best that money could buy. Still, she had a defect. She was a hard boat in which to make headway to windward. During the first few hours of the race, the other boats, with the exception of Commodore Roosevelt's 60-foot schooner, Mistress, left her behind because of their superior sailing ability to windward.

The crew kept sight of the Mistress until dark. That was the last they saw of the five other boats in the race.

Aboard the Hamrah were Ames, Boston real estate man, skipper and owner of the Hamrah, son of James Barr Ames, former dean of Harvard Law School; his sons, Richard Glover Ames, 23, and Henry Russell Ames, 20, Harvard wrestling stars and their father's crew on many an exciting journey; Charles F. Tillinghast Jr., 21, of Providence, Rhode Island, son of a Rhode Island textile manufacturer and one of the most skillful navigators on Narragansett Bay; Roger H. Weed, 23, of Milton, Massachusetts, and Sheldon Ware, 19, of the same city, all friends of the Ames boys and expert yachtsmen. Tillinghast was navigator of the Hamrah at the start and took command when her master perished.

As the Hamrah sailed east, the weather was good for several days. They were able to put up all her sail. Then the barometer warned that a storm was brewing. On the next morning, it blew up from the northwest, with a wind velocity of 60 miles an hour, and heavy seas.

Skipper Ames' usual watch was from 8 p. m. to midnight, but he turned out again at 2:30 a. m., and remained on deck. During most of that time, he stood beside Tillinghast, the helmsman, watching the seas and the sails. He stood beside the wheel, gripping the mizzen boom with his right hand, his legs planted firmly apart.

THE Hamrah was making a broad reach and she was weaving badly under the force of the wind. Suddenly she heeled sharply and took the full force of a terrific sea. It broke six feet above her deck.

Tillinghast's firm grip on the wheel saved his life, but his oilskin coat was ripped off his back as neatly as an umbrella blown inside out. Skipper Ames' grip on the mizzen boom was broken and he was swept over the gallows (the brass rail which supports the mizzen boom) to windward.

He wasn't a good swimmer, but he managed to keep his head above the welter of foam and water which followed the wave.

"All on deck! Man overboard!" cried Tillinghast. His four companions piled out of the cabin in their underwear.

Richard Ames saw his father struggling in the water just as Tillinghast gybed. It seemed obvious suicide to go over. But the boy dived over the side, taking the slack of the mizzen sheet with him.

The Hamrah had left the elder Ames 20 yards behind.

Richard held on to the line as long as he could, then swam to his father with a life preserver thrown to him from the deck. His father grasped the preserver while his son supported him.

Henry Ames, the last on deck, saw his father and brother in the water, and reverted to names which he had called them as a little boy. "Dick, Daddy!" he shouted, and started to jump after them. Ware and Weed held him back.

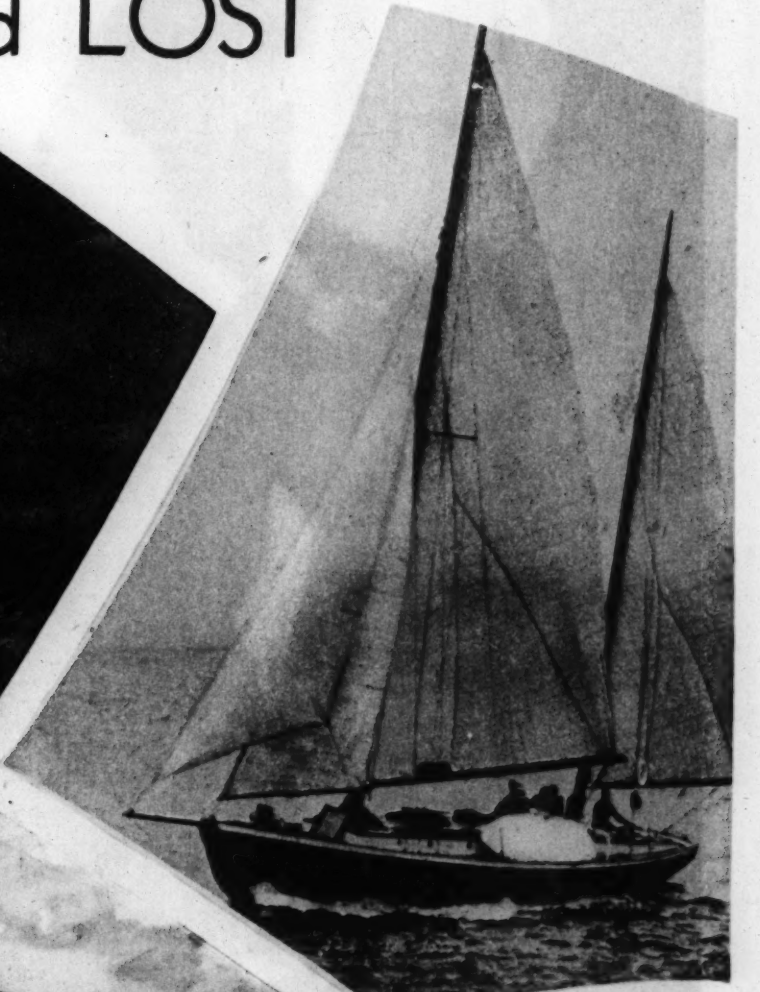

He became frantic, and struck them with his fists. "I thought of knocking him out," said Weed. "It would have been suicide for him, and we needed every man to handle the Hamrah."

Henry Ames launched a 10-foot, round-bottomed row-boat and started after his father and brother.

It was not a seaworthy boat, and unfitted for the heavy sea which was running. Time and again, as he rowed towards his father, he was blotted out by waves which seemed to have swallowed him. Each time he was thrown up again.

Tillinghast gybed again so sharply the main boom broke in the middle. The gaff broke and the mainsail dragged in the water. Ware and Weed hacked and cut away the loose gear and mainsail with knives and hack saws. The Hamrah drifted rapidly to windward.

"Ware and I had a terrific time hoisting the mizzen, but we had to get it up to gybe again to get back to the men," Weed related.

"When I had a clear minute, I looked after the boat. I saw that Henry had hoisted his brother in, and I think Mr. Ames was lying in the bottom, although I'm not sure. Harry was having a time of it keeping the boat headed into the wind. It was about a quarter of a mile from the Hamrah.

"When we tried to gybe again, I saw the boat capsize and Harry and his brother spill out. A second or two later, a brute of a wave came between us and the boat, and we didn't see them again.

"We hove to under the mizzen and stay-sail for 48 hours and looked for them, but we didn't find a trace. The gale kept up and the seas were dangerously heavy. The mizzen gaff was broken and we kept wiring it to make it hold while we struggled against the gale, looking for the boat or the men.

"While we were looking for them the mizzen spreader broke. After 48 hours we decided that Mr. Ames and Dick and Harry had drowned and that we had better head for shore. The nearest port was St. John, but our chart of the courses wasn't good, and we decided to make for Sydney, N. S."

On the second day after the accident, the fog came in so thick they couldn't see a thing, day or night. The third day, they felt the chill in the air which meant there were icebergs near. Weed found the temperature of the water was 36 degrees. That meant the berg was very close, but the three men were unable to see it.

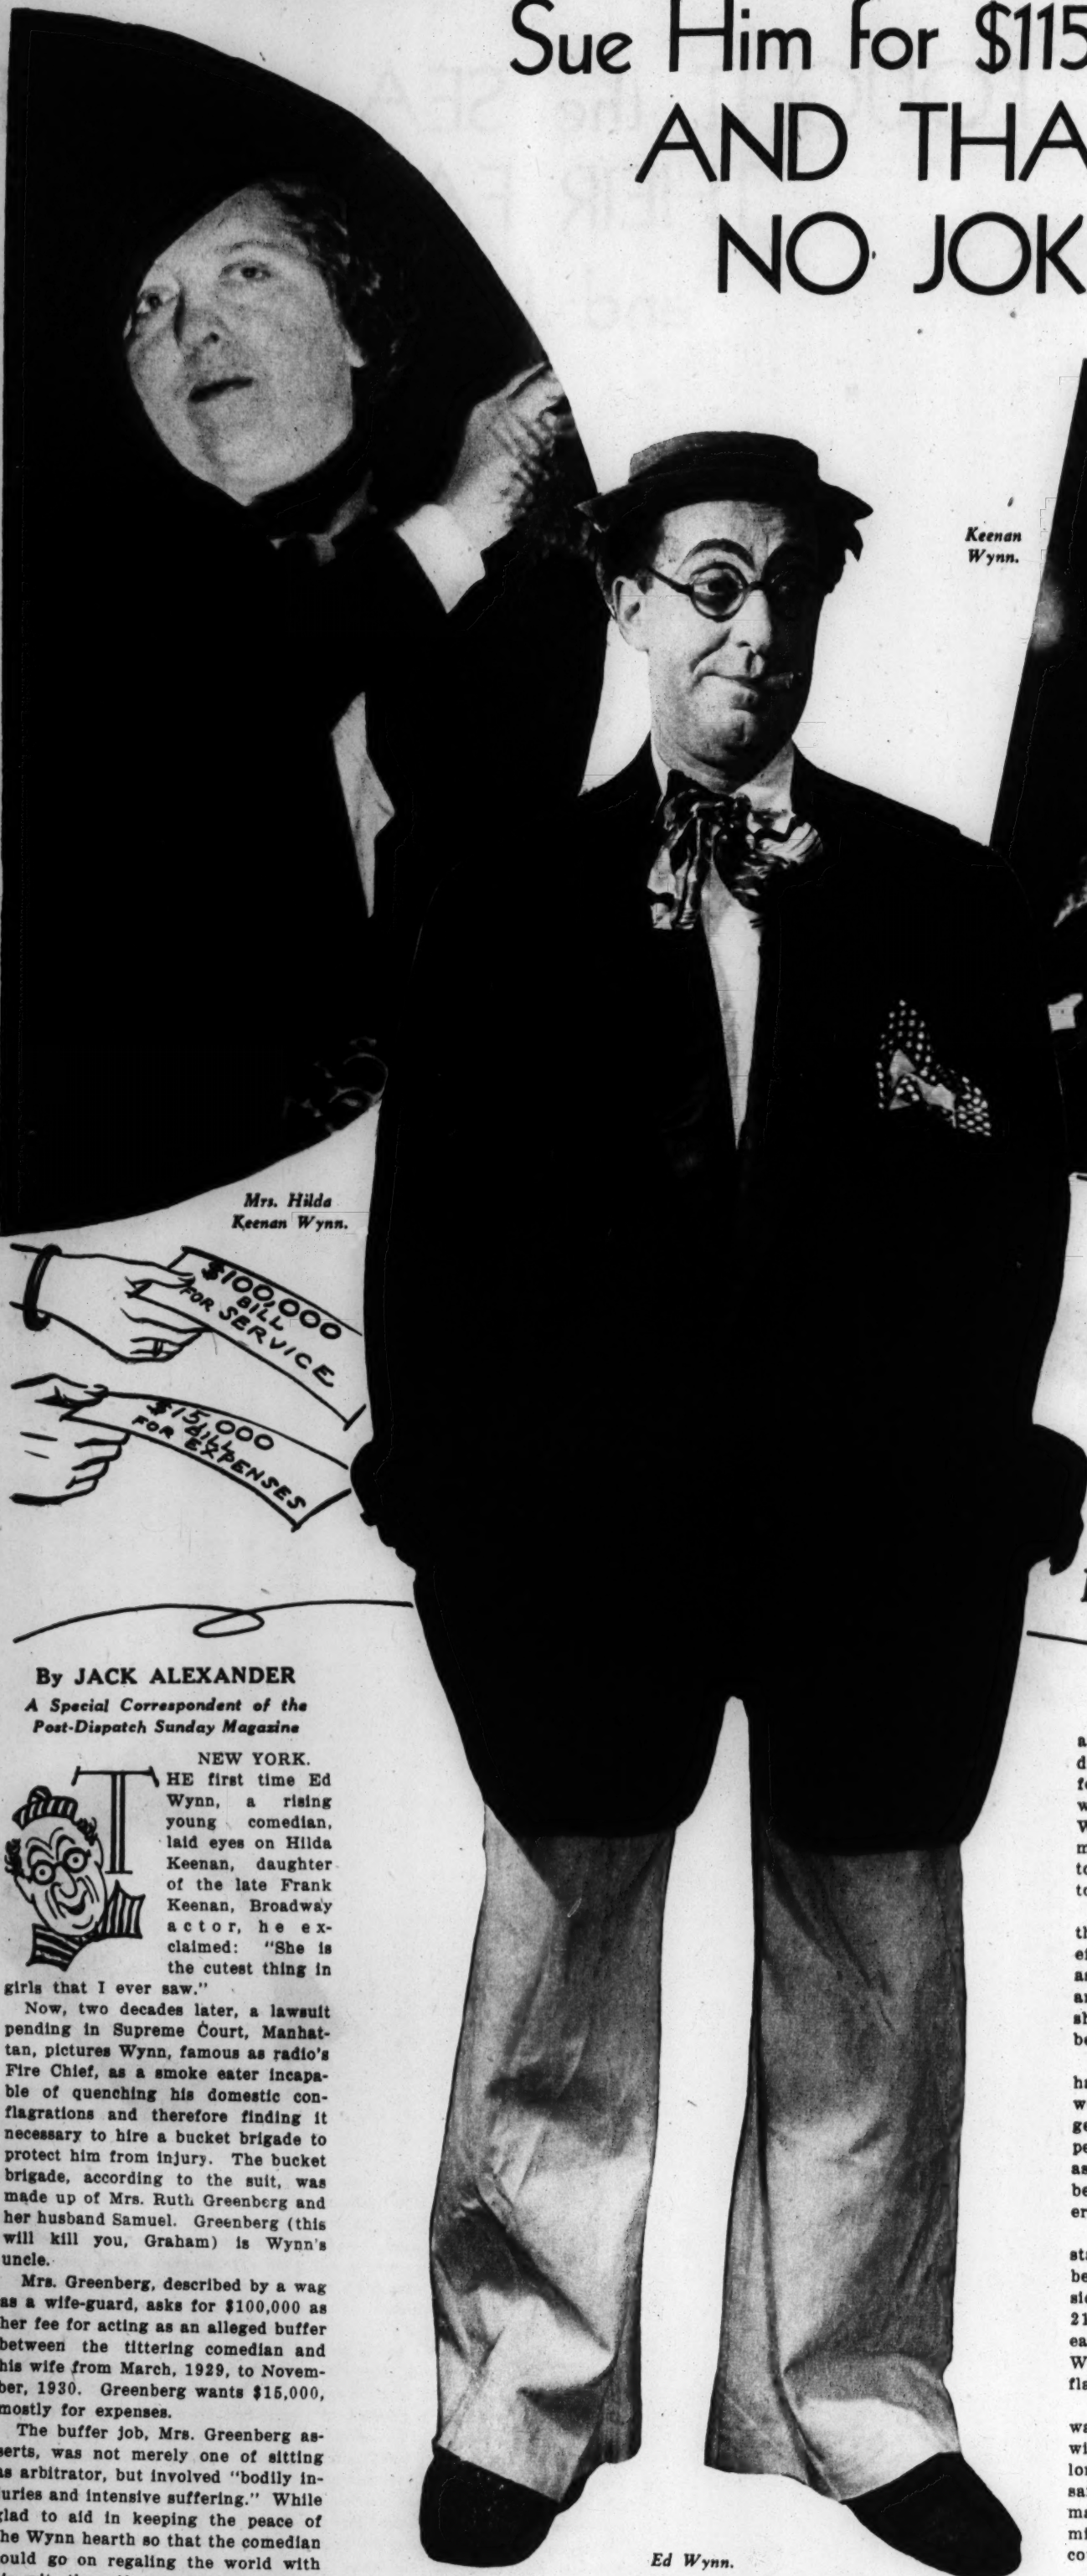

"AS we sailed along through the night and the fog, we could hear the great breakers crashing against the berg, but we couldn't locate the sound, and every minute we thought we'd strike," said Weed. "We prayed that we'd miss it and that the stay-sail would hold until we had passed it. At last we got by it.

"We hadn't a chance to loosen the backstays, short handed as we were, and one thing after another had gone. When we reached Sydney, we found she needed six major repairs and 18 minor ones. Since we couldn't do anything with the backstays, it was only a miracle the mainmast didn't go over.

"Mr. Ames had taken every precaution against losing a man overboard. Only two days before he was lost, during a squall from the southwest as we luffed, the balloon jib crackled like pistol shots and looked as if it would carry away. Dick and Charlie Tillinghast started forward to take in the balloon, and Mr. Ames yelled, 'Let it go! Let it carry away if it has to. I'm not going to take a chance on anyone going overboard. I'd rather finish last than lose a man.'"

But the sea, despite his caution, overcame him.

Ed Wynn's Aunt and Uncle Sue Him for $115,000— AND THAT'S NO JOKE

Keenan Wynn.

Mrs. Hilda Keenan Wynn.

By JACK ALEXANDER
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

THE first time Ed Wynn, a rising young comedian, laid eyes on Hilda Keenan, daughter of the late Frank Keenan, Broadway actor, he exclaimed: "She is the cutest thing in girls that I ever saw."

Now, two decades later, a lawsuit pending in Supreme Court, Manhattan, pictures Wynn, famous as radio's Fire Chief, as a smoke eater incapable of quenching his domestic conflagrations and therefore finding it necessary to hire a bucket brigade to protect him from injury. The bucket brigade, according to the suit, was made up of Mrs. Ruth Greenberg and her husband Samuel. Greenberg (this will kill you, Graham) is Wynn's uncle.

Mrs. Greenberg, described by a wag as a wife-guard, asks for $100,000 as her fee for acting as an alleged buffer between the tittering comedian and his wife from March, 1929, to November, 1930. Greenberg wants $15,000, mostly for expenses.

The buffer job, Mrs. Greenberg asserts, was not merely one of sitting as arbitrator, but involved "bodily injuries and intensive suffering." While glad to aid in keeping the peace of the Wynn hearth so that the comedian could go on regaling the world with his wit, the wife-guard, she declares, simply could not stand the gaff. At the bottom of all the trouble, according to her affidavit, was Mrs. Wynn's inordinate attachment to what the legal papers call artificial stimulants.

"Hilda Keenan Wynn made frequent physical attacks on the defendant and generally annoyed and harassed him, privately and in public, to such an extent that his professional career as a humorist was in jeopardy," Mrs. Greenberg said in her affidavit.

"In 1929 the defendant and I entered into an agreement that if I would serve as companion to Hilda Keenan Wynn with a view to eliminating so far as possible these happenings, he would liberally compensate me for such services."

After a time, Mrs. Greenberg continued, "I advised the defendant that I was unwilling to continue rendering the services because my health was being adversely affected. He entered into further agreement to compensate me for such physical injuries as had resulted, or might result, from a blow which Mrs. Wynn previously had struck me."

It was a frantic two-borough alarm on a freezing night in February, 1929, that first summoned the Greenbergs to quell Wynn's marital blaze, according to the suit.

Leaping from between warm, cozy blankets, the pair sped through the gelid night from their home in Sunnyside, Queens, to Wynn's apartment at 3 West Fifth street. On clambering up the stairs, the puffing rescue squad found Wynn's son, Keenan, 17 years old, cowering in the corridor while verbal smoke and flame poured from the apartment where Mrs. Wynn was on a rampage, the affidavit states.

When the noise had died down, the Greenbergs poked their heads inside and saw Mrs. Wynn lying in a stupor amid an impressive disarray of broken dishes and bottles, they declare. Informed of the incident in Boston, where he was busy opening a show, Wynn asked the Greenbergs to remain at the apartment that night and to send his son to Boston, according to the suit.

And when he returned and found that Mrs. Greenberg had a soothing effect on Mrs. Wynn, the funnyman asked her to become his wife-guard, and expressed great joy when she showed signs of accepting, Mrs. Greenberg states.

To her hesitant assertion that she had just been offered a job at $75 a week as stylist, Wynn, with a lordly gesture, scoffed: "Chicken feed," and persuaded her to accept the domestic assignment, according to Mrs. Greenberg, promising to be much more liberal.

In his enthusiasm, the affidavit states, Wynn persuaded the Greenbergs to give up their home in Sunnyside and move into an apartment at 215 West Ninety-first street, within easy taxicabbing distance of the Wynn menage, just in case of a new flareup.

"He stated that what I was doing was indispensable to him and that without me he could not be funny any longer," Mrs. Greenberg says. "He said that this was the first time in many years that he had had peace of mind and that I was the only one who could take Mrs. Wynn off his hands."

So-o-o-o-o, assert the Greenbergs, they gave up their friends in Sunnyside, their weekly pinochle parties and other social advantages and entered wholeheartedly into the job of preserving Ed Wynn to the American stage, screen and radio.

"My wife's task was an arduous one," says Greenberg. "She found it difficult to continue and would not have except for the continued urgings and promises of the defendant to compensate her."

After about six months of her new career, she entered a hospital to determine whether an injury suffered at the hands of Mrs. Wynn was really as serious as it felt, Mrs. Greenberg states. The doctors said it was, and performed an operation to relieve it which left permanent ill effects, she charges.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Greenberg Contend They Smoothed Out the Comedian's Domestic Life and He Promised to Pay Them for the Job—But the Tittering Radio Star Denies It.

For several years, after tossing in the towel on the job, Mrs. Greenberg says, she tried to collect from Wynn, but he denied owing her anything.

Greenberg makes the same complaint, adding that the $15,000 he seeks represents what he paid out of his pocket to "make the defendant's relations more amicable and harmonious."

He itemizes his alleged expenditures under the following general headings: (a) artificial stimulants, (b) taxicab fares, (c) local and long-distance telephone tolls, (d) entertainment, (e) railroad fares and (f) loans to Mrs. Wynn.

THEN, according to the uncle, there was the trip Mrs. Wynn planned in 1929 to Mexico for a quiet divorce. He spent hundreds of dollars on Mrs. Greenberg's wardrobe for the safari, on Wynn's promise to pay him back, and never did collect, Greenberg states. Nor did the trip come off. Mrs. Wynn, says Greenberg, decided not to go.

Wynn has filed a general denial of all the Greenberg charges, except that he admits he didn't pay the Greenbergs anything. Didn't owe them anything and didn't make any such fool contract, he asserts.

Through their lawyer, Sidney M. Wittner, the Greenbergs have asked for an early trial of their case.

In his last appearance in a court, Wynn got off several cracks that panicked the spectators and even blew a kiss at the Judge, but he may not essay the "Perfect Fool" role in the Greenberg case due to its seriousness. The previous tilt with the law was some months ago, in Yorkville Court, where Wynn, Fred Zweifel, his manager, and Albert Baron, his secretary,

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Greenberg.

The story of the complainant, Morris Newman, was that when he pushed the buzzer to hand Wynn a summons in a civil suit growing out of an unsuccessful radio chain venture, he was faced by the trio standing in line. Wynn, he said, shouted: "Throw him out of here. Take him down in the cellar and show him a lesson." This was promptly done, Newman said.

Baron and Zweifel, on the stand, agreed that Wynn was eating luncheon in another room with his son when Newman called, and not standing at the door. Wynn broke in with: "Judge, I don't want to make these men out a liar, but it was breakfast I was eating."

When the laughter had subsided, Wynn, in his nervous stage tremor, continued to tell the Court that his son was a student at the Horace Mann School, that he intended to study mechanical engineering, that he was president of the Dramatic Club and that recently he had played the part of Rodney Martin in a performance of "It Pays to Advertise," which the school club produced.

"Never mind that," broke in Magistrate Leonard McGee.

"But I just wanted to show that my son is studying engineering," complained Wynn.

When McGee freed Wynn and Zweifel and let Baron off with a $10 fine, Wynn blew a kiss to him and made a wow exit. But things are different, now, Graham.

Dr. Paul Berman, Medical Association, "Man's place in future history will depend in no small degree on the food he eats."

In those words Dr. James H. Lester of Birmingham stated the thesis of his presidential address last month at the association's annual meeting. But even that, forthright as it is, pales beside the conclusions of Dr. Paul Berman, New York specialist and a most enthusiastic exponent of this new fascination of medical men.

Change of diet may not only change the size of the body, the shape of the head and the symmetry of the features, says Dr. Berman, but, through its interaction with the endocrine glands, it may alter the strength of mind, the intensity of the emotions and the power to consummate one's ambition. It may, as he sets forth in his work on "Food and Character," lift up a dictator, or undermine the morale of an empire.

In this book, published by the Houghton-Mifflin Company, Dr. Berman discusses "bodymind as a chemical brew," "unbalanced diets and unbalanced minds," "fine and synthetic sugar and encephalic personalities, genius and genius," "The Metabolism of Leadership" and "The Chemistry of Neurotics," with historic illustrations from Pericles to Boles Pastore.

Now, on consulting a table in "Food and Character" comparing national vegetarians and natural flesh-eaters, it appears that, in extreme types, the carnivore has a large emotional endowment and an "inductive, active, changeable" mentality, whereas the herbivore, lacking his upstanding emotional gifts, runs to a slow, deductive and persistent turn of mind. The vegetarian prefers sugar to alcohol; he drinks light wine or beer if anything. But the true flesh-eater prefers alcohol to sugar, "brandy or whiskey with high alcohol content preferred."

"A study of genuinely successful leaders," says Dr. Berman, "shows that . . . they have a nervous system which is relatively sensitive yet controlled. They may approach the borderland of the neurotic. They are dynamic in the sense of producing high voltage energy in quantities adequate to their needs. They can keep going and do keep going—with their mind and, if necessary, with their muscles—because of a relatively low fatigability. They have keen social perceptions."

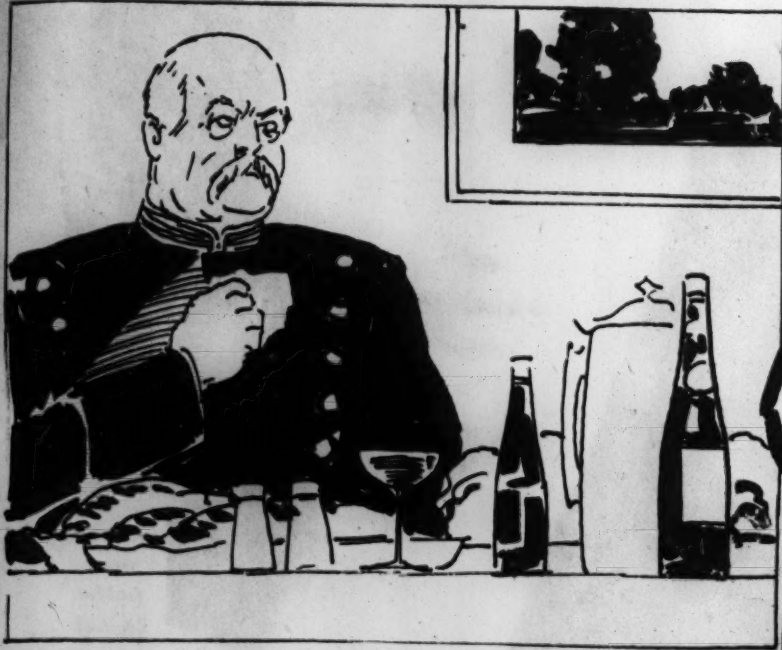

Getting down to cases on the diet of dictatorship, Dr. Berman relates that Bismarck fed himself up to a weight of 247 pounds at the age of 68.

A typical meal for the Iron Chancellor consisted of soup, plump trout, roast veal, three large sea gull eggs and caviar, "washed down with beer and Burgundy." Another included soup, eels, cold meat, prawns, lobster, smoked meat, raw ham, a roll and pudding.

He cites a personal resemblance between Bismarck and Boles Pastore, "which means that they both had a same underlying endocrine (ductless gland) constitution." Penrose, relates Dr. Berman, "pursued Bismarck's 'blood-and-iron' policy" in Penn-

In those words Dr. James S. Mc Lester of Birmingham stated the thesis of his presidential address last month at the association's annual meeting. But even that, forthright as it is, pales beside the conclusions of Dr. Paul Berman, New York specialist and a most enthusiastic exponent of this new fascination of medical men.

Change of diet may not only change the size of the body, the shape of the head and the symmetry of the features, says Dr. Berman, but, through its interaction with the ductless glands, it may alter the strength of mind, the intensity of the emotions and the power to consummate one's ambition. It may, as he sets forth in his work on "Food and Character," lift up a dictator, or undermine the morale of an empire.

In this book, published by the Houghton-Mifflin Company, Dr. Berman discusses "bodymind as a chemical brew," "unbalanced diets and unbalanced minds," "lime and neurotics, sugar and energetic personalities, gout and genius," "The Metabolism of Leadership" and "The Chemistry of Executives," with historic illustrations from Pericles to Boles Penrose.

Now, on consulting a table in "Food and Character" comparing natural vegetarians and natural flesh-eaters, it appears that, in extreme types, the carnivore has a large emotional endowment and an "inductive, active, changeable" mentality, whereas the herbivore, lacking his upstanding emotional gifts, runs to a slow, deductive and persistent turn of mind. The vegetarian prefers sugar to alcohol; he drinks light wine or beer if anything. But the true flesh-eater prefers alcohol to sugar, "brandy or whiskey . . . with high alcohol content preferred."

They can keep going, and do keep going—with their minds and, if necessary, with their muscles—because of a relatively low fatigability. They have keen social perceptions."

Getting down to cases on the diet of dictatorship, Dr. Berman relates that Bismarck fed himself up to a weight of 247 pounds at the age of 68.

A typical meal for the Iron Chancellor consisted of soup, plump trout, roast veal, three large sea gull eggs and caviar, "washed down with much beer and Burgundy." Another included soup, eels, cold meat, prawns, lobster, smoked meat, raw ham, a roast and pudding.

He cites a personal resemblance between Bismarck and Boles Penrose, "which means that they both had the same underlying endocrine (ductless gland) constitution." Penrose, relates Dr. Berman, "pursued Bismarck's 'blood-and-iron' policy" in Pennsylvanla politics. To complete the resemblance, he says that a breakfast for Penrose entailed "a dozen fried eggs, a half-inch-thick slice of ham, a dozen hard rolls and a quart of coffee."

An Atlantic City waiter, according to the Walter Davenport biography, told of serving the politician a dozen raw oysters, chicken gumbo, terrapin stew, two canvasback ducks, mashed potatoes, Lima beans, macaroni, asparagus, coleslaw, stewed corn, a mince pie, a quart of coffee, a bottle of sauterne, a quart of champagne and several cognacs.

"The demand of his tissues for food," remarks Dr. Berman, "was truly Gargantuan."

At the opposite extreme is Gandhi, with his goat's milk and dried fruit—"Interestingly enough, a perfect diet for a man of Gandhi's type. It is not a diet calculated to make for a high specific dynamic action and so would tend to produce a state of bodymind which makes for restfulness rather than restlessness. For one who seeks a life of meditation rather than of energy and action, such a diet is ideal."

DR. BERMAN relates that Gandhi began experimenting with diet in 1906. "For he had decided that in order to become a Brahmachari (one who has taken the vow of chastity in order to devote himself to a life of devotion to his fellow men) it was necessary to curb his food intake, to make it as simple and uncooked as possible, and completely free of the usual spices and condiments of the Indian cuisine."

After six years of experimentation, he gave up milk and achieved "what he described as complete 'immunity to passion.'" But he had to go back to milk for muscle-building elements, though, noting a measurable return of excitability, he commented, "I have not the least doubt that milk diet makes the Brahmacharya vow difficult to observe."

"History and historians of characthere are as many types of leaders as there are kinds of causes which they lead. But the kind of cause they lead is correlated with the constitution of their ductless glands and with what they feed themselves."

Following Dr. Berman's line of reasoning, a bit of research might lead to

"Huey Long occasionally will destroy three or four soft-shell crabs in the middle of the afternoon just to whet his appetite for dinner."

ter, from Plutarch to Strachey," as Dr. Berman sums it up, "have been too neglectful of the dietetic biography of their subjects. It may be taken for granted that the food habits of leaders differ as much as those of their followers. It is fundamentally a matter of the type of metabolism. So the inference—which the professional researcher might not agree with—that, though Huey Long might behave like Bismarck for 20 days a month, for the remaining 10 he would act rather more like Mahatma Gandhi.

Senator Long eats so much when he eats that he has adopted the custom of dieting 10 days each month. His favorite dish is pompano, preceded by a dozen oysters. Occasionally he will drop into the Senate restaurant in the middle of the afternoon and destroy three or four soft-shell crabs, just to whet his appetite for dinner. He loves turnip greens cooked with fat bacon and Spanish onions, and eats them every chance he has. He leans to coarser vegetables. He appreciates a steak, especially one broiled by himself.

His 10-day diet represents the other extreme. He keeps it posted on his desk. Here is a sample day: Breakfast—grapefruit juice, hot tea and dry toast. Lunch—clear soup, baked apple, tea and dry toast. Dinner—consomme, fish, spinach and stewed apricots. After 10 days of that he's ready for another three weeks of he-man meals. Asked why he dieted, he said: "Just to keep my weight down and preserve my health. A man's stomach needs regular rest periods."

He never drinks coffee; says it affects his nerves.

And if the Louisiana dictator misses the mental stimulus of coffee, perhaps he can obtain the same effect surprisingly, from a little touch of the gout. Or perhaps already, by means of his alternate contrasting diets, he has achieved the advantage which Havelock Ellis attributes to that "disease of genius"—the advantage of viewing the world from two contrasting points of view.

Dr. Berman mentions that Ellis found gout appearing at least five times as often among British men of genius as in the general population.

Gandhi, who seeks a life of meditation rather than action, lives on goat's milk and dried fruit.

Two centuries before, Sydenham, founder of clinical medicine, wrote:

"It may be some consolation to sufferers from gout to know that Kings, Princes, Generals, Admirals, philosophers and many more of like eminence have suffered from the same complaint. In a word, gout, unlike any other disease, kills more rich men than poor, more wise men than simple."

In gout, uric acid, waste product of certain proteins, is crystallized and deposited in the joints. Havelock Ellis, as quoted by Dr. Berman, theorized that possibly the poison, "sometimes in the blood and sometimes in the joints," might be an irritant and stimulant to the nervous system, and that even its fluctuations might be beneficial, if painful.

"When it is in the victim's blood, his brain becomes abnormally overclouded, if not intoxicated," Ellis wrote; "when it is in his joints, his mind becomes abnormally clear and vigorous. There is thus a well-marked periodicity; the man liable to attacks of gout is able to view the world from two entirely different points of view; he has, as it were, two brains at his disposal; in the transition from one state to another he is constantly receiving new inspirations, and constantly forced to gloomy and severe self-criticism. His mind thus attains a greater mental vigor and acuteness than the more equable mind of the non-gouty subject, though the latter is much more useful for the ordinary purposes of life, for the gouty subject is too much the victim of his own constitutional state to be always a reliable guide in the conduct of affairs."

IN ATTEMPTING to explain the apparent association of gout and genius from another aspect, that of direct stimulation, Dr. Berman cites a close chemical kinship between the food purins, which give rise to uric acid, and caffeine and caffeine-like substances—"the only ones definitely discovered to be brain stimulants and to be so employed the world over." Caffeine is, in fact, one of the purins, he points out, and may be synthetically made from them. "May not all the precursors of uric acid," he asks, "have a caffeine-like action upon the brain?"

"Certain cases of mental sluggishness and disability may be greatly benefited by a diet rich in purins," he suggests. "In practice this means a meat diet. Herbert Spencer once wrote, 'I tried vegetarianism for three months and found I was obliged to destroy everything I wrote during that period because of a lack of meat.' Spencer was a congenital carnivore, with pituitary instability, who needed the purin stimulation for his cerebral activity."

"On the other side, George Bernard Shaw, a congenital vegetarian, has put on record again and again the devastating effects of meat upon his own creative production."

"In either case, the necessity of considering the nutrition as a special constitutional problem becomes evident."

The warning is one he repeats at every opportunity. For laymen tempted "to experiment dietetically upon themselves," he points out the possibility of injury "to one or another of the endocrine glands and so to the total metabolism."

He insists that no two persons are alike, that every case is a case for an expert, that "The individual is not just a chemical system, but a personality with a chemical history and a chemical past, present and future."

"The carnivore has a large emotional endowment, while the herbivore runs to the deductive turn of mind."

June 11, 1911. The widower, his bereavement heightened by malleous rumors that he was responsible for his wife's death, is trying to find relief in a country excursion with a friend. He is overcome by fear when he takes in the wall calendar with a painted locomotive seeming to rush at him across the tavern room. As they start back for Madison a distant freight train terrifies him. He becomes wretchedly overwrought to find himself so far from home, falls to his knees, screams for help, runs in circles.

From that day to this, Professor William Ellery Leonard has never been able (without conquering pangs of fear) to venture more than a mile or two from his apartment at 433 North Murray street, just around the corner from the University of Wisconsin campus. He has tried—desperately.

He tried the day after that collapse in the country, but 100 feet from his house he was overcome by inexplicable terror and rushed back. He tried later, even making trips to nearby towns, to Chicago, then to New York. But the strength of the phobia was not weakened. He read psychology as a scholar, delved into his own past for the material that resulted in his autobiography, "The Locomotive-God," now a psychology textbook in three universities. It was no use.

The woman—his second wife—who married him 21 years ago as a summer-school student of 23, divorced him last year, explaining that his neurosis amounted to "cruel and inhuman treatment" so far as she was concerned. Now he will try again. The other day, 59 years old, he married a third time. His bride, Virginia Golden, is 27, a former graduate student. Years ago he discovered "a curious instantaneous subsidence of phobic tension and sadness in the presence of friendly young womanhood," though the effect of feminine society was found to be only superficial and temporary.

But the present Mrs. Leonard doesn't fear virtual imprisonment with the white-haired, elderly English professor. She is certain, despite his own insistence to the contrary, that her love will conquer his phobia. And she is willing to risk her future happiness on the faith she places in this power. She will be the fifth woman to have a dominant influence on his life.

The first, of course, was his mother. Professor Leonard was the son of the Rev. William James Leonard, a newspaper publisher in Plainfield, whose financial troubles were always a shadow on their relations as father and son. The boy was apparently of a naturally sensitive temperament, though normal, intelligent and able to get along moderately well with other children. When the experience which was to rise up and dominate all his future life occurred he was the precocious child of intelligent, adoring parents who recognized his fright at the railroad station as a serious thing, and who did everything they could do to overcome it. His mother even led him up to the locomotive, made him touch its warm flank. His father brought him back and let him walk around on the platform next morning, hoping to show the boy his previous experience was inconsequential. And for many years, while he was a youngster, a growing boy, a student, the locomotive fear vanished into his subconscious mind, though while he was a pupil in grade school it had a recurrence that served to make the impression more terrible afterwards. That day's events have been resurrected like all the others during his fervent attempts to lay the ghosts of his troubled past. He wrote them down years later, forcing himself to recall minute details amounting to 50 manuscript pages.

THIS second major incident might have occurred to any number of boys without any appreciable effect on their lives. There was an embarrassing mishap in the schoolroom, and later, at recess, on the playground, the other boys decided that little Ellery was a fine object for persecution and some good sport. They started after him, stoned him. And to Ellery their rush and roar became the locomotive. The boy ran, fell in a ditch, lay there until some kindly people took him in.

Later he remembers every detail of this experience and of others that follow and augment his mounting and unrealized terror of life and of distance from shelter and home.

The distance phobia buried in him grows without his knowing it during the time that his father's poverty forces him to leave high school and study alone—during the time he is an impoverished student at Boston University and a graduate student at Harvard. It is always complicated by his attachment for a little girl—Mary he calls her in his books. She was with him on the railroad platform that day, and his shame at his own apparent cowardice raised the intensity of his misery.

But all of this is hidden from his own consciousness. Only later is he able to disentangle it from his past—a past greatly concentrated in its effects, owing to his high-strung temperament and mental processes that turned inward, doubling each impression, mirror-like.

It was years later, after he had studied languages, literature, philology at Harvard, the Universities of Göttingen and Bonn in Germany, Columbia in New York; after he had taught school in Massachusetts, edited a (still unpublished) dictionary in Philadelphia, crossed the ocean again, had an unhappy love affair; after he had won sufficient reputation to be offered a job as instructor in distant Madison—that he suffered the second acute nervous shock which cumulatively brought him to his present unhappy condition. He was already beginning his career as a poet. His poetry has since won recognition, along with the scholarly books he has written.

He stayed with a colleague, Professor John Charles Freeman, whom he had met in Europe during his wander years. This was a versatile and gifted man, educated as a clergyman, an officer in the Civil War, a former diplomat who had been charge d'affaires in Denmark, a teacher who had won distinction for his writings on a number of subjects. But by the time Leonard came to Madison, Professor Freeman had grown old, miserably and difficult. His eventful life had included several tragedies, including his wife's derangement and his daughter Charlotte's temporary insanity.

A year after the young instructor settled there, Charlotte Freeman came to keep house for her father. Leonard was attracted to her from the first, and, judging by the reactions of her friends in Madison, it wasn't merely his pity that drew them together. It is said she was beautiful, gracious and popular.

THEY were married, to the astonishment and joy of Charlotte Freeman's friends and relatives, none of whom, Leonard says, troubled to warn him of the danger of which he already had learned from his ingenuous wife. "Few men would have risked their whole life and career as I did in such a marriage," he wrote later. "I myself would have been the first to warn another for his sake and the woman's, even with the little knowledge of the specific conditions that I had on our first acquaintance. . . . That all loved her was paradoxically one reason so many hated the widowed husband."

Mrs. Leonard seemed at first to improve enormously in health. Then, toward the end of four years of successful married life, came a relapse.

She actually became violent in the terrible days before her death, rushed at him once, causing fearsome reactions in his own troubled soul. And then came the fatal day when she broke away from him, ran to her room, locked the door and took poison. Doctors came and removed her. They gave strict orders she was not to see him again. She didn't see him before her death in a sanitarium, a day after she had seemed to be fully recovered from the effects of the poison.

Then began his persecution, Professor Leonard says. Acquaintances snubbed him, busybodies wrote infuriated letters, blaming him for his wife's fate. Many friends did not trouble to keep up a pretense of cordiality. "The attack of the mob," he writes, "set loose the Locomotive-God." The locomotive that had caused his childish terror came unconsciously closer to the surface of his mind. He was so overcome by this combination of fears, horror, shock and intense sorrow that he didn't dare give way to contemplation of his grief and sought every method to distract himself from it by amusements which further heightened the dislike of his wife's friends. Colleagues even sought to have him dismissed from the university after the breakdown which followed his wife's death.

Professor Leonard began as early as possible to try to effect his cure. He sought advice from a psycho-pathologist. He read psychology in the hope of diagnosing his own fears. But his first attempt to banish the Locomotive-God which obsessed him was by turning to humor. It was no go, though he did produce some imitations of "Aesop's Fables" in the manner of Wilhelm Busch, the German cartoonist-rhymster. And the assistance of half a dozen psychiatrists was equally ineffectual.

ALL this time—after the first summer, at least—he managed to continue meeting his classes. Strange to say, this was his only relief from his obsessions, partly, he explains, because it was absolutely necessary to keep his job so that he could support his old parents, who had come to live with him as soon as his wife's death caused his friend Ludwig Lewishohn, the novelist, to wire them for assistance in caring for him.

His second marriage, to Charlotte Charlton, came in 1914. It enabled him to make trips during his wooing and after, but always he was dogged by the terror of being away from the shelter of his home. And though he tried to think his fears unreasonable, there was no way for him to forget them. Being away even a few miles was still acute agony, and the disease soon became even more acute.

It wasn't until 1920 that he set out on the method that eventually gave him most relief. Two psychologists attempted to cure him by working with him for a few hours, once a week, for a year and a half. Their use of clinical methods including the writing down of every recollection achieved, brought him nearer to the revival of his forgotten past. Later he abandoned their methods for what he calls "twilight sleep," a disciplined prolonging of the state which exists between sleeping and waking. And this enabled him to get back pictures and recollections of sounds and smells, almost unbelievably vivid. It was from the material obtained in this way that he was able to write an autobiography containing the most infinitesimal details of his childhood experiences, all checked by consulting other witnesses. Eventually the Locomotive-God became a clear symbol of the dread of death. He thinks his Locomotive-God an image symbolizing the menace of a peculiarly modern oppressive force—the machine and all its raucous connotations.

Will his recent marriage break the bondage of his fears?

The young woman he has married is hopeful. She believes she can dissipate his fears. Nor do the narrow limits to which her husband confines himself confound her. "It will not be prison for me," she says. And the handsome, elderly professor she married remarks his pleasure. "She's not only a poet," he says. "She can cook, too."

VICTORIA LINCOLN
EMILIO AGUINALDO
TONY JENKINS

The ABSENT-MINDED AUTHOR of a 'BEST SELLER'

NEW YORK. VICTORIA ENDICOTT LINCOLN can't remember the time when she hasn't been writing. Her first creation, "A Cat's Outlook," appeared when she was four years old. It came out in an edition illustrated by the author and was privately published on note paper sewn with pink silk; it enjoyed quite a success in the family circle. Her most recent book appeared under more orthodox auspices and reached a somewhat wider audience. It was "February Hill."

"February Hill" has been rashly hailed by some reviewers as a brilliant first novel; the more canny ones pointed out that it was not her first, but her second, the first having been a mystery called "The Swan Island Murders." But the people who really knew were aware that it was, as a matter of fact, the fourth that she has written, although the first two had unpretentiously circulated only among family and friends. The first, conceived and executed when the author was 12, indicated a pronounced flair for depicting glamorous high life and began, "The opening ball of the Paris season was in full swing." The second, elegantly entitled "Cadogan: A Comedy (both ms are Miss Lincoln's) of Culture," opened, "Godfrey Cadogan sat his horses heavily and was kind to his women." It, too, slipped into the limbo of unpublished youthful efforts, but it gives some idea of the kind of man Miss Lincoln admired at the age of 15. Now, she isn't so sure she cares for the type.

She was born in Fall River, Massachusetts, in 1904, and went to school there, first to a private school that she hated, later to a public school that she loved, where she "learned all about politics," and got so discouraged about man as a political animal that she still hasn't got over it. During this time the practice of literature occupied most of her attention. She read the St. Nicholas League contributions every month, and religiously wrote her own, which she never submitted. Also she edited two high school publications simultaneously in which she published a disproportionate amount of her own verse and prose. All this time she knew she was a great poet. This feeling was neither an opinion nor a hope—it was absolute knowledge. She never mentioned the matter to anyone, but privately felt very satisfied over it.

She finished her formal education at Radcliffe, and entertains a great respect for Harvard's sister college because it made her humble about her own opinions and tolerant of other people's. Shortly after being graduated she married Isaac Watkins, a young Harvard instructor. It is rumored that, when she learned he was to be transferred to Washington University, in St. Louis, for two years, she was prostrated with shock and took to her bed, having the conviction of the typical New Englander (one of her forebears was Governor Endecott, first Governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony) that one might as well be out of the world as beyond the western boundary of Massachusetts. But as she became acquainted with St. Louis she realized that her forebodings were groundless, and came to understand and like it. The only thing that she acutely missed in her new surroundings was the white New England winter, and she got around that by putting a great deal of snow in "February Hill," which she had begun writing by then.

She was considerably surprised when, on publication three years later, it became a best seller almost immediately. Her surprise was equalled by her embarrassment when she received respectful protests from people in Fall River who fancied they recognized themselves in her pages. Although she is pleased with the success of the book, she hardly believes she has written the great American novel.

Less than two years ago she and Watkins were divorced. Shortly afterward she married Victor Lowe, a young Ph.D. in the philosophy department at Harvard. They live with her small daughter in a three-story frame house ambiguously situated between a slum and a fashionable residential section of Brookline, Massachusetts. It is a fairly large house, with plenty of rooms, all comfortable and pleasant. Some of the furniture is good, and some isn't, but all of it looks as though it belonged there and liked it. Miss Lincoln has never had a study of her own, but writes in the library, at an enormous early-Victorian walnut desk large enough to live in.

Making a good home (as distinguished from housekeeping) and living in it interest her almost as much as writing, but her success in this direction is somewhat impeded by her absent-mindedness. When she is writing hard she is as likely to put the mirror in the waste basket and empty the ash tray on the bureau as vice versa. Her favorite books are always turning up under the bed or the stove or in the bathroom clothes hamper (she reads in the tub).

A census of the books found most often in the oddest places indicates that Shakespeare, Dante and the King James Bible are her favorite readings; they are followed closely by Proust, D. H. Lawrence and Joyce. She has an omnivorous tendency to chew inedible objects like rubber bands, pencils and string, and has a terrible time, too, getting things accomplished, always putting them off until the last possible minute. All this disorganization distresses her very much, because she loves order.

ALTHOUGH looking very smart in a suit, when interviewed, she is capable, if preoccupied with something other than the immediate problem of dressing, of appearing in a distracted looking congeries of garments bearing no relation to one another—and this in spite of the fact that she earnestly believes that every person has a duty to look as smart as possible. On the other hand, a too solicitous attitude toward dress annoys her. A man recently approached her at a function to which she was wearing a new evening dress. "And what materials is this exquisite dress made of, Miss Lincoln?" he inquired reverently. "Oh, it's just something I ran up out of an old tie of my husband's," she told him.

The extra-literary accomplishments in which she takes most satisfaction are cooking (but she has to be bullied before she'll wash the dishes) and playing the harmonica, on which she is now mastering a large part of Gilbert and Sullivan. She can "tell fortunes" with cards and plays a brilliant game of piquet, but has no use for bridge. "I know the words to a great many songs, too," she says, "if you like my voice. Some do and some don't." Her eyes, which are dark and unusually large, are also unusually short-sighted, but she regards this peculiarity as a distinct advantage because even an ugly building looks quite beautiful to her, with its edges and details dimmed by a myopic blur.

Miss Lincoln's idea of a thoroughly satisfactory outdoor sport is sitting on a rock watching the sea, or sitting in a rowboat watching the sea. Correspondingly, her favorite indoor sport is "sitting in a room with a few people, just a few at a time, and smoking and laughing at things."

Her fundamental interest is, simply, people. Of her friends, many have nothing in common, but she is intensely interested in all of them, "especially in the things which are none of my business," she admits. "But it's not malice; just insatiable curiosity." Being small, witty and volatile, she would like, if she couldn't be herself, to be a big, calm, blond woman, the kind of whom people would say, "Of course, she isn't brilliant, but I love to be in the room with her. Her beautiful face, and those big, gray eyes!" But she thinks she'd miss too much, at that. She likes being herself.

DESERTING the BOLO for the BALLOT

Emilio Aguinaldo.

MANILA, P. I.

AT 66, General Emilio Aguinaldo Famy has entered the race for the Philippine Islands presidency. The odds do not favor him, but it is not the first time this wiry little Filipino has campaigned against odds, nor the first time he has sought the presidency of his native land. He was, indeed, once hailed by a great part of the people as President of the Philippine Republic, but under circumstances far different from those under which he now hopes to attain the presidency of the Philippine Commonwealth.

He counts on ballots now where he depended on bullets and bolos and guerrilla tactics then. So adept were he and his followers in such warfare that the Philippine insurrection lasted more than two years, six times as long as the Spanish-American War, of which it was a sequel. Before it ended with Aguinaldo's capture by a ruse, the United States had sent 128,000 soldiers to the islands, of whom 4374 lost their lives, and had spent $170,000,000. The former insurrecto swore allegiance to America then, and more than kept his word by constant counsels of peace with the Americans, though never giving up his dream of ultimate Philippine independence. Now he emerges from retirement as a gentleman farmer to seek power again.

Were all other records of Aguinaldo lost, his home at Kawit, a village 15 miles from Manila, would serve to set forth the high points of his career and of his character. The sprawling old mansion, with notes of Spanish in its architecture and ornate interior, is a veritable museum of the man and the history he has made.

The uprising against Spanish rule in 1896—first of three insurrections he led—left its mark in Castilian bullets still imbedded in the walls, one above the bed where his mother slept. That revolt ended when the Governor-General, Primo de Rivera (later dictator of Spain), pledged reforms and payment of several hundred thousand dollars to Aguinaldo and 25 of his men if they would leave the country.

Pictures painted on the windows portray the next episode: his return in 1898 from exile in Hongkong, aboard an American warship, as an honored ally, and the campaign in which 50,000 men gave material aid in conquering the Spaniards. Aguinaldo had understood, whether rightly or not is disputed, that his country would be free when the war ended. Then Washington decided it was America's "manifest destiny" to take up "the white man's burden," and annexation resulted. So began the insurrection. The islands' declaration of independence was drafted in this house, and proclaimed by Aguinaldo to a cheering crowd from his balcony.

In the war that followed, a shell from an American ship splintered a courtyard wall of the house. The scar remains, and above it is mounted a picture of the vessel that did the damage. Conciliation after the lengthy struggle is symbolized by two small cannon, gifts of the American Army and Navy, one of which is inscribed with a tribute of "high regard for General Aguinaldo as a soldier and a citizen."

In the midst of his impressive collection moves a quiet little man in whom it is difficult to see the warrior who defied the Empire of Spain and America's military power. Mixed ancestry is evident at a glance: dark coloring midway between the Malay and the European, with a yellowish tinge which, with the narrow slanted eyes, confirms the legend of a Chinese grandfather. Some accounts of his lineage concern a Spanish General, but they remain legends. His pedigree gives rise to an epigrammatic tribute: "Precocious like a Malay, ambitious like a European, with a memory like a Chinaman."

His career confirms the words. Though a man of little formal education, and none at all in the art of war, he became first a masterly agitator for liberty and then a genius of military strategy. His two-year warfare on American troops, against overwhelming odds, astonished the world. Indeed, his fight for independence had many admirers in America, and it figured prominently in the presidential campaign of 1900.

Aguinaldo was captured only when General Funston dressed Filipinos of the American forces in uniforms of the insurgents, disguised himself and nine of his men as their prisoners and made his way to Aguinaldo's mountain hideout by means of a forged letter.

Aguinaldo's genuine courage won the frenzied devotion of his followers, inspired by such audacious incidents as the "sale" of his own head to the Spaniards for $25,000. The Governor-General posted the reward. Aguinaldo wrote him: "I have heard of your offer and, as I need the money badly, I will deliver the head myself."

Ten days later, a black-robed priest entered the Governor's office. He had Aguinaldo's head, he said, and wanted the reward. Fumbling in his robes as if to produce the evidence, he whipped out a 20-inch bolo, announced that he was Aguinaldo and demanded the $25,000. The perspiring official counted out the gold; Aguinaldo paused to count it over and write a receipt. As he left the room, a bullet clipped off a lock of his hair.

AGUINALDO speaks fluently only his native tongue, Tagalog. His Spanish is meager and, as he once explained in a message to American war veterans, "Neither your guns of yesterday nor your schools of today have succeeded in chiseling the English language into my unresponsive mentality."

He has made only modest success as a farmer since his retirement. Despite a government pension of 12,000 pesos he has been chronically in debt. Aguinaldo long has criticised what he termed the reactionary and corrupt methods of the controlling political clique. Now he has gone into action again, with his admiring Philippine veterans as a nucleus, this time against the power of Manuel Quezon, leading politico, whose election had been almost a foregone conclusion.

The campaign propaganda has begun, and in one of its first bursts, Quezon addressed Aguinaldo in these words: "You headed an uprising which started as a suburban affair, but, by accident, ended as a national cause. In American eyes, you won a glamorous notoriety akin to those of Captain Kidd, Jesse James and Robin Hood." These are fighting words to Philippine patriots of the old school. They offer Candidate Aguinaldo a golden opportunity to revive past glories and refresh his people's memory of his role in their fight for freedom. It is freely predicted that he will make the most of it.

Works 8 Hours a Day—but Won't Be Paid in Money

KANSAS CITY, Missouri. TONY JENKINS is a street cleaner. But he is a man who lives for his art alone. A boiler room is his home, and work, honorable, hard work, is his creed.

"Money? I do not want money; money is evil." And Tony, with his proud, long, swinging sweep, moves the debris lying about the streets near the City Hall.

For four years City Hall workers and owners of stalls in the markets have seen Tony Jenkins begin his daily sweep at 8 o'clock in the morning. Tony is a strong man, a reticent man. He keeps his own counsel.

Persons have tried to give him money for his obliging errands, but with no avail. He will accept no pay. The city has offered Tony wages for a job that he already does well, but Tony will have nothing of money. He hates money with a deep, ill-concealed hate. Tony's deep voice booms a strong philosophy against avarice and love of gold.

His is a massive, muscular frame. He is 44 years old. He says he was born in Poland. But as to when he came to this country, where he has worked, who are his parents, Tony is silent. His history, at least to the friends who know him best, goes back only 10 years. Most of these, they say, were spent in railroad construction work.

The other day Tony's picture was to be taken. A haircut, Tony? No, he said, what is the use? But it is necessary, a haircut and a shave, maybe. Tony finally said yes, and a thick, heavy head of hair was cut down to a bristly length.

How did Tony pay for his haircut? How does he pay for his food, his clothes (a pair of overalls and a Sunday suit), his magazines? Tony doesn't. He works for his art, not for money.

"Have a banana, Tony," a commission man will call any day, and Tony will accept.

"Come and go to lunch with me, Tony," a friend will say, and Tony goes. Or perhaps it will be:

"Take these magazines to read, Tony." Or, "Would you like this book, Tony?" Yes, of course, thank you, Tony would like to read it very much, and thank you very much, friend. That is how Tony lives from day to day.

Recently Tony accompanied a friend to a restaurant. He has many friends, all eager to do something for him. The meal finished, the man reached into his pocket and proffered Tony a coin.

"Here, pay for your meal, Tony." But he refused.

"I do not want money. I cannot accept it." So the friend paid for the meal.

"I can sweep better than any other man in the department," he insists. The long-handled push broom is light in his grasp, backed by two cordons of rippling muscles.

"You must swing smoothly, with rhythm—no jerk, no baby play, no stopping to talk too much. Mind and muscle together, see..." And Tony demonstrates.

IN HIS dungeon-like quarters in the City Hall basement, Tony has no visitors. He visits no one and expects no one. He reads much. He works eight hours a day except Sunday. On Sunday he puts on his Sunday suit, dark and worn, and walks about the City Hall and market square.

"I am looking over my work for Monday," he explains, and touches with a shabby boot toe a discarded crate of food waste and catalogues it for the following workday.

For four years he has not touched coin or currency, and if one asks him about the need of money he will say:

"People don't need money. This world would be better off without it. People are money crazy. That is our trouble. It is not the real thing in life. Work, honorable work, my friend, that is the secret."

Up and down, Third street to Fifth, Delaware to Walnut, Tony Jenkins sweeps. People watch him go by. They wave. He smiles at them and nods.

R. H. FADES.

She Sent Him to Prison—and He Married Her

By a Special Correspondent

MOUNT KISCO, New York

HEY'RE married at last—Dorothy, the mechanic's daughter, Silas Hyatt, the red-haired ex-boss marcher—and everything is lovely after the two years he spent in prison as punishment for their two weeks in a cave. It was Dorothy's testimony that sent him to Sing Sing, for then she was not yet 18 years old—though he was 28—and she told a Westchester County court that she never loved him.

Hyatt drifted into Mount Kisco in the scattered retreat of the "bonus army" from Washington, two years ago. He said he came from the Imperial Valley in California, where his father had owned a cattle ranch; he served overseas in the World War and had been an enlisted man in the Coast Artillery in the Philippines. And now he was looking for a job. He found it with Ed Sands, Mount Kisco garage man, and kept it until he saw Dorothy. He couldn't keep his eyes off her.

"I fell in love with Dorothy the first time I saw her," he insists. And now the people of Mount Kisco are beginning to believe him. But at that time his interest in the boss' daughter cost him his job. That was on July 28, 1933.

On August 3 Arthur Butler saw smoke curling over the trees on his estate near Mount Kisco. Fearful of a forest fire, he hurried to the spot.

A lanky, red-headed man and a pretty brown-eyed girl were cooking their supper at the entrance of a little cave. They saw him coming, gathered their few articles together and fled. Butler called the police. Hours later they found the pair deep in the woods, huddled over a small fire.

"Oh, I don't know why I did it," Dorothy wailed. She sobbed all the way home in the grim prospect of facing her father and mother. "I realized the night I left that it was wrong and my family would worry, but Red wouldn't let me leave."

Red said nothing. He was held in Westchester County Jail until his trial came either up in White Plains some weeks

He said he came from the Imperial Valley in California, where his father had owned a cattle ranch; he served overseas in the World War and had been an enlisted man in the Coast Artillery in the Philippines. And now he was looking for a job. He found it with Ed Sands, Mount Kisco garage man, and kept it until he saw Dorothy. He couldn't keep his eyes off her.

"I fell in love with Dorothy the first time I saw her," he insists. And now the people of Mount Kisco are beginning to believe him. But at that time his interest in the boss' daughter cost him his job. That was on July 28, 1933.

On August 8 Arthur Butler saw smoke curling over the trees on his estate near Mount Kisco. Fearful of a forest fire, he hurried to the spot.

A lanky, red-headed man and a pretty brown-eyed girl were cooking their supper at the entrance of a little cave. They saw him coming, gathered their few articles together and fled. But he called the police. Hours later they found the pair deep in the woods, huddled over a small fire.

"Oh, I don't know why I did it," Dorothy wailed. She sobbed all the way home, in the grim prospect of facing her father and mother. "I realized the night I left that it was wrong and my family would worry, but Red wouldn't let me leave."

Red said nothing. He was held in Westchester County Jail until his trial came up in White Plains some weeks later, on charges preferred by Dorothy's father.

"I didn't love him," Dorothy almost screamed to County Judge John B. Coyle, during the trial. "I refused to marry him. I don't know why I went with him. But I couldn't help myself. He was so funny and so terrible. He slapped me, every night. Once he gave me a black eye. But that didn't matter. I had to do what he wanted me to."

"One night," she related, "we went for a walk. When we got into the woods he showed me a cave. It was only a few miles from my papa's home."

AND that was where Hyatt and the girl set up "house-keeping." They foraged neighboring farms for food, she said, and once she stole back to her home to get some clothing for herself.

When she returned he said something uncomplimentary about her family. She slapped him and he gave her a black eye.

Hyatt sat absolutely still while she told her side of the story. Then he began his story in a slow drawl.

The day before the girl "joined" him in the cave, he testified, "I told Dorothy it was up to her to end our affair. 'It's now or never,' I told her. 'Your father doesn't like me and we've either got to get married or part.'"

He said that Dorothy begged to remain with him until her birthday, when she would be 18 years old and could do as she pleased. More than once, he declared, she had thrown her arms about him and begged him never to leave her. They were caught the day before her birthday.

"I never threatened her," he insisted. "All she had to do was to tell me to leave, but she never did. Always I loved her. Always I have wanted to marry her since I first laid eyes on her."

"Did she consent to marry you?"

"Yes," Dorothy jumped up. "It's a lie!" she shouted. "It's a lie!"

Her mother pulled her down with an audible whisper, "Quit showing off."

Sentenced to a term of two to four years in Sing Sing, Hyatt said: "I guess it's for the best. I couldn't stay away from her if I was free."

It seems he was telling the truth. Released on parole last February, on the distinct warning that he was not to go near Dorothy, he hurried right back to her. Her mother told the police about it and he was packed off to prison for the remainder of his term.

That term was up in June—and back he came to Dorothy. Several days ago the pair appeared at New Castle, New York, unaccompanied, and asked for a marriage license. Then they went to a Justice of the Peace. He said he couldn't perform the ceremony because Dorothy was not yet 21 and lacked her mother's consent. Next they tried a Mount Kisco preacher. He told them he'd need three days' notice. After that they tried another Mount Kisco preacher. And he married them.

"Even if I'd known their story I'd have married them," he says. "If every girl who was abducted by a man when she was only 17 and who sent a man to prison, married him after he came out, there wouldn't be much kick about it, would there?"

And where are the couple living? With the bride's parents.

The Child Orchestra With the 'Professional Touch'

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

HERE is a story Tsarina, the Indian soprano, tells of a famous prima donna who happened to be in bad voice at a concert. Guiltily she hastened at breakfast in the hotel next day, to open the paper and see whether she had been generously or candidly dealt with by a noted music critic. She hoped that, if he was kind enough not to point out certain shortcomings, no one else would discern them. Her worst fears were realized. She glanced up, to see the critic himself passing her table.

"Why," she said to him, pointing at the paper, "I can't believe my eyes."

"Madame," he replied, "I couldn't believe my ears!"

And one is inclined to believe neither eyes nor ears—for altogether different reason—when he hears very grown-up music from an orchestra taking musical New York by storm these days, which claims the youngest violinist-conductor in the world and has no musician over six years old.

The secret of the Children's Orchestra is not extraordinary ability, according to Director Karl Moldren, who has been specializing in the musical training of very young children for 10 years; it is that even average children can learn to play much better than they can talk.

"At first a child will respond to musical training in a mechanical way," he explains. "Then, when it is able to grasp musical thought, it will be fully equipped to express itself on the chosen instrument. One reason for our success with tots is that at their age they absorb without question everything they are told."

Moldren relies a great deal on the co-operation of the child's mother. He teaches her the theoretical part of the playing so that she can supervise practice.

The violinist-conductor is little Monte Collins, two years and nine months old, who began his musical career when he was 14 months old. He stands on his podium with the poise of a veteran, while the members of the orchestra, dressed in black and white, wait for the rap of his baton. At the signal they begin—and the music flows with smoothness and clarity. Laying aside his baton, Monte renders a solo on his one-thirty-second-size violin, playing with relaxed tone, good position and intonation.

So skeptical is the audience, even after it has sat through two hours of music, that at the conclusion of the concert more than one person has approached the musicians to touch their cheeks, examine their hands and listen to them talk, to see if they aren't really adult midgets.

At last, convinced that these are indeed children, they turn away satisfied, but still a little puzzled.

CHARLES E. GALAGHER, today's selection from among the Municipal Opera players who will appear in this space during the Forest Park season, was born in Newport, Kentucky. After graduation from the Miami Medical University at Cincinnati, he embarked on a musical career instead of practicing medicine. A basso, Mr. Gallagher has sung in grand opera as well as in many productions such as "The Fortune Teller," "Robin Hood" and "Pinafore." For the last 10 years he has been soloist at Grace Episcopal Church in New York. He first appeared in the Municipal Opera in 1919, and returned in 1921 and 1928.

Accompanying Mr. Gallagher are three sets of costumes he wears in Municipal Opera shows. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Each costume correctly. The three types of costumes shown here are worn by this actor in the following roles: 1—Ali Ben

MAKING THE SPARKS FLY
THE CHARACTERS

TOM TURTLE—Who is very excited.

HARRY HOARDER—A squirrel, who keeps the local store.

BILL BUNNY—A kind little rabbit.

JERRY—A gay old gander.

O. HUM—A lazy opossum.

TWO VERY ODD LITTLE PEOPLE—Who are natives of a distant planet. They landed in Hickory Hollow when their queer little flying machine ran out of gas.

Even the oldest inhabitants can't recall ever having seen folks who looked as funny or who did such peculiar things as these odd little strangers who dropped out of the sky. Everyone in Hickory Hollow is talking about them. Whenever anyone sees them doing something new, he hurries off to find someone to tell about it. Today Tom Turtle has a good yarn about those odd people and we see him dashing up to a group of natives in front of Hoarder's store as hear this one.

THE PLAY BEGINS

TOM TURTLE—

Puff! Puff!

(Tom takes off his hat and

wipes his perspiring head, while everyone gathers around him.) I just saw those funny little people make Terrible Tabby prisoner. JERRY—Nonsense. Terrible Tabby would have clawed them to pieces.

TOM TURTLE—Oh, yeah? Well, I saw that little man hold up a blanket and Tabby rushed at it and when his teeth and claws struck this blanket they stuck. They must have had a powerful glue on it. Then they loaded him onto a little wagon and just before they took him away the little woman pulled down Tabby's sweater and showed the little man how she could make sparks jump out of Tabby's back. (Everyone fears Terrible Tabby and they are so surprised to hear that he could be made prisoner so easily, that for a moment no one can speak. At last Harry Hoarder finds his voice.)

HARRY HOARDER—Imagine catching a wild cat, just to make sparks jump out of his back. BILL BUNNY—Maybe they were just petting him.

JERRY—Well, I for one could think of a better pet. O. HUM—I don't care whether they want him for a pet or in order to see the sparks jump, just so they keep him. Gosh, now a person can take a nap without worrying about that crazy cat. (Meanwhile Terrible Tabby is being petted by four hands tied on a wheel, turned by the little woman, and the sparks from Tabby's back travel over wires to a machine and then to other wires and off into space. The little people are telegraphing someone. Who can it be?)

Baseball . . . By NED BRANT

THE CUTOFF PLAY

With runner on first, batsman hits to right field. He starts for second, assuming that right fielder will throw to third to catch the baserunner ahead of him. First baseman runs over, intercepts throw from right fielder to third baseman, and tosses to second baseman, who tags out runner going from first to second.

JANE ARDEN

by Monte Barrett and Russell E. Ross

IN SPITE OF HERE DESPERATE EFFORTS TO SAVE THEM, THE PLANS ENTRUSTED TO JANE BY THE MURDERED MAN WERE SEIZED BY HIS ENEMIES—

THIS IS MAJOR SHARP, JANE—HE'S HEAD OF THE SECRET SERVICE IN THIS DISTRICT.

I'VE COME TO SEE IF YOU KNOW A MAN NAMED SIMS—

SIMS? HE'S ONE OF OUR MEN—WE'VE BEEN EXPECTING HIM FOR WEEKS—

HE WAS MURDERED—HE GAVE ME SOME PAPERS TO KEEP FOR HIM, JUST BEFORE HE DIED.

POOR SIMS—BUT HIS BRAVE DEATH WILL SAVE THOUSANDS OF LIVES—

IT WILL STOP ANOTHER WORLD WAR—GIVE ME THE PAPERS!

JANE LEARNS WHAT THE PLANS MEAN—

THOSE PAPERS WOULD STOP A WAR—AND I'VE LOST THEM—A MAN NAMED SPARK TOOK THEM—

A TAXI DRIVER TRIED TO STOP HIM BUT HE GOT AWAY—I SAW THEY WERE NAVAL PLANS, SO I CAME TO YOU—

WE MUST FIND HIM—THOSE WERE THE SECRET PLANS OF CARMANIA'S SUPER CRUISER—THE FASTEST, MOST POWERFUL SHIP EVER BUILT—

TWENTY OF THEM COULD SINK ANY NAVY AFLOAT—

CARMANIA'S AMBITION TO CONQUER THE WORLD IS NO SECRET—

THE ONLY WAY TO STOP HER IS TO MAKE THE PLANS FOR THIS SUPER CRUISER KNOWN TO THE WORLD—THAT'S WHY SIMS FACED DEATH TO GET THEM—

THEY SURROUNDED HIS HOTEL IN BRUSSELS—

BUT HE ESCAPED ACROSS THE ROOFS—

NOW I UNDERSTAND IT ALL—HE KNEW HE WAS TRAPPED ON THAT TRAIN—THAT'S WHY HE PASSED THE PLANS ALONG TO ME—

EXACTLY—BUT THE MAN WHO HAS THOSE PLANS MUST NOT ESCAPE.

I'LL HAVE DETECTIVES WATCH EVERY TRAIN AND SHIP LEAVING THE CITY!

I'LL HELP—I'D RECOGNIZE THAT MAN ANYWHERE!

WHILE THEIR QUARRY IS IN THE ONE PLACE THEY'LL NEVER THINK TO LOOK—JAIL!

IT WAS EASY TO DO—I PRETENDED TO BE DRUNK—AND RAISED A BIG DISTURBANCE!

THIS IS ONE PLACE THEY'LL NEVER THINK OF SEARCHING!

WHAT A PRETTY PARK—FLOWERS EVERYWHERE—I WISH I HAD SOME—

DO NOT PICK THESE, EITHER!

SHUCKS, THEY'VE GOT MORE THAN THEY NEED—THEY'LL NEVER MISS ONE LITTLE BOUQUET—

MY LAND! A POLICEMAN! HEADED STRAIGHT THIS WAY, TOO—IF HE CATCHES ME—

H'M—THIS'LL FOOL HIM—HE WON'T CATCH ME!

LAW, HE DOESN'T SUSPECT A THING—

LAND SAKES!

JUNGLE JIM BY ALEX RAYMOND

PATRICIA ROMNEY, A WHITE WOMAN AND HER INFANT, CAPTIVES OF A BAND OF RIVER PIRATES WHO HAD STOLEN JIM'S CREW AND SUPPLIES, BEGGED JIM FOR HELP—JIM AND JOAN BEAT BACK ALONG THE RIVER TIL THEY CAME TO MRS. ROMNEY'S CAMP—THERE THEY FIND ROMNEY AND HIS TWO ASSISTANTS—MURDERED!

FLASH GO

THIS IS GRUM, KEEPER OF AZURA'S PARALYZING-GAS GLOBES, KING FLASH

JUNGLE JIM BY ALEX RAYMOND

PATRICIA ROMNEY, A WHITE WOMAN AND HER INFANT, CAPTIVES OF A BAND OF RIVER PIRATES WHO HAD STOLEN JIM'S CREW AND SUPPLIES, BEGGED JIM FOR HELP--JIM AND JOAN BEAT BACK ALONG THE RIVER 'TIL THEY CAME TO MRS. ROMNEY'S CAMP--THERE THEY FIND ROMNEY AND HIS TWO ASSISTANTS--MURDERED--

HIS NAME WAS CRAIG ROMNEY AND HER NAME IS PATRICIA ROMNEY--THEY MUST HAVE BEEN HUSBAND AND WIFE--WHAT WERE THE NAMES OF HIS ASSISTANTS?

I DON'T KNOW--HE WAS A FAMOUS ENGLISH EXPLORER--I'M CONVINCED THEY WERE ALL KILLED BY NATIVES--THE SAME MEN WHO CAPTURED MRS. ROMNEY--

WELL, WE GAVE THEM A DECENT BURIAL, ANYHOW--LET'S HELP OURSELVES TO SOME SUPPLIES AND AMMUNITION AND HIT THE TRAIL--

JIM! LISTEN TO THIS--"I AM CERTAIN THAT THE SUCCESS OR FAILURE OF THIS EXPEDITION DEPENDS ON THE ACTIONS OF THE ONLY MAN ON EARTH WHOM I FEAR--MY OWN BROTHER!"--THE SENTENCE ENDS IN A SCRAWL--

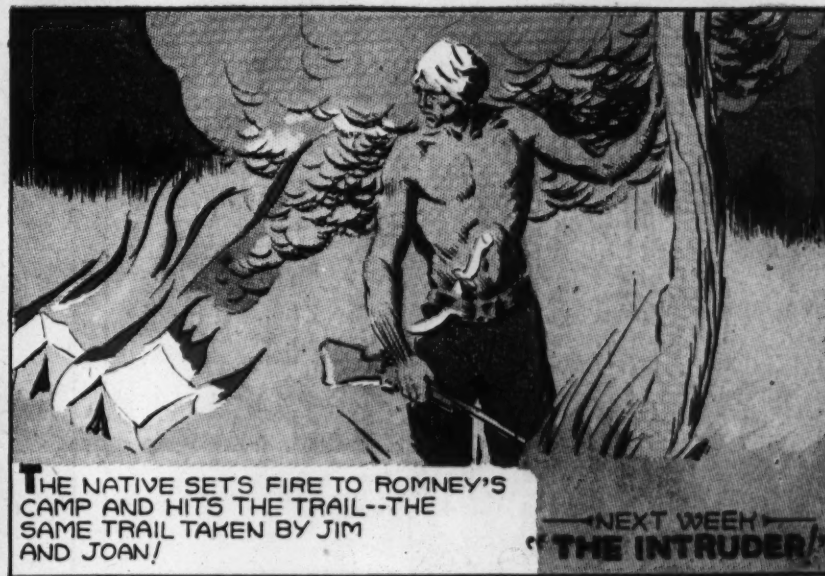

IT COULDN'T HAVE BEEN HIS BROTHER WHO KILLED ROMNEY--YOU SAID HE HAD BEEN MURDERED BY NATIVES!

I WONDER--THAT DIARY WILL PROBABLY GIVE US A CLUE--TAKE IT WITH US--LET'S GO!

JUNGLE JIM AND JOAN PETERS SET OUT TO RESCUE MRS. ROMNEY, UNAWARE THAT A PAIR OF CRUEL, SHARP EYES ARE WATCHING THEIR EVERY MOVE!--

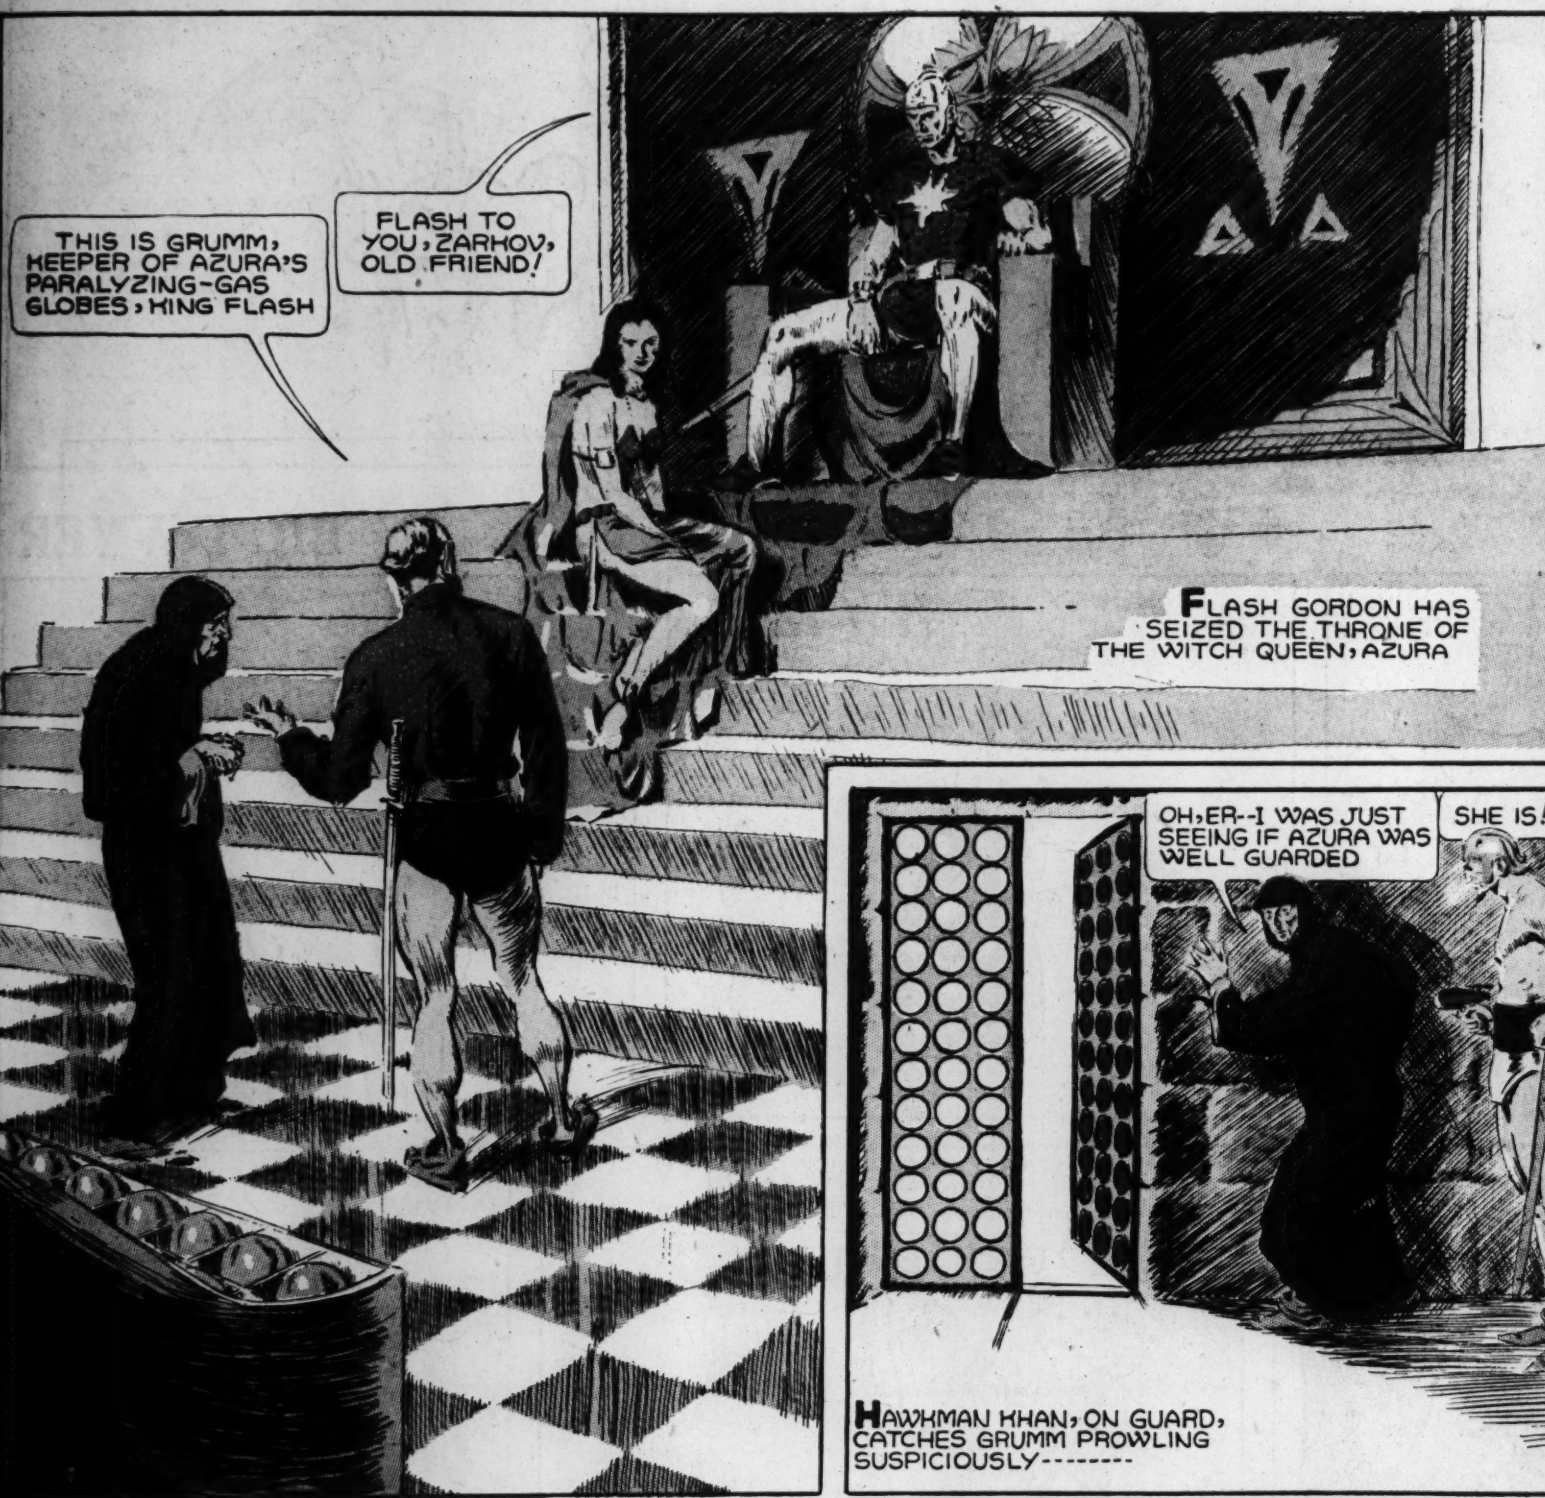

THE NATIVE SETS FIRE TO ROMNEY'S CAMP AND HITS THE TRAIL--THE SAME TRAIL TAKEN BY JIM AND JOAN!

NEXT WEEK "THE INTRUDER"

FLASH GORDON

By ALEXANDER RAYMOND

THIS IS GRUMM, KEEPER OF AZURA'S PARALYZING-GAS GLOBES, KING FLASH

FLASH TO YOU, ZARHOV, OLD FRIEND!

FLASH GORDON HAS SEIZED THE THRONE OF THE WITCH QUEEN, AZURA

GENERAL TAHL, THE ENEMY GOT SOME OF THE GAS GLOBES, BUT I SMUGGLED OUT SOME OF THE GAS MASKS!

YOU'LL BE REWARDED, GRUMM--FIND AZURA AND WE'LL ATTACK!

MEAN-TIME, TAHL, AZURA'S GENERAL, PLOTS TO PUT HER BACK IN POWER

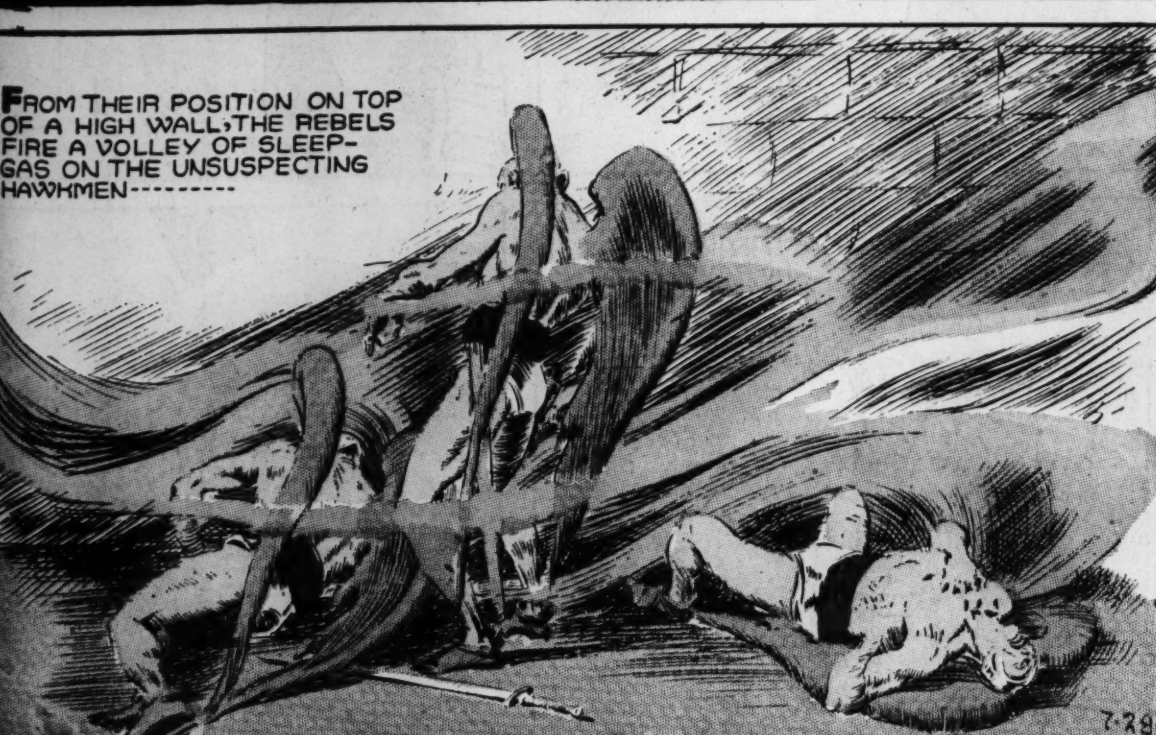

OH, ER--I WAS JUST SEEING IF AZURA WAS WELL GUARDED

SHE IS! NOW GET OUT!

HAWKMAN KHAN, ON GUARD, CATCHES GRUMM PROWLING SUSPICIOUSLY--

LATE THAT NIGHT THE MASKED REBELS ARE LED BY GRUMM TO AZURA'S QUARTERS--

ASLEEP OR DRUGGED! CARRY THE QUEEN TO SAFETY--THEN ON TO KILL FLASH GORDON!

NOW SHE HAS TIME FOR PLAY-ON WASHDAY

WHY SUE SHOULD HAVE WORRIED

It's no "circus" to scrub clothes—why do it?

TAKE IT EASY NEXT WASHDAY. Use Rinso. Its lively suds soak out dirt without scrubbing or boiling. White clothes come as white as snow. Colors come bright and fresh as new. No washboard scrubbing is necessary. You may merely have to give stubborn edges a little hand rubbing. This "no-scrub" way saves the clothes—saves money—saves YOU!

Wonderful in washers
Rinso gives rich, lasting suds—even in hardest water. Grand for dishes and all cleaning. Easy on the hands. Recommended by the makers of 34 famous washers. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Try it!

Rinso
The Granulated Soap

THE BIGGEST-SELLING PACKAGE SOAP IN AMERICA

SOAKING CLEAN? YOU MEAN YOU DON'T SCRUB THE CLOTHES—YOU DON'T BOIL THEM?

WHY WASTE ALL THAT ENERGY WHEN RINSO ALONE GETS CLOTHES SO MUCH WHITER? SCRUBBING RUINS THE CLOTHES—RINSO SAVES THEM. LOOK, HERE COME THE CLOWNS!

NEED ANY HELP, DEAR?

NO THANKS! RINSO MAKES DISHWASHING EASY

MY DEAR, WHAT A THING TO SAY ABOUT POOR SUE!
* SHE HAS TO HOLD UP THE WALL AT PARTIES *

I MEAN SHE'S A WALLFLOWER, MOTHER. MEN WON'T ASK HER TO DANCE BECAUSE... OH, I WISH I COULD WARN HER ABOUT "B.O."

A WEEK LATER

I LOVE TENNIS EVEN ON A BROILING DAY LIKE THIS. BUT I'LL HAVE TO HOP STRAIGHT IN THE TUB WHEN I GET HOME

SUE, IF YOU WANT THE GRANDEST, MOST REFRESHING BATH, STOP IN THE STORE AND GET SOME LIFEBOUY

I ALWAYS USE IT. ONE REASON I DO IS SO I WON'T HAVE TO WORRY ABOUT "B.O."

WORRY ABOUT "B.O."? MY DEAR, I NEVER EVEN THINK OF IT

I KNOW YOU DON'T, SUE. THAT'S JUST THE TROUBLE. FORGIVE MY PLAIN SPEAKING BUT...

SHE WON'T HAVE TO GIVE ME A HINT TWICE. I'LL ALWAYS USE LIFEBOUY. WHAT WONDERFUL LATHER! HOW DEEPLY IT CLEANS!

"B.O." GONE — wallflower days over!

SUE, YOU NEVER WANT A PARTY TO BREAK UP

WHY SHOULD SHE — WITH MEN FIGHTING TO DANCE WITH HER

HOW DO YOU KEEP FRESH AS A DAISY THESE HOT DAYS? WHAT MAKES YOUR SKIN SO SMOOTH?

SAME ANSWER TO BOTH QUESTIONS — LIFEBOUY

Be wise! Adopt Lifebuoy for bath and complexion. Its rich, deep-cleansing lather washes away pore-clogging impurities, brings new radiance. Yet "patch" tests on the skins of hundreds of women show it is over 20% milder than many so-called "beauty soaps."

Gracious, it's hot!
How one perspires! How easy for "B.O." (body odor) to offend. Bathe often with Lifebuoy. It purifies pores, stops "B.O." Lathers abundantly in hardest water. Its own clean, pleasant scent vanishes as you rinse.
Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

HEALTH SOAP

Men! Here's the low-down on clean, close, easy shaves

120 TO 150 SHAVES IN THE BIG RED TUBE

YOU'D THINK IT WAS SEAWEEED IF YOU HAD TO SHAVE MY TOUGH BEARD

TRY LIFEBOUY SHAVING CREAM, JOE. IT'LL GET THAT STUBBLE OFF LIKE A BREEZE

BUT I'VE GOT TENDER SKIN, TOO

LIFEBOUY'S EXTRA-MOIST LATHER IS JUST MADE FOR THAT COMBINATION. TRY IT

RIGHTO! I'LL TRY IT TONIGHT

AT LAST! A CLEAN SHAVE THAT DOESN'T HURT MY TENDER FACE. ME FOR LIFEBOUY!
